EX-KING'S COUP MAY LIGHT NEW FIRES OF WAR

3 Nations Ready to Attack Hungary.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Oct. 22.—Menace of war overshadows all south and central Europe tonight as a result of former Emperor Charles' new attempt to seize the throne of Hungary. The Little Entente — Czecho - Slovakia, Roumania, and Jugo-Slavia — is reported to be mobilizing to resist the Hapsburg attempt to capture Budapest as a first step toward reconstituting the old Austro-Hungarian empire.

EX-EMPEROR CHARLES.
[U. & U. (C.) Photo.]

The British embassy at Vienna declares Great Britain will disapprove of Charles' return. The ambassadors of the Little Entente of Budapest unanimouslsy announced there will be reprisals by their countries and so notified the Hungarian government.

Horthy's Premier Aids Royalists.

The return of former Emperor Charles to Hungary has brought Admiral Horthy's cabinet tumbling about his ears. Count Bethmlem, the prime minister, resigned late last night, according to information from Budapest, and left immediately for Raab, where he expects to join the former emperor.

This was the most startling political development of the day in Budapest, because Count Bethmlem's cabinet had declared, through an official Hungarian news agency, that Charles must leave Hungary at once.

Charles is surrounded by the strongest figures in Hungarian political life tonight, since Count Apponyi, Gustave Gratz, Stephan Rakovsky, and Count Andrassy all have been summoned to Raab, where a new cabinet has been formed.

In Charles' suite also is Stephan Frederick, the premier of Hungary in the first government after the break-up of bolshevism in the fall of 1919. It is reported that he is to have a portfolio in the new government.

Budapest Awaits Emperor.

Martial law was declared Thursday in Budapest because of incendiary fires, and it was still in force today. A dispatch from Budapest this afternoon said the entry of Charles at the head of 12,000 troops was hourly expected.

A later report said trains carrying the royalist troops had been halted near Raab because the tracks had been torn up by Republican soldiers. The Raab garrison has joined Charles' standard.

Greeted as Emperor.

The first incident in a series of dramatic moves which may precipitate at least a part of Europe into another war was the arrival of the former emperor in an airplane at Odenburg, principal city in Burgenland, a strip of land for which Austria and Hungary have been waging guerrilla warfare.

THE TRIBUNE's Vienna correspondent telegraphed that w[illegible] former king and ex-Empress Zi[illegible] from their plane at Odenbur[illegible] egedus assembled the troops and [illegible] them the king had returned. He demanded fidelity to the ruler. The announcement was greeted with cries of "Long live the king!" As the cheers died down the soldiers crowded about Charles, addressing him as "emperor."

It is stated that Charles has 6,000 infantry and 3,000 mounted troops under his command already and that by the time he reached Raab his force numbered at least 15,000. It is not believed that the Hungarian government can oppose this force successfully and fears are expressed that a big percentage of the regular army will desert to the former emperor's colors.

Code messages burdened the telegraph lines between Prague, Bucharest, Belgrade, Rome and Paris all day long, following the announcement of Charles' coup, while in Paris diplomatic representatives of the powers interested dashed back and forth.

The next move, it is expected, will

Peace? War? Decision Lies in Far East

Mr. Kinsley of The Tribune staff has been in the orient with Gen. Leonard Wood during the summer, having exceptional opportunity there to study far eastern affairs and the Japanese situation. The Tribune has brought him home particularly to have his services at the Washington conference on disarmament next month. This is first of a series of articles to be printed in advance of the conference.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Will the Washington conference lead to enduring peace in the world or will it lift the curtain upon a new theater of war?

Must the United States and Japan fight over the "problems of the Pacific"?

What is the basic problem that must be solved before relief in armaments can come to the nations?

In the far east, as in America, on ships and trains and in hotels, in the overseas clubs and around pretty tea tables everywhere these are now the topics of earnest discussion. In the Pacific basin, from the Sulu sea to the Arctic circle, the deliberations at Washington next month will be followed with the keenest interest.

Pessimism Pervades Orient.

There is a general tendency in the orient toward pessimism in the matter of avoiding armed conflict. Out there every one is either pro-China or pro-Japan and one finds a good deal of hate in the air. There is a feeling that the leaders of the nations, the diplomatic spokesmen, are not to be trusted to display the courage and wisdom that will lead to an amicable settlement of difficulties. One goes out there thinking that war is impossible and one returns thinking it not at all improbable.

Crossing the Saskatchewan prairie in a Pullman smoking room last week, I heard a discussion of this subject by a group of young ex-service men. A buyer of laces and jades, just returning from China, had been drawing a dreary picture of the closing door in China and had expressed the opinion that something must be done quickly and forcefully or the Japanese would have too great a handicap in the race for far eastern trade.

"Laces and Jades—Why Not?"

"Laces and jades!" exclaimed a Detroit boy who had gone over the top in France. He spoke half meditatively, half indignantly.

"Why not?" asked a young Canadian who was on his way to an American hospital to have his stiff leg re-broken and reset—the result of an injury met when he was shot down from his fighting plane over Amiens.

"If not laces and jades, make it oil or wheat or iron," he continued.

"Where were you?" the third member of the group, a New Zealander, was asked.

"In Mesopotamia," he replied, holding up a hand from which a finger was missing.

"Got this by grabbing hold of a bayonet a fellow was pushing at me. Got me in the side a little. Shot the bloody devil down."

"What were you down there for?"

"Railroads, I guess."

Not the Yank View of It.

"That's it," said the American. "Unless the Washington conference settles this commercial scramble on friendly, definite lines that will be observed by all the nations, we will all have to go out again into some muddy trench or with a flying column, for the sake of some merchant's laces or jades or wheat or coal or iron or railroads."

"Pretty hard time getting us out of

COP "BULLDOGS" RUNAWAY AUTO SAVES SHOPPERS

Traffic Policeman Christopher Weiland, at State and Washington streets, became a hero in the eyes of hundreds yesterday when he leaped on the running board of a runaway automobile, jammed on the emergency brake, and swung the machine into a street car in time to avoid running down a score of women shoppers.

Mrs. Francis Ryan, 5647 Kenmore avenue, was in the car, with her son, Frank Ryan, driving. At the busy crossing the engine died and Frank got out to crank it, but left the gears in mesh.

When the engine started the car leaped forward, knocked Ryan down, and plunged toward a group of pedestrians. Then Officer Weiland made his spectacular leap and prevented a serious accident.

SENATE VOTES 50% TOP SURTAX

Progressives Win with a Count of 54-13.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Oct. 22.—[Special.]—After rejecting proposals to retain the present 65 per cent maximum surtax rate and to reduce the maximum to 32 per cent, the senate today approved a maximum of 50 per cent, provided under the compromise reached between Republican groups.

The new surtax maximum, if made a law, would be effective on incomes obtained during the calendar year of 1922, taxes on which would be payable in 1923.

There were three roll calls on the question of surtax rates. The 50 per cent maximum was approved by a vote of 54 to 13.

That vote carried with it the entire schedule of surtax rates as framed by the group of progressive Republican senators led by Senators McCormick of Illinois, Lenroot of Wisconsin, and Capper of Kansas.

Decreases Are Provided.

Decreases in surtax rates are provided all along the line. The lowest rate is 1 per cent of the amount by which the net income exceeds $6,000 and does not exceed $10,000. Under the present law, the 1 per cent rate applies on incomes between $5,000 and $6,000. The 50 per cent rate applies on the portion of income above $200,000.

The Democrats joined with Republicans in voting for the 50 per cent maximum.

The thirteen Republicans who voted against the 50 per cent maximum were Senator Calder of New York, Dillingham of Vermont, Edge and Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, Hale and Fernald of Maine, Moses and Keyes of New Hampshire, McLean of Connecticut, Smoot of Utah, Spencer of Missouri, Harrold of Oklahoma, and Cameron of Arizona.

The first proposal voted on was an amendment by Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, Democrat, for acceptance of the reduced surtax rates on incomes of less than $100,000, but the retention of present rates on incomes in excess of $100,000, these rates ranging up to 65 per cent on the amount in excess of $1,000,000.

Hitchcock Amendment Fails.

The Hitchcock amendment was rejected by a vote of 23 to 43. It failed to receive the support of all the Democrats. Those who voted for it included five Republicans, Senators Borah of Idaho, Johnson of California, Kenyon of Iowa, La Follette of Wisconsin, and Norbeck of South Dakota.

After the Hitchcock amendment was rejected, Senator Calder of New York offered an amendment for acceptance of the reduced surtax rates as proposed in the 50 per cent compromise schedule up to the rate of 32 per cent on incomes above $68,000. The Calder amendment eliminated all the higher surtax rates above 32 per cent.

This amendment was beaten by a vote of 15 to 51.

All of the fifteen senators voting in the affirmative were Republicans.

Considers Normal Tax Rates.

After the question of surtax rates was disposed of, the senate began consideration of normal tax rates on individual incomes. Senator Garry, Rhode Island, Democrat, spoke on his amendment for reduction, a normal tax of 2 per cent on amounts up to $5,000, 4 per cent on the portion between $5,000 and $10,000, 6 per cent on the portion between $10,000 and $15,000, and 8 per cent on amounts over $15,000.

This would be a substitute for the present normal tax of 4 per cent on the portion of an income below $4,000 and 8 per cent on that above $4,000, which are not changed under the pending bill. The amendment was under consideration when adjournment was taken. It was expected to meet with defeat Monday.

FIRST LOSS TO WESTERNERS BY ONE OF "BIG 3"

Midway Lads Hang Up Great Record.

PRAISED BY KECK

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 22.—Capt. Stanton Keck of the Princeton football team paid verbal congratulations to the machinelike Chicago aggregation after the game today. Keck said, "The best team won, but we fought hard."

Capt. Charles McGuire of Chicago was brief in his comment: "Glad to have played Princeton as a representative of the east."

Coach A. A. Stagg of Chicago, who was heaped with plaudits for his team's great winning effort, said, "Princeton played a courageous game. Even when things were going badly, they kept their heads. Otherwise, the score would have been larger."

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 22.—[Special.]—Chicago university's football team today took Princeton by surprise and into camp, 9 to 0, at Palmer memorial stadium and set a record. It was the first time in history that any one of the big three—Princeton, Harvard, and Yale—has been beaten on its own grounds by a western eleven.

Fifteen thousand fans, many of them Maroon followers, saw western football triumph over the eastern game in all departments with the exception of punting. The offensive and defensive play of the visitors was a revelation to the easterners.

Score on Kick and Touchdown.

Chicago's scores were the result of a drop kick and a touchdown. In the second quarter the Maroons rushed the oval from their own territory into the Tigers' portion of the field. After Bobbie Cole had cut loose off the Princeton end the Tigers were penalized 15 yards for rough play after the Maroon had been tackled.

This penalty placed the oval on the Tigers' ten yard line. The Princeton defense stiffened and Chicago was able to make only three yards in three attempts. Milton Romney then stepped back and booted the oval between the posts from the fifteen yard line. It was a beautiful kick, which sailed high over the bar.

Tigers Start Kicking Game.

The Maroons nursed this margin. In the third quarter Princeton had advantage of the wind and played a kicking game which kept Chicago on the defense to keep its goal line uncrossed. As soon as conditions were reversed in the final quarter Chicago, with the help of the wind on exchange of kicks, took the ball to the Tigers' 17 yard line.

Again the Princeton defense stiffened and on two plays Chicago made only 3 yards. Quarter Back Romney then called for a spread formation. With the ends going out wide and half backs playing in behind their tackles, the ball was passed to Bobbie Cole. The little half back faked a run and then tossed the oval to Romney, who scampered over the goal line for the touchdown. McGuire missed the goal.

Keck Punished Severely.

Capt. Stanton Keck, all-American tackle, who is considered one of the greatest tackles who ever played in the east, was a total stranger to the Maroon team. His defensive prowess did not perturb them a bit. As soon as Chicago obtained possession of the ball Raynor Timme, who played a stellar game at full back during the time he was in the lineup, was sent right over the Tiger captain. At times he would slip inside of Keck. At other times he would slide just outside.

To make matters more embarrassing for the captain, little Bobbie Cole would slide off Keck on cross drives for anywhere from three to fifteen yards.

Thomas in Smashing Drive.

Keck was not the only player treated to such a hammering. On one occasion, Thomas, who replaced Timme at full back, went through center with so much drive that he met Wittmer, the Princeton center in a headon collision. The impact did not even slow up the Maroon but it left the Tiger passer lying on the ground and time was called to get him back into shape.

Chicago played one of the most aggressive and at times the most sav-

Plot Against Bank Teller; Two Seized

Two alleged Black Handers were arrested last night after they had attempted to extort $1,000 from Henry Finstad, 3405 Lyndale avenue, teller in the State Bank of Chicago.

Finstad yesterday received a letter threatening his life if he failed to deposit $1,000 in a shoe box under the viaduct at 63d and State streets. Bank officials notified the Pinkerton detective agency and Chief of Detectives Hughes.

Place Decoy Box on Spot.

A squad of detectives followed Finstad with a dummy box to the viaduct last night. The bank teller, according to the Black Handers' directions, placed the box on the designated spot and walked rapidly away.

Two men, lurking nearby, hurried up to the box, opened it, and found some crumpled newspapers. Then the detectives captured them. One of them was James Williams, 22, 4622 Grand boulevard, now out on $25,000 bonds for the Ward Baking company robbery. He had two revolvers with him, one wrapped in a newspaper.

The other man was George Kern, 28, 503 West 42d street, who was sentenced to the county jail on Dec. 16, 1920, for larceny.

Deny They Have Confederates.

Taken to the detective bureau for questioning by Chief Hughes and H. S. Mosher, Pinkerton superintendent, the two men sullenly denied that they had confederates.

Williams, under the name of Wheatley, according to the records, was sent in 1915 to a Dallas, Tex., jail for robbery. He escaped and was recaptured. He has a long police record.

"I met Williams in the county jail," said Kern. "Then tonight I saw him out on 63d street; it was just by chance."

Kern, the police say, was the man who ran forward and snatched up the box. Williams, heavily armed, intended to put up a battle for his liberty if the bank teller brought detectives with him, but was surprised, according to Chief Hughes. The Ward Baking company robbery, in which Williams is implicated, resulted in the dismissal of Capt. John J. Ryan of the Englewood station for "incompetency."

Demand Money in Bills.

In part the "black hand" letter read:

"You are elected by the black hand [5] of the underworld to take $1,000 in $10 and $20 bills and deliver it to 63d and State streets, between the hours of 8 p. m. and 8:30 p. m., Saturday, Oct. 22.

"Put the money in a white pasteboard shoe box. Tie a string around it and carry it under your left arm. Go to State and 63d streets, walk under the 63d street viaduct to the other end, then turn and come back out to State street again. In y[illegible] back out place the shoe box [illegible] one of the steel posts.

"There will be (5) armed men of the black hand gang watching you all the time. When you place the box keep right on going and go straight downtown. Make no crooked moves whatever or you will never be seen or heard from again.

Our motto is: "Do as we say and keep this to yourself. Our answer is: 'If you don't, then () Death. Remember! () Death. (5).'

"The Black (5) V Death if not delivered.

"Remember, do as we have instructed, as we need $1,000 in cash at once.

GERMAN CABINET FALLS; DUE TO SILESIA EDICT

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Oct. 22.—The German cabinet, headed by Chancellor Wirth, resigned at 6 o'clock this evening. A new German cabinet must be formed by Wednesday to meet the entente requirements for completing the Upper Silesian division. The league of nations' order dividing Silesia was the direct cause of the cabinet's fall.

It is stated in political circles here that President Loebe of the reichstag is among the most likely of the candidates for the chancellorship.

The new cabinet, like the old one, will be a coalition ministry, but is expected to be more conservative. This will array the more radical wings of the Socialist party against it.

The fall of the Wirth cabinet has been expected for some time, as Germany's industrial and political crisis continued to grow more serious.

TWO MORE TO ACT TODAY ON LEAVING BIG 5

Only Fourth of Men Now for Walkout.

The Strike in Brief

Interstate commerce commission reduces freight rates on grain and hay. American Farm bureau official declares this will work a saving of $40,000,000 annually to farmers.

Eight "standard" unions decline to go on strike with the five brotherhoods, one union votes to join the strike, while two others are still to decide.

Failure of the unions to present a solid front is regarded by many to indicate that there is a good chance for peace in the hearing before the labor board on Wednesday.

Warren S. Stone, president of engineers, declares he doubts the ability of the unions' heads to avert a general strike, notwithstanding the efforts for peace and the failure of the "solid front" of all the sixteen principal unions.

International and Great Northern railroad of Texas is partially crippled as to freight carriage by what is termed by the unions as a "100 per cent strike."

Labor board gives out figures showing that in spite of the July wage reduction wages still are 58 per cent over the 1917 level.

Prospect for peace in the transportation crisis was strengthened materially last night when a series of rapid fire developments left only one of the eleven principal railroad unions—in addition to the five brotherhoods—adhering to the strike program set for next Sunday morning.

Leaders of eight of the unions voted yesterday not to participate in the brotherhoods' walkout, but to await the final decision of the United States labor board on working rules and wages. Similar action by two remaining unions is expected today.

Failure of the unions to present a solidarity of front, with the threatened walkout only a week away, points strongly, in the opinion of experts, to the success of the conciliatory hearing before the labor board on Wednesday.

One-third of Men to Go Out.

The strike movement now includes the engineers, firemen, conductors, trainmen, switchmen and telegraphers, who have a membership of approximately 475,000.

The eight organizations which have postponed action—the six federated shop crafts, track laborers, and stationary firemen—control approximately 890,000 workers. If the two remaining unions—the signalmen and the clerks, freight handlers, and station employés—throw their lot in with the shop crafts rather than with the train service brotherhoods, as is expected, approximately three-fourths of all rail employés will have refused to strike.

Stone Predicts Walkout.

When news of the stand taken by the other unions reached the brotherhood headquarters in Cleveland, Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, announced that despite whatever may occur between now and Oct. 30, he doubts the ability of strike leaders to prevent their men from carrying out the program.

"There is no question in my mind that the men will go out, no matter what we say," Mr. Stone said at the close of an all day meeting with the other brotherhood chiefs. "We are going ahead with the strike plans. Most of the day was spent in considering telegrams from the field."

The brotherhood chiefs studiously avoided discussion of the independent strike of 600 trainmen called against the International and Great Northern railroad in Texas at noon yesterday in defiance of the "status quo" order issued by the labor board. The board considered the strike but announced no decision.

Reports on Strike Differ.

Strike leaders declared the walkout was "100 per cent perfect," but officials of the road said passenger service was being maintained without a hitch and that freight service will be resumed within forty-eight hours. No strikebreakers have been employed as yet, the management saying enough employés remained loyal to move the necessary trains.

Open Shop to Front.

Another matter which came before the board was the open shop plan put into effect on the Tremont and Gulf railroad, a sixty-seven mile logging line in Louisiana, owned by J. Stanley Joyce, millionaire husband of the famous "Peggy" Joyce.

The board for the first time passively sanctioned the open shop principle when it announced last night it had relinquished jurisdiction in the matter. Earlier in the day Mr. Joyce had assured the board there was no intention of flouting its authority, and wired his general manager to hold the plan up pending a settlement of the dispute by the board. A reply was received, however, stating that all the employés had accepted the open shop plan, and consequently the board decided that, as there was no dispute, its jurisdiction ceased.

The most unexpected development was the announcement by E. J. Manion, president of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, that his organization would walk out in conjunction with the brotherhoods, following the same program as to the roads designated in the various groups. Up to that time it had been expected that the eleven "standard" unions, which recently split with the "big five" brotherhoods, would act in unison in whatever course was decided upon.

Preparing for Strike.

"Our general chairmen have concluded their deliberations," Mr. Manion said, "and are returning to their respective headquarters to complete their preparations for making the strike effective on the same railroads and dates named in the strike order of the other transportation organizations."

Altogether, more than thirty railroad unions were involved in the wage cut decision by the labor board last July, but only sixteen of them figure in the present crisis. The split between these occurred when the "big five" brotherhoods took an independent strike vote on the wage cut and refused to stand or fall with the other organizations on the working rules questions.

The eleven "standard" unions have been awaiting the course decided upon by the federated shop crafts. This course was made known in a long statement issued by B. M. Jewell, president of the railway employés' department of the American Federation of Labor, and signed by the international presidents of the six shop crafts involved.

Refused to Coöperate.

The statement sets forth that, while the shop crafts had always stood for "concerted action," they were advised by the officers of the brotherhoods on Oct. 14 "that they would not under any circumstances coöperate with the federated shop crafts organizations in the threatened strike beginning Oct. 30."

"It further developed," the statement continues, "that if any other class of employés decided to strike with them they, the four transportation organizations (engineers, firemen, conductors and trainmen) would not be bound to remain on strike after they had received a settlement acceptable to them, even though those who had assisted them in making their strike successful had received no settlement and were still on strike.

"For the reasons above stated the federated shop crafts will continue to await, as per the program of Aug. 24, the issuance by the United States railroad labor board of the decision on the remaining rules, which are to be general in their application."

Signers of Statement.

Besides President Jewell the statement was signed by Presidents William H. Johnston of the machinists, James W. Kline of the blacksmiths, J. A. Franklin of the boilermakers, J. J. Hynes of the sheet metal workers, James P. Noonan of the electrical workers, and Martin F. Ryan of the carmen.

Shortly after this action was announced the maintenance of way men, meeting at the Great Northern, voted to stand with the shop crafts.

The clerks and freight handlers will meet today, and it also is expected that the signalmen, a comparatively small organization numerically, will announce their decision to postpone the strike.

RAIL PAY, AFTER CUT, 58 PER CENT OVER 1917 WAGE

Labor Board Figures Give Rates for All Groups.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

"Where does the 12½ per cent wage cut of July 1 leave the railroad workers?" the man on the street is asking about the threatened railroad strike. Computations by the United States railroad labor board indicate that the average pay, straight time, after the cut is still 58.2 per cent higher than it was in December, 1917, after the Adamson law.

By groups the July 1 reduction varies considerably as follows, the table also showing where wages remain as compared with December, 1917:

	Per cent cut. July 1, 1921.	Per cent increase remaining over Dec., '17.
Supervisory forces	6.3	63.4
Clerical and station	12.2	64.6
Maintenance of way and unskilled	17.4	55.7
Shop employés	10.5	54.0
Telegraphers, etc.	8.9	82.8
Engine service employés	9.4	59.9
Train service	10.7	64.5
Sta. engineers and firemen	12.7	92.3
Signal department	10.0	66.6
Marine department	9.8	33.3

Meaning in Dollars and Cents.

The lowest daily average rate in the tables is that for office boys, messengers, and others under 18 years filling similar positions. They now get $2.[illegible] a day. In December, 1914, the rate was $1.41. For the supervisory forces, the highest group, the average daily rate is now $8.01, where in December, 1917, it was $5.24.

The average daily rate in the clerical and station forces is $4.18; in 1917 it was $2.54.

Maintenance of way men and unskilled labor have an average rate of $3.35 a day, as against $2.15 in 1917.

Shop employés, at straight time, average a rate of $5.47 a day; in 1917, $3.55.

Telegraphers, who in 1917 had an average daily rate of $2.65, now have $4.84.

Engine service employés have an average of $5.81 a day. In 1917 it was $3.83.

Train service men have an average daily rate of $5.35. In 1917 they had $3.32.

Stationary engineers and firemen have an average daily rate of $4.19, as against $2.18 in 1917.

Signal department employés average $5.50, as compared with $3.30 in 1917.

Marine department employés have an average rate of $6.69 a day. In 1917 it was $5.02.

For all railroad groups taken as a whole the average daily rate of pay, straight time, is $4.54, after the 12½ per cent cut. In December, 1917, it was $2.87.

Applied to Unskilled Labor.

One of the first questions the ordinary citizen asks is what section hands and unskilled labor, which were notoriously underpaid before the upward movement began, are now receiving after the cut.

Section hands now have an average monthly rate of $77.01 as against $49.21 in 1917. Other unskilled labor has an average monthly rate of $83.39. In 1917 it was $57.12.

Passenger engineers and motormen, after the cut, have an average monthly rate of $267.31. In 1917 it was $185.93. Freight engineers, through, have a rate averaging $253.27 a month, as against $175.64 in 1917.

The average monthly rate for passenger conductors is given as $235.50, where in 1917 it was $163.75, and for local freight conductors it is $223.91, as against $154.56 in 1917.

These are all labor board figures.

Labor Cost Up 152 Per Cent.

Since 1916, according to the interstate commerce tables, labor costs on the railroads have risen 152 per cent, while gross operating revenues have increased approximately 72 per cent.

In 1916, before the Adamson law took effect, the labor bill of the carriers stood at $1,468,576,394. In 1920 it was $3,698,216,351, which was more than all the gross revenues in 1916. The increase in the labor bill amounted to $2,229,639,957. In the same four years the gross revenues of the roads grew from $3,596,865,766 in 1916 to $6,171,493,301, an increase of $2,574,627,535. The 12½ per cent cut makes a reduction of $382,000,000 a year in the wage bill.

Out of each dollar of railway operating revenue in 1916 40.8 cents went to labor. In 1920 labor cost 59.9 cents out of each dollar. In 1916, fuel took 7 cents of each dollar; in 1920, 10.9 cents. Material, supplies and miscellaneous took 12.5 cents of each dollar in 1916 and 17.3 cents in 1920.

Grain and Hay Railway Rates Cut by U. S. to Aid the West

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 22.—[Special.]—Relief to western producers of grain and hay and to shippers of grain products was granted today by the interstate commerce commission in the case involving rates on grain, grain products, and hay between points in the western and mountain and Pacific rate groups.

The commission found that the present rates on wheat and hay will be for the future unjust and unreasonable to the extent that they include more than one-half of the increase made effective Aug. 26, 1920; that the present rates on coarse grains will be, for the future, unjust and unreasonable to the extent that they may exceed rates 10 per cent less than those prescribed as just and reasonable on wheat.

What Reductions Mean.

In the western rate group, the increase made in the summer of 1920 amounted to 35 per cent, and in the mountain and Pacific group 25 per cent. Under the commission's ruling the rates on wheat and hay in effect prior to these increases will be 17½ per cent in the western and 12½ per cent in mountain and Pacific group. The reductions in the rates on coarse grain will be 10 per cent less than those on wheat.

Estimates as to what these decreases will cost the railroads vary from $35,000,000 to $40,000,000 a year.

"The facts disclosed in the record make it appear that grain and grain products and hay, on the whole, are bearing a share of transportation charges which is disproportionate," the commission said.

Both Sides in Trouble.

"Summarizing the situation before us, petitioners speak for a basic industry which the evidence shows is in a state of financial prostration, receiving for its products prices which approach and in some cases have fallen below pre-war levels, but paying transportation costs many of which are still at the wartime peak.

"On the other hand, the evidence shows with equal clarity that respondents (the railroads) are suffering from financial depression and that their net earnings have been far below the standard which has been fixed by law, although the tendency now is upward."

Railway Funding Bill In.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 22.—The administration bill for funding $500,000,000 of railroad debts was reported favorably today by the senate interstate commerce committee with amendments by Senator Cummins, Republican, Iowa, chairman, broadening the financing operations.

One of the amendments permits marketing of railroad securities now in the hands of the railroad administration through private channels and through purchase by the War Finance corporation.

Another amendment forever bars claims of a railroad against the government for "inefficiency of labor" should the carrier agree to settlement of accounts with the government.

MAKES GAS IN ANY STOVE.

Cheaper than Coal or Wood; Gives Twice the Heat in Half the Time.

A wonderful new burner which works in any coal or wood stove is the proud achievement of the International Heating company, 4552 North Broadway, Dept. 107, St. Louis, Mo. This remarkably simple and inexpensive invention heats stove and oven in half the time and does away with all the dirt, ashes, and drudgery of using coal or wood. It gives one of the hottest and quickest fires known, controlled by a simple valve. It is absolutely safe and can be put into any stove in a few minutes. The manufacturers offer to send this remarkable invention on 30 days' trial to any reader of this paper, who orders direct from the St. Louis office of the International Heating company. They are making a special low price offer to one user in each locality to whom they can refer new customers. They also want agents. Write them today.—Adv.

Daugherty, on Mystery Trip, Is Studying Strike

Columbus, O., Oct. 22.—Attorney General Daugherty arrived late today following a secret trip into the west in connection with the threatened railroad strike, and a few hours later left for Washington. The attorney general would not say where he had been or the nature of his activities in the west, but he did say that he did not believe there would be a general railroad strike.

Although he did "not believe there would be a strike," the attorney general said the government would promptly exercise its authority and would operate mail, freight and passenger trains if the men went out.

I. C. C. DECISION SAVES FARMERS ENORMOUS SUMS

Cuts Costs $40,000,000 Yearly, Thorne Says.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Organized agriculture declares the decision made by the interstate commerce commission to reduce freight rates on grain and hay a distinct victory for them and a great relief to the farmers.

It means a reduction in transportation costs to the farmers in the grain belt of approximately $40,000,000 annually, according to Clifford Thorne, transportation expert and general counsel for the American Farm Bureau federation.

A more significant factor than this, he thinks, is that by this act, coupled with the recent order on live stock rates, the commission has broken down the barriers of high freight rates and has overruled the contention of the carriers that their rates must not be reduced until further reductions in wages are effected.

Sustains Farm Bureau Stand.

It is claimed that this also sustains the position of the farm bureau in its petition, recently filed with the commission, asking for a reduction of from 10 to 20 per cent immediately, with subsequent reductions as fast as reductions in operating costs could be effected until the increase of last year, ranging from 25 to 40 per cent in the various regions, shall be completely eliminated.

State Bodies Aided Move.

The Farm bureau and the Farmers' National Grain Dealers' association were the only two shippers' organizations to take part in the trial, but the state railroad commissions are given great credit for their help.

CANADIANS WIN OPENING DASH IN SCHOONER RACE

Accident Handicaps U. S. Ship on Final Lap.

Yesterday, off Halifax, the swiftest vessels of the American and Canadian fishing fleets, manned by chosen crews, began a series of races to decide the championship of the Atlantic.

The American Elsie, out of Gloucester, met the Canadian Bluenose of Lunenberg. They had won the right to compete by defeating all rivals in their respective fleets.

The Elsie was skippered by the same Marty Welch who last year took the measure of the Canadians when he made it three straight victories for his Esperanto against the Canadian Delawana.

James B. Connelly, the noted sea story writer, tells of yesterday's contest.

BY JAMES CONNELLY.

[Copyright: 1921: By James B. Connelly.]

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 22.—Our little Elsie met the big Bluenose today and took a beating in one of the greatest races ever sailed over a measured course. The Elsie parted a balloon stay and later carried away her fore topmast at a time when she thought she would surely overhaul her rival. The Bluenose people say that if the Elsie had not parted so much as a pack thread the Elsie still would have been beaten, because conditions today—a twenty mile breeze and rough water to match—were made to order for Bluenose. Rough water that checks a vessel like the Elsie has little effect on her.

They are admitting that but for the Elsie's accident it might have been a fairly close race, but the Elsie winning—it doesn't lie in the planks and spars of that great little vessel, they say.

It was what the weather sharks said it would be last night, a strong breeze and rough water outside. It did not blow the gale that was prayed for, but it did blow half a gale, wind enough to afford a fair tryout for any two seagoing vessels.

Elsie Leads Across Line.

Every steam and sail craft pennant in sight was snapping in the cool nor'wester when the two vessels stood down for the line. The Elsie crossed with the crack of the gun, a perfect start. The Bluenose was six lengths behind. It was ease sheets then, and all sail, with everything drawing, for the first buoy. They ran away from all the following steamers in that first hour's drive. The squalls which came off the high Chebucto shore rolled them both down to a beautiful slant as they drove for the outer automatic buoy at a twelve knot clip.

The sea was smooth enough under Chebucto, but as they reached out to the open sea, the water grew lumpier and the swell more pronounced, but nothing to trouble them except to make steering more difficult when they jibed to go before it. On the run to Shut-in buoy, the vessels still doing twelve knots, the Elsie acted as if she were trying to broach, the only fault with her.

Her mastheads and her rival's masthead swung through a good arc at times and great gobs of water broke over both forward. The masthead men must have been hanging on grimly and also they must have found it pretty cool up there in the cool October nor'wester.

Bluenose Takes the Bit.

Bluenose turned the outer automatic buoy, thirteen miles from the start, five lengths in the lead. She turned the second buoy, twenty-two miles, half a mile in the lead, which lead, however, did not worry the Elsie people. Most races are settled by good or bad windward work, and an eleven and one-half mile beat to windward was now facing them.

It was long tacks up toward Devil's island, that spot where Marty Welch refused to ask for sea room last year and where, as a result, he came near leaving the Esperanto's frame on the surf-crowned ledge. He had all the sea room he wanted today trying to overhaul the big Lunenberger.

It was rough water and rough work all the way. Both vessels had been taking plenty of white water on their windward bows on the run to Shut-in. Now both were taking the solid green water over their lee forequarters.

Both Spurn the Water.

Both were lifting pretty high to it forward, but the big Bluenose was lifting higher and plunging deeper than the little Elsie. At times the big fellow showed his keel clear to the foremast. All this time there was plenty of wind for the all sail that the Elsie was always carrying and to the all but staysail the Bluenose was carrying.

The noticeable thing was that the Elsie was not rolling as low down to it as the big one. At no time did she bury her lee rail. She wet it, but not to bury it. And through it all, it was a matter of judgment as to whether she was not sailing closer to the wind than the big fellow.

The sea was livening up all this time, showing all green and white, and between the green below and blue above the new white sails of the Bluenose stood out prettily.

Not Pretty, but Dogged.

The tried old fishing bank outfit of the Elsie did not look near so pretty, but they were standing to the drag, which was the main thing.

The Elsie did have a main topmast which it sprung in its drive from Gloucester to Halifax a few nights before. They feared for that, but nothing happened to it. The foretopmast which they thought all right did have something happen to it. First, the balloon stay carried away under the pressure of wind. That was all right. They fixed that without much loss of time and hoisted it up again.

It was doubtful judgment, perhaps, to be carrying balloon and staysail both, but Marty Welch, when he looked out on the white capped sea that morning had said: "What sail comes off today will be the Lord's doing, not mine."

And so up went the balloon, and no sooner up than went not the bellying sail but the foretopmast to which it was stayed. Cr—k it went; too much wind in that jumping sea was the story. And with the topmast went the Elsie's chances for the race.

Then came the job of making the best of it. Men went aloft and lashed the broken spar to the foremast head. Then out to the end of the jumping bowsprit went Mate John Matheson with Seamen Christiansen and Ellser to take in the flying, flapping balloon. It was rough work, because they could not afford to slack the vessel's speed. They had not yet given up the race. Down into the jumping sea plunged the bowsprit and five feet under the sea went the three men. They cut the sail clear and got it in, the crew behind them hauling it in board through the green-white smother.

With two sails less than the big fellow they drove on, and you can't tell any of the Elsie's crew tonight that even as it was they would not have made a close go of it, as it was on that windward leg, if the big one hadn't caught a big slant of wind under the Dartmouth shore.

Cheered by Watching Craft.

Elsie made the last turning buoy, six miles to go, ten minutes to the bad. From there on the Bluenose, with its extra topsail and balloon to pull it along, added another half a mile to its score. Up the high shore it went like a wild horse, and everything along the road gave it the whistles.

The Bluenose won by more than two miles, but you cannot tell any of the Elsie's crew tonight that it cannot give that big whale a race yet.

The Bluenose sailed over fifty-three miles of bottom in four hours and a half, one of the fastest races ever the Elsie's crew is confident. There is no complaint about wind or sea. Elsie likes it rough and she likes it smooth and the more wind the better.

One race is gone, but the Elsie's crew is prouder of her today than they were even before, and Lord knows they always thought pretty well of her.

There is the Bluenose side, of course. The greatest all around sailing fishermen that ever put out to sea, they are saying tonight, and it is good. But Monday is coming and: "God give us wind and more wind," is the Elsie prayer tonight for Monday.

ONWENTSIA STAGES A THRILLING STEEPLECHASE

Incidents like this were common; sixteen jumps strung along a tortuous course kept the temper of men and horses at highest pitch. There were some dangerous tumbles taken, but the riders came out without bad hurts.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 22.

The interstate commerce commission today brought relief to western producers of grain and hay and to shippers of grain products in holding that present freight rates on grain and hay are unjust and unreasonable and ordered reductions equivalent to 50 per cent of the increase effective last year on wheat and hay and a 10 per cent cut in the increased rate on coarse grains.

Prospect of Japan and China settling their dispute over possession of Shantung before the international armament conference convenes went glimmering when Japan made public a reply to China's recent comunication taking sharp issue with China's position.

The senate today approved the finance committee's amendment to the house tax bill fixing the maximum surtax at 50 per cent, instead of 32 per cent as provided in the house bill.

Business conditions according to the monthly report of the National Chamber of Commerce bureau of statistics continue to show moderate improvement. Marked improvement in the south is due to the rise in cotton prices.

The plans of the government for withdrawing American troops from Germany announced by Secretary of War Weeks contemplate retaining 5,600 officers and men in the occupied territory.

SPILLS, TUMBLES, THRILL SOCIETY AT STEEPLECHASE

Onwentsia Is Victor in City's First Event.

Merrie England came to Lake Forest yesterday when superb horses romped over mead and lawn, while who's who of the Blue book cheered and waved their handkerchiefs in ecstatic excitement.

It was Chicago's first steeplechase, held under the auspices of the Onwentsia Hunt club and made more impressive by the fact Onwentsia "bore away the bells."

There were two events, both over a two and a half mile course, with sixteen hurdles, laid out partly on the green of Onwentsia's golf course, partly on the polo grounds of the club, and partly through a stubble corn field on the Leander McCormick estate adjoining.

Onwentsia Wins Main Event.

It was the first—the main—event, which is to become an annual affair, that Onwentsia won. This was a steeplechase run by teams of three, representing the clubs which took part—the Bloomfield Hunt club of Detroit, a team from Augustus S. Peabody's stable in Hinsdale, the Arcady Hunt club, headed by B. L. Behr of Lake Forest, and Onwentsia.

Onwentsia won the race on points, her three entries, The Comet, Latchet, and Rattler, coming in fourth, fifth, and sixth, respectively. Francis Johnson rode The Comet, Maj. Campbell, formerly of the British army, rode Latchet, and Col. Nicholson rode Rattler.

Arcady Loses by Point.

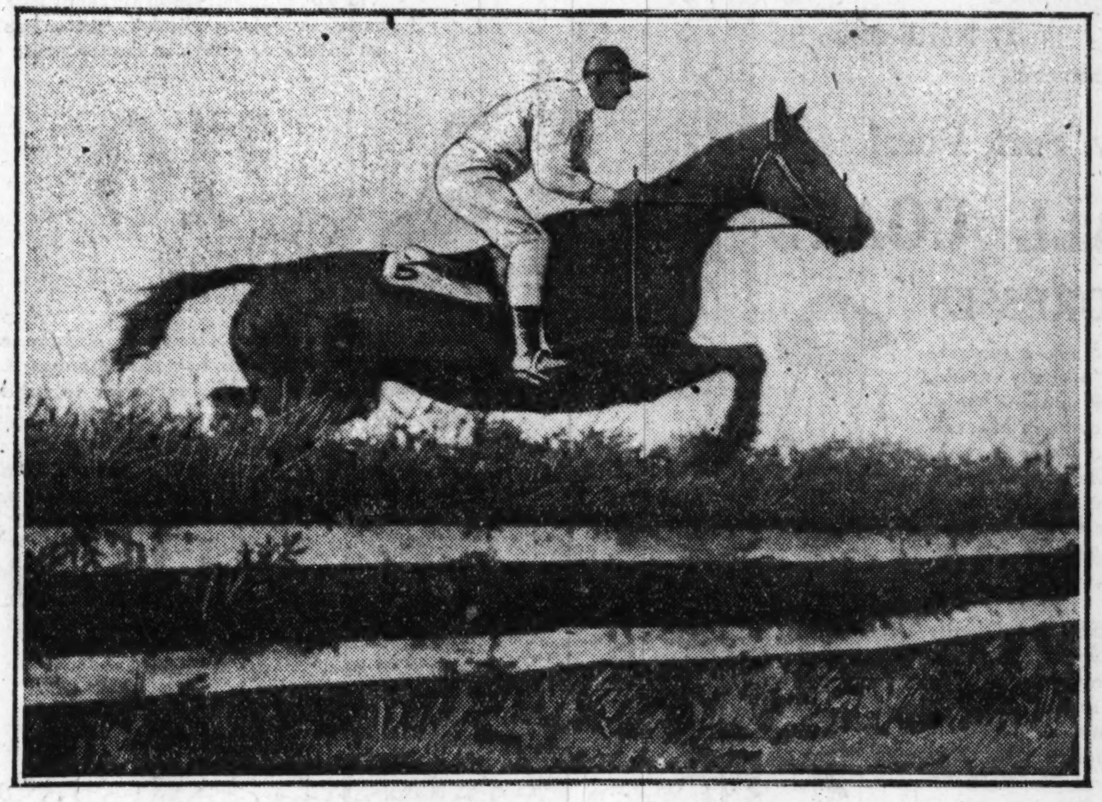
Burgoright of Mr. Behr's triad, mounted by James L. Breeze Jr., came in first in the big event, but his teammates, Beaumont and Killconnell, took seventh and eighth places, thereby losing the chase for the Arcady club by one point.

Spills by riders and horses in Mr. Peabody's team and the Detroit team put them out of the running. C. G. Ellis of Mr. Peabody's team was the only real casualty of the day. Riding Glodiva, who failed to take the first hurdle—considered the meanest of the jumps—he was thrown and suffered a broken nose.

Thrills for Spectators.

Sure Shot of the Detroit entries, ridden by Wesson Seyburn, stumbled over the fourth hurdle on the first round, throwing Seyburn heavily. Mr. Seyburn recovered at once, remounted, and followed the field. On the second round he lost a stirrup, and again slipped from the saddle. He readjusted the stirrup, posed for a motion picture, and reëntered the race, finishing only about a minute behind the field.

Ginko of the Detroit team lost its rider, but continued in the running and made several hurdles.



Joseph T. Bowen taking a hurdle on one of Augustus Peabody's horses.

Glodiva of Mrs. Peabody's stable, ridden by J. Owen, retrieved herself for her early fall in the first event by making a spectacular dash to win by a nose in the second, which was an open steeplechase. Allen, mounted by H. Rasmussen, his owner, was leading easily when a bad fall at the tenth jump put horse and rider out of the race.

ALL SOCIETY ATTENDS

If a large and fashionable audience spells success, then the Onwentsia hunt steeplechase was successful beyond the hopes of its sponsors, for literally "every one" was there. Not only did the onlookers contribute to the success of the event, but the weather man's prediction of cold and rain failed to materialize and the day was perfect.

A variety of costumes were seen, for many of the spectators hurried from the race to the Bradley-Fisher wedding, and some of the more hasty even attempted to reach the city in time to attend the Watkins-Revell wedding reception. One of the most attractive looking young women was Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen Jr., whose husband rode one of Mr. Peabody's horses.

A Striking Group.

Mrs. Noble B. Judah, Mrs. Charles Edward Brown, Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, and Mrs. Rensselaer W. Cox were a striking looking quartet as they sat on the top of a limousine during the race.

Mrs. Austin Niblack, seated on top of the station wagon in which she and Mr. Niblack drove to the club, wore a reseda green homespun suit with a small beaver collar and a tan felt hat. Her sister, Mrs. Leander McCormick, looked unusually stunning in a suit of gray tweed, a small gray felt hat, and a purple and lavender scarf.

Mrs. Philip D. Armour III. and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Lester Armour, came in for their usual share of admiring comment, for these two dainty blonde young women are unusually attractive.

Others Seen at Course.

Among others in the cars parked around the course were Mrs. William H. Mitchell II., Miss Elizabeth Farwell, Miss Martha Granger, William M. Blair, Miss Harriet McLaughlin, Frederic McLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bush, Mr. and Mrs. W. Prescott Hunt Jr., John Wentworth, Mrs. Pickett Withers, Mrs. Prentiss Coonley, Mrs. A. F. Stevenson Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William E. Clow Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. James Minotto, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Erskine.

Miss Jane Morton, Columbus Healy, Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan Spalding, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilhelm, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Nugent, Mr. and Mrs. Owen B. Jones, Mrs. A. A. 5,600 YANKS TO STAY ON RHINE; 8,000 TO RETURN

Policy Is Approved by President Harding.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 22.—[Special.]—The government has decided to retain approximately 5,600 officers and men in the army in the occupied region of Germany for an indefinite period, pending determination of whether the United States shall participate in prolonged occupation of German territory. This decision was announced today by the secretary of war.

About 8,000 of the 13,000 American soldiers now in Germany are to be brought home, but as only two transports have been assigned to this duty the reduction, which will begin next month, will not be accomplished until March, 1922.

Approved by President.

Before determining upon this policy the secretary of war consulted with the secretary of state, and it is understood that their agreement had the approval of the president. It is evident that international considerations dovetailing with the coming conference for limitation of armament were partly responsible for the decision to retain troops in Germany, and it is expected that the announcement made today will be greatly pleasing to the European allies, and particularly France.

Under the Wilson administration the plan for occupying Germany territory was to retain about 7,800 American troops around the Coblenz bridgehead, but the American force was never reduced to this number.

FEWER MEN, HIGHER COST

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Oct. 22.—Maj. Gen. Henry T. Allen and Roland Boyden today notified the allied conference discussing the expenses of the army of occupation that the American forces on the Rhine would soon be reduced 50 per cent. The decrease in the size of the American army will increase the cost per man per day from $4.25 to $4.95, Gen. Allen explained, because the overhead expense—such as shipping goods from America—would naturally be higher per man.

EX-KING'S COUP MAY LIGHT NEW FIRES OF WAR

Three Slav Nations Ready to Attack Hungary.

be an ultimatum from the Little Entente which on the occasion of Charles' attempt last spring notified the Austrian and Hungarian governments that the reappearance of a Hapsburg on their soil would automatically result in mobilization along their borders and the forcible ejection of the former sovereign.

Premier Briand's statements in the chamber of deputies after the last affair pledged French support to the Little Entente, although a strong reactionary and military clique in French politics favors the restoration of a strong dominant south central European state to replace the poverty stricken little nations now existing through the charity of the world.

A powerful portion of British officialdom, it is said, also see in the erection of a strong Danubian state under a popular and energetic chieftain the sole solution of central Europe's troubles.

Backed by U. S. Money.

More than $200,000,000 in American money is being used to aid Charles in his attempt to regain the throne, according to news received here from Vienna.

The Viennese also remark that Charles' attempt is simultaneous with Archduke Albrecht's trip to America to ratify the sale of royal Austro-Hungarian property to an American syndicate, which includes Samuel Untermeyer, Charles Sabin, J. Leonard Replogle and others.

SLAV NATIONS MOBILIZE

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Oct. 22.—The Austrian embassy informed THE TRIBUNE this evening that the little entente was preparing to mobilize against former Emperor Charles of Hungary. The embassy said that it had received a phone call from Vienna confirming Charles' arrival at Odenburg and stating that he was marching on Budapest with two divisions. Austrian embassy officials declare France is backing the movement for the restoration of the Hapsburgs.

Are we to see a great monarchist revolution, engulfing not only Austria, Hungary, and the new republics formed from the old dual monarchy but also Bavaria and perhaps the rest of the German republic? This question is being asked in Berlin tonight as numerous reports from Vienna and Budapest spell the first successes for former Emperor Charles, whose second attempt to mount the Hapsburg throne, his friends say, may not prove to be a musical comedy.

Germany Worried.

Germany is worried. The Liberal Democrats, as well as the Socialist elements—in others words, 68 per cent of the population which wants the German republic maintained—are seriously worried. Fears are stronger because Charles' reported second attempt to come back is timed with the monarchist movement in Tyrol and Bavaria, the monarchist movement in Austria, and the weakness of the German central government in the face of the international crisis. This crisis, every one admits, has strengthened the reactionary and monarchist elements in Germany.

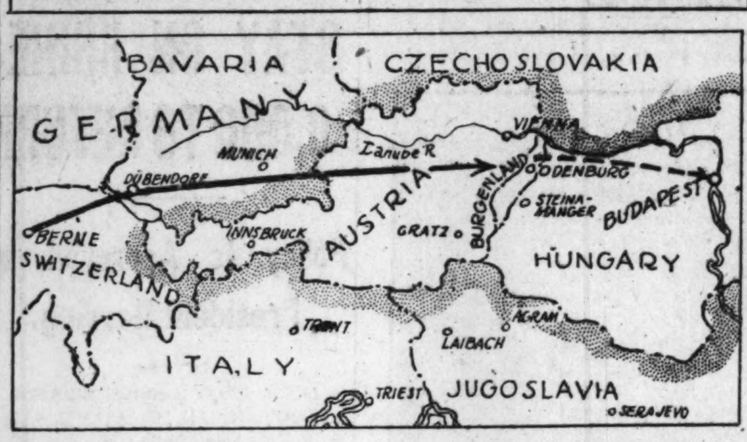
In the meanwhile the Bavarian reports continue to trouble Berlin. Since the death of King Ludwig of Bavaria a great monarchist and military pageant has been under preparation in Munich, to be held in connection with the funeral next week. Crown Prince Rupprecht is being called upon daily to proclaim himself king.

Ex-Empress Goes Along.

BERNE, Oct. 22.—[By long distance telephone to Paris.]—A member of former Emperor Charles' entourage called on President Schultheiss this afternoon and announced the departure of the former emperor and Empress Zita by airplane. President Schultheiss and former President Motta expressed indignation over Charles' act, which violates his parole, as he made a solemn promise to the Swiss government after his last attempt that he would not leave the country without first giving notice.

Last Wednesday four persons, heavily muffled, hired an airplane, ostensibly to fly to Geneva. A pilot who gave his name as Zimmerman was employed to fly the machine. It is believed that he was a former German war aviator and that his passengers included the ex-emperor.

EX-KING TRIES AIR ROUTE TO THRONE



Former Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary flew from Switzerland to Odenburg in Burgenland, Hungary. He was proclaimed king by a body of royalist troops and is marching at their head toward Budapest. All central Europe is menaced by war through Charles' coup. This is his second attempt in recent months to seize the throne of Hungary. The long arrow on the map shows Charles' approximate route to Odenburg. In his previous attempt he made Stein-am-Anger his base, and withdrew only when all of Hungary's neighbors threatened instant war to oust him.

WOMEN HERDED AS ARE CATTLE AT ELLIS ISLAND

Crowded, Driven, Sworn At by Guards.

The following article is the eleventh of a series by Miss Genevieve Forbes, a member of The Tribune staff, who has just returned to America, passing through Ellis island as an Irish immigrant girl:

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

"All women and children ashore."

Down the narrow stairs we stumble, an emotionless, hesitant, frightened mass. And always the raucous voices of our two guards, hurling brusque, ruthless, often profane commands at us.

Even the women who have been most self-possessed are shaking. "If my husband were here," whispers one of the women, "he'd punch that man, even if he had to go to jail for it."

Treated Like Cattle.

Like a flock of cattle, goaded on with screams, threats, and menacing gestures, we are herded into line. Across a narrow stretch of water workmen stare over at us in dull amusement, or so we think, as we file past.

I am pushed forward on top of a tiny little fellow struggling with a large bedtick used as a carpet bag. He isn't more than 7. He has dropped behind in the procession and lost sight of his family. At every lurch forward the bag hits his legs. Tears are streaming down his face.

Each one is trying to catch up with the one next in front, for they are yelling at us to hurry. Up the stairs and into a large room, clean with a lonesome, institutional sort of cleanliness. Near the door two painters are working on a scaffolding.

"What's that?" cries a girl. She is almost hysterical, and the sight of the workmen's scaffold terrifies her. The incident, however, is not funny, for her face is ashen, her hands trembling, her voice panicky.

Guard Like Ringmaster.

A subordinate official in blue uniform and a cap with the sign, "Watchman, Ellis island," stands in the center of the room, like a ringmaster.

"Get into line, single file," he yells at us. A Croatian woman with a baby and three other children enters, bewildered. Before she has an opportunity to hear the command one of her youngsters darts out of line.

The man makes a pass at the child, but the mother rescues him.

We try desperately hard to help each other as we whisper, "You're out of line," "Get in the line," to our neighbors.

Ellis Island "Kindness."

A woman in a delicate condition, sagging with fatigue, wavers from the line. The watchman lunges toward her, grabs hold of her, and pulls her back into line. The women steady her. "Better sit down on your suitcase and rest," they suggest, for she is shaking. The woman looks at the suitcase and then at the ringmaster. She shakes her head and straightens up.

"Let your baggage lay," our warden yells. "Take off your hats; take down your hair; roll up your sleeves."

He doesn't give us a moment to execute his order when he begins to pick out tardy individuals upon whom to voice his wrath.

"You, over there, I'm talkin' to you. Don't you understand nothin'?" The girls thus screamed at get so frightened they can't hurry. Pocketbooks, passports, hats tumble to the floor in confusion. If the man so much as takes a step toward them they cringe.

Even Reporter Scared.

With nervous haste I jerk off my head covering, pull out the hair pins. A bag in each hand, hair flowing, my sleeves loosened, I stand alert, afraid even to whisper to the girl next me.

A few feet ahead of me a girl is crying. Three times her hand goes up to her closely fitting cap; three times she looks around the room and her hand drops.

"What the h——" snarls the attendant. "Take off that hat." In desperation the girl pulls it off. Her head has been shaved to the scalp.

The line moves forward a foot; a stop, another move forward. Until at last I am at a turnstile leading into another room. A young doctor yells at us, examines our hands and skin, stamps our cards, and we pass on. If we delay more than a moment in picking up our baggage this young doctor yells at us or pushes us forward.

On about six yards, through another turn stile and up before a distinguished looking doctor, wearing a United States uniform. Here at last, I thought, is courtesy, at least humanity.

"Put down your baggage, quick," the same snarling command; the same threat in every gesture.

I drop my bags. Before I know what he is doing, he grabs my chin and with a rough and sudden jerk that sends me reeling over backward twists back my head, snaps open my mouth and looks at my teeth, much as one might examine a horse, only less gently.

Another Official Ornament.

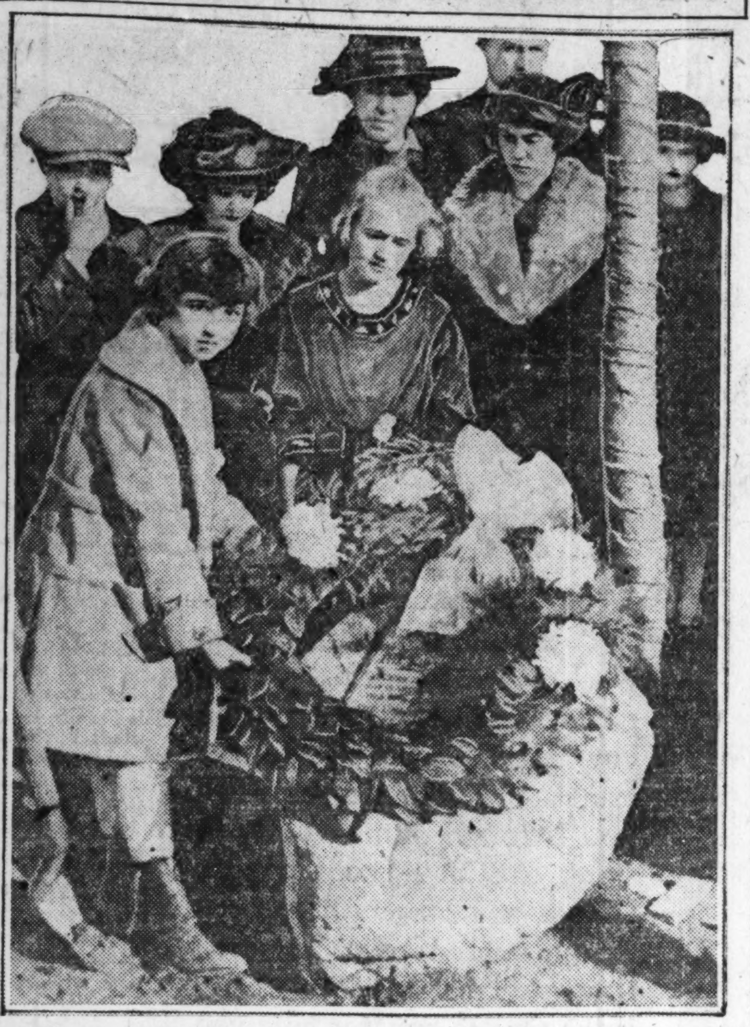
I almost lose my balance. He mumbles something and shoves me on across to another doctor, also distinguished, also in United States uniform. With equal brutality he grabs my head, twists it around to the light, pulls back my eyelids, jerks me this way and that until my cheek is bruised.

"D'ye speak English," he growls interrogatively as he pushes me on.

I wait until I can answer without crying.

Then, "Yes, sir, I do," and I am herded once more into a corridor with crowds of women and children.

PLANTING FIRST MEMORY TREE



Thousands joined yesterday in planting a tree in memory of Chicago's unknown dead in the world war. Catherine Zender and Mary Atwell are shown placing a wreath on the mammoth boulder at the foot of the tree.

Judge K. M. Landis, who delivered the principal address at the tree planting. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

CHICAGO PLANTS TREE TO UNKNOWN DEAD IN THE WAR

Throng Pays Tribute to Valor of City's Sons.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

There were glorious services at the unveiling yesterday of the great soldier memorial—an elm tree that is to live as a reminder of those unknown soldiers of Chicago who gave their lives in the great war. It was only the beginning of the Memory roads of the country, but it was the first tree, and the reverence in which those unknown soldiers who made the supreme sacrifice are held was shown by the crowds that marched in the parade and attended the services. The tree was placed at the lake edge at Sheridan road and Lake terrace.

The Rogers Park Kiwanis club, assisted by intercity clubs of Kiwanis, had charge of the services and donated the elm and the great bowlder that marks the memorial. Dr. Patrick F. Machler, who was surgeon general of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, directed the proceedings. Charles Ferguson, president of the Rogers Park club, introduced the speakers, the first of whom was Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

Cheers for Judge Landis.

Judge Landis was greeted with cheers. He paid tribute to the sailors, the soldiers, the veterans, the women who did such splendid war work—and then said:

"The achievements of this war in deeds of glory and gallantry—on land, under water, in the air—all history of all the people, of all the world, cannot excel. As time rolls on the branches of this beautiful tree, planted to the memory of the soldiers who gave their best—their all—will spread in the presence of the people of the community, daily expressing their gratitude to the men who made the sacrifice—the unknown."

Capt. H. A. Wurtsbaugh, commandant at Great Lakes, spoke of the heroism that is unnoticed.

"Heroism doesn't mean doing something spectacular," he said. "It means for a man to do his duty and do it well."

Women Unveil Tree.

Mrs. Patrick Machler, a member of the women's auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and of the American Legion, and Mrs. Harry Gradle, president of the Rogers Park Women's club and a member of the Legion auxiliary, unveiled the tree. As the big flags were pulled high and waved in the breeze the jackie band from Great Lakes played "The Star Spangled Banner" and all heads were bared as the tree stood forth, straight and tall. Beside it was a six ton bowlder of black flint bearing a bronze tablet that tells the story. A wreath of laurel and white chrysanthemums was placed upon the bowler by school children.

After a soldier squad fired the salute a bugler sounded taps as the entire crowd stood silent.

LIGREGNI SANITY JURY DEADLOCK; SET NEW HEARING

After being deadlocked for twenty hours, the jury attempting to decide the sanity of Frank Ligregni was discharged yesterday by Judge John J. Sullivan in the Criminal court and a rehearing was ordered for next Wednesday morning.

"We took twelve ballots," said Abe S. Davis, 225 Sheridan road, foreman of the jury. "We were hopelessly divided. Our last ballot stood 8 to 4 for sanity."

Ligregni, who was to have been hanged Friday for the murder of his schoolteacher wife, Genevieve, was saved from the gallows by the last-minute sanity hearing obtained by his attorney, S. Leonard Golan.

"I will establish this man's insanity on the next trial," he said. "There is no doubt he is insane and he should not be hanged."

"If that man is insane everybody in Chicago is," said Assistant State's Attorney James Scott Stewart.

BOY KILLED BY TAXI; WEALTHY OHIOAN INJURED

Four year old Ralph Dunkelberger, 4400 Sidney avenue, was instantly killed yesterday when he was struck by a taxicab at 44th street and Lake Park avenue.

A machine driven by J. T. Benedict 1205 Madison park, son-in-law of the late Dr. John B. Murphy, hit another automobile last night at 51st street and Harper avenue. H. G. Winterhadler, wealthy Cleveland contractor, stopping at the Hyde Park hotel, received internal injuries, according to the police report. Mr. Benedict assisted Winterhadler to a drug store and notified Lieut. Paul Duffy of the Hyde Park police.

OFFICER CLEARED OF CHARGE.

Greenville, Mo., Oct. 22.—Ed Greasey, marshal of Piedmont, today was acquitted in Circuit court here of a charge of murder in connection with the death of William Turner, a deputy constable, July 15 last. His plea was self-defense.

COLLINS FIGHTS TO SAVE IRISH HOPE OF PEACE

Goes to Dublin to Cool Off De Valera.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Michael Collins, commander in chief of the "Irish republican army" and one of the strongest figures in the Irish delegation now negotiating for a settlement with Great Britain, is in Dublin tonight. He will read the riot act to Eamon de Valera for the Irish "president's" intervention in the correspondence between Pope Benedict and King George, which action seriously threatened the chances for peace.

In the meantime the other Irish delegates were busy conferring on the situation. Communications have been passing between the Irish headquarters in Chelsea and Dublin by telephone, telegraph, and courier.

It is reported in Dublin that Mr. de Valera was angry because he was not included in the delegation, and he is determined to assert his position as president of the "republic," while others attribute his outbreak to his incurable passion for argument at the right or wrong moment.

Forces Sovereignty Issue.

At any rate the effect of Mr. de Valera's bombshell has been to force to the front at once the question of British sovereignty over Ireland, which both sides have been trying to avoid until the future relations have been settled.

Prime Minister Lloyd George would have been glad to have continued this course but he will be compelled by the pressure of parliament to insist on the immediate clearing up of the atmosphere. Already a formidable group of unionist members of parliament have threatened to quit the coalition because the government consented to meet the Irish "rebels" and a good many others are uneasy and may join in the defection unless the situation is handled very delicately.

Some government circles believe that Mr. de Valera was influenced by Irish extremists in America who want to prevent Mr. Lloyd George's attendance at the Washington conference. If this is true the action could not have been more carefully planned, and it is now very uncertain if the prime minister will be able to leave.

It is practically certain that he will not go if the conference breaks down, because he will probably decide to hold a general election in order to secure a new mandate for dealing with Ireland.

Irish Delegates Hopeful.

The most hopeful phase of the situation is the fact that the Irish delegation here is just as anxious for peace as the British, and they are just as angry over Mr. de Valera's blunder, although, of course, they cannot express themselves as freely. In a private conversation today one of the Irish leaders referred to Mr. de Valera's action as "disastrous."

She Wants Divorce

Mrs. Walter Davidson Willett, wife of wealthy teaming contractor, who has sued him for divorce.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

WALTER DAVIDSON WILLETT, 220 East Pearson street, wealthy South Water street teaming contractor, found his second romance shattered yesterday when suit for divorce was filed by Margaret T. Willett.

His first wife, Mrs. Rose Frances Willett, 61 East Elm street, was granted a divorce from him in September, 1915, with $500 a month alimony. The present Mrs. Willett states in her bill that her husband has agreed to pay her $250 a month alimony.

Mrs. Willett alleges numerous acts of cruelty. They were married Dec. 26, 1916, she relates, and were happy together until about a year ago, when he commenced a course of "cruel and inhuman treatment."

DR. RUSSELL OF STILLMAN CASE CLEARED BY QUIZ

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 22.—[Special.]—Dr. Hugh L. Russell, osteopath of Buffalo, was exonerated today by the state osteopathic society of all charges of unethical conduct in testifying for James A. Stillman regarding statements Mrs. Stillman made to the physician as to the parentage of the boy Guy, then unborn.

For two days a committee of osteopaths went over a transcript of the evidence in the Stillman case, studied the code of civil procedure, and reported:

"The code of civil procedure seems to define a privileged communication in such a way as to throw a barrier of secrecy around the communications between patient and physician. There is a general belief on the part of the public and the profession that the communications of a patient to a physician are as inviolate as those to a lawyer or to a priest. It appears, however, that such is not the case.

"By court rulings the law has been so interpreted as to give the court and not the physician the right to decide whether information he received is privileged."

AUTOIST DIES OF FRIGHT.

EX-SERVICE MEN TO COST U. S. 20 BILLIONS BY 1946

Washington, D. C., Oct. 22.—Former service men will cost the United States government $20,000,000,000 within the next twenty-five years, declares Senator King, Utah, today to the United Press. Most of this great sum, King said, would be paid out of the treasury in some form of pension for the veterans of the world war. Bonuses and various kinds of allowances and benefits will make up the remainder, he said.

MERCY HOSPITAL WINS $1,000,000 ESTATE CONTEST

Supreme Court Ends Long Drawn Litigation.

Decisions upholding the contention of Mercy hospital that it is entitled to the estate of the late Charles H. Haines and sustaining the removal of Gordon H. Ramsay as public administrator of Cook county by Gov. Small were handed down yesterday by the state Supreme court at Springfield.

The Mercy hospital decision marks another chapter in the fight which Clarence Lasier and his sister, Josephine, grandnephew and grandniece of Mr. Haines, have waged in the courts of Cook and Kane counties.

Case Won, Lost, Won Again.

Charles Haines died in 1914, and a will, dated in 1907, was produced which gave the estate of more than $1,000,000 to his mother, and on her death it was to go to Mercy hospital and the board of education of St. Charles. The matter was fought and the right of the hospital and the board to the money was upheld.

Then another will, dated in 1887, was discovered, which gave the estate to the Lasiers, the 1907 will being thrown out by the Supreme court on the ground it did not revoke all previous wills.

The hospital asked, through Attorney George A. Cook of the law firm of Cook, Sullivan & Ricks, for a rehearing, and it was on this rehearing that yesterday's decision was based.

Ramsay Fights Removal.

The Ramsay decision was the result of a suit filed last spring by Mr. Ramsay, who protested that Gov. Small had no power to remove him from office and appoint a successor. The removal of Mr. Ramsay, which took place early in February, precipitated a long awaited fight in the senate between the administration and anti-administration forces.

Following the removal of Ramsay the governor appointed Gregory T. Van Meter as public administrator, and the court's decision wipes out the last obstacle to his occupancy of the office.

Convictions Are Affirmed.

The Supreme court also affirmed the convictions of Martin (Big Six) Sichs of participation in the robbery of a jewelry company in which $150,000 was taken, and William H., Oliver T., and James T. Paisley, who were sentenced in connection with the failure of their private banks.

UPTOWN CHICAGO BANS TRADE AT ITS EXPOSITION

Chicago's Uptown exposition in the Broadway armory from Nov. 1 to 5 probably will be the first affair of its kind ever held where the soliciting of business will not be permitted. With all of the exhibition space sold, the exhibitors have signed agreements not to try to sell their goods in the exposition.

Every large firm in the district bounded by Addison street, the north city limits, Ravenswood avenue and the lake will be represented in the commercial displays. The North Shore and Rogers Park Kiwanis clubs, all merchants' associations in the district, the north side banks and hotels, private schools, and the Senn High school also will have space.

There will be an elaborate flower show arranged by the Flower Growers' association and a fine arts exhibit under the direction of Albert F. Giddings.

Negro Follows Woman to Vestibule and Robs Her

Mrs. M. Friend, 5006 Harper avenue, was followed by a Negro yesterday and robbed of $12 in a vestibule to which she had run in an effort to escape him.

INITIATION STUNT CAUSES "ARREST" OF SORORITY GIRL

A pretty girl surrounded by a crowd in front of the Hotel Sherman yesterday attracted the attention of Mounted Policeman Frank J. Bartusek.

Bartusek rode over to investigate.

Pushing his way through the crowd he discovered the girl with her hands stretched out clutching several pennies.

A sign, "Please Help the Blind," was suspended from about her neck.

"What's the trouble?" asked Bartusek.

Suddenly the blind girl's eyes opened.

"What kind of a shindig is this?" asked Bartusek. "Guess I'll take you in to the lieutenant."

He did, in spite of the protests of five or six other pretty girls who swooped around him.

She told Lieut. Joseph O'Connell her name is Laura Haase of 4546 North Leavitt street. The incident at the hotel was caused by her initiation into the Ramie Girls' club.

HERE'S THE BAD NEWS ABOUT YOUR TAXES NEXT YEAR

Taxes in Chicago, payable next spring, will take a jump of not less than 40 per cent over the actual taxes paid in 1921.

The 40 per cent increase is the minimum that can be figured, with all the tax levies actually made, except that of the Lincoln Park district.

The estimated figures for Lincoln Park indicate an increase in North Town and Lake View that probably will exceed 45 per cent and possibly may go past a 50 per cent increase.

In the South Town, the Town of Lake and all over the west side and northwest side, the tax levies already reported to the county clerk, as fixed, have shown increase of more than 40 per cent over last year's actual tax.

As an example of what this increase means, the owner of a $3,000 property in the North Town or the Town of Lake View paid an actual tax of $88.35 in 1921. In 1922, in April, he will have to pay approximately $120 on the same property.

"WHAT JAPAN THINKS."

K. K. Kawakami, author of several books interpretative of Japanese policy, has collected in a volume titled "What Japan Thinks" a number of writings which, he says, were selected with an eye both to authority and genuineness of expression. They are so far as possible documents addressed by prominent Japanese to Japanese, not utterances designed for effect abroad. They are to represent the natural outgiving of the Japanese mind in circumstances inviting the greatest candor.

Marquis Okuma writes of "The Illusions of the White Race," Baron Goto of "The Japanese Question in America," Vice Admiral Sato of "Japan's Navalism," Premier Takashi Hara on "Harmony Between East and West," etc. There are articles by Japanese professors, historians, and publicists.

The general impression which the collection makes is that another kultur is asserting its destiny. The line of Japanese thought runs along the line of pre-war German thought and it gets its expression through the same agencies, the professor, the naval authority, the morals teacher, and the publicist who extols the superiority of breed, of international morals, and of the monarchical institution.

There is further in undertone or in vehement statement the intimation or assertion that a superior kultur shall not be deprived of recognition, of an extended place, and of hegemony.

Democracy, says a Japanese editor, makes a world that is safe only for crime, dishonesty in government, and a waste and inefficiency that is appalling. The Japanese are united under a great, far seeing, and unselfish monarch. The Japanese navy is not directed at any other navy but is planned and constructed to be consistent with the needs of Japanese life and development. Crumbling processes have begun all over the world, but not in Japan.

A professor praises the warlike spirit and its service. Japan is to save her Asiatic neighbors from Europeans who despoil and degrade them. There must be a free Asia with no foreign interference. The British and the Americans probably will fight, and in that case Japan must be prepared to use her naval and other forces to swing the result of the war in the direction of her greatest interests. The United States is a military nation, only occasionally, in frank statements such as were made by Daniels, revealing its purpose. The United States applies its Monroe Doctrine to the Americas, but it violates the same doctrine in Asia.

The international morality of British, French, Americans, etc., is bad. That of Japan is good. The United States denies equality and equity to the world's purest breed, produced by the purest kultur. Its occupation of the Philippines is militaristic. Its opposition to Japanese expansion in Asia is an odd comment on its own expansion there.

The league of nations refused to accept the doctrine of race equality, but it will be pressed again and will have to be accepted. All races may not be equally intelligent as yet, but all are equal. Japan may become a Christian nation, but it will be Japanese Christianity created from the teaching of Christ himself, who can be understood by the Japanese because he was an Asiatic. It will not derive anything from white Christianity.

The foregoing is the general tenor of the collection of writings edited to reveal the intimate and candid thought of the Japanese. Several underlying grievances are indicated. Probably they all resolve into one—the feeling that because of the white assertion of moral, intellectual, and social superiority Asia has been regarded merely as a field of exploitation.

The Japanese doctrine, which Americans must concede has an American counterpart, is that Asia is for the Asiatics; also that it is Japan's duty and the privilege of her kultur to put the Asiatic on equal footing with the white.

The Washington conference is to try to turn the currents of thought and action into channels where they can be controlled. If the questions of the Pacific are left to take their own course it is difficult to see how they could escape coming to violence.

It may be impossible for diplomacy to eradicate at once from the Japanese mind that Japanese civilization is regarded as inferior. That is not true of the United States. If race equality meant, as in its final test it generally means, the intermingling of races in marriage, there is no solution and could not be one which would not injure both races.

If race equality means mutual courtesy, consideration, and friendliness, that is a condition which any two sensible peoples ought to be able to establish. If peace between the United States and Japan can be maintained by a nonaggressive American policy in Asia, that certainly can be guaranteed by America. We want free, peaceable relations with Asia and not territory or military control.

The destinies of America and Japan have brought the two nations into contact and might bring them into conflict, but if there can be a temporary check for a term of years, as is possible in understanding and agreement, their destinies may take care of themselves naturally and without war.

OUR DANGEROUS OUTSKIRTS.

Theodore Roosevelt thought that if Germany won the war, the United States remaining out of it, the Germans would soon be entering the Caribbean. He did not believe that they would directly declare a war of retaliation and compensation upon America, but that they would provoke one by seizing islands or parts of Central or South American mainland.

The German defeat transferred German colonies and German islands to the allies of the United States. A German victory might have transferred many allied possessions to Germany. It might have transferred the British West Indies to Germany.

Germany certainly would have wanted Bermuda. If Roosevelt's apprehensions were as truly prophetic as they were plausible and logical, Germany would have started a plan of expansion and colonization over here by getting a naval base.

The United States, although in the winning combination, did not keep Japan from acquiring the German Pacific islands north of the equator and thus bottling up our own stronghold at Guam. There would have been nothing to keep a winning Germany from acquiring Bermuda, and then American troubles would have begun.

A German fleet in St. George's harbor would have changed the prospects of the United States, and unless America had declared war instantly nothing could have prevented an enemy camping on the American doorstep.

There is the danger of the transfer of a strategic island from a nation which is friendly to a nation which is not, and it will exist so long as naval bases along the American coast and American lines of communication are owned in Europe or Asia. When they change hands they change conditions.

The United States was in a fine position to clean up the situation when it entered the war. If we had not been so beguiled by specious reasons for fighting and had really understood that it was a war of self-defense, we might have added to our defenses by making the transfer of British and French naval bases a part compensation for the American contribution to success.

Our position is not so good now, but it is better than it will be later. The nations which own the naval bases could settle part of the debt to the United States and prove their good will by transferring islands which are necessary to American defense. That would not strip them of anything they need and it would give the United States what it does need.

A RESERVOIR OF JOBS.

Out of the national conference on unemployment which has just finished its sessions in Washington comes one finding of chief importance. It is that the present lack of employment is to a large extent a periodic evil, an expansion of the lesser, but similar, evil of seasonal occupation.

It is clear that unemployment and business depression, employment and business prosperity, are closely related. They move in cycles. One is dependent upon the other. It is difficult to say with which lies the chief responsibility for tendencies upward or downward. But it is not difficult to conclude that if provision could be made in times of business prosperity to put brakes upon a business decline by providing specially to prevent unemployment when such decline starts, the progress of business would be much smoother, with fewer peaks and valleys, and much greater stability.

Seasonal employment, offering a regular annual illustration of the disadvantages of such ups and downs, both for the employé and the employer, serves to make the point clear. Thus in the coal business, normally, demand falls off greatly in the spring and summer months. The result is that the miners work perhaps a day or two a week. In order to bring their annual wage up to a living standard they demand a high price for this minimum of work. The railroads have many coal cars idle in the same period. They must pay for their investment and depreciation of this idle rolling stock, and they pay for it with high rates in the winter, when the demand is great. The operators take their profit in the same way. If the production of coal could be made even throughout the year, the miner could obtain a much greater annual income with less pay per day, the railroads could handle the coal at a lower rate, and the operators and dealers might make a fair profit at much lower prices.

All that is just for illustration. In the same way, if such periodic slumps as that which is now upon the country could be avoided by keeping up employment even artificially in times of depression, such periods would be less severe and extended. For instance, if the great demand for labor in 1919 could have been reduced at that time and taken care of in 1921, there would be no serious depression now. Of course that would be an ideal development, difficult to work out, but it is worth an effort.

Thus the news that a committee of the recent conference has suggested that railroads, public utilities, and other large employers of labor put aside financial reserves for expanding their businesses in times of depression is good news. It is practical. By placing in reserve during prosperous periods 10 per cent of the annual amount spent for construction, employers would be able to tide over and possibly even to check periods of depression.

If no other constructive suggestion comes out of the conference, that one would be worth the time and expense involved if it is taken to heart and pushed along by those interested. A hopeful sign that it will be pushed is contained in the authorization of Secretary Hoover to appoint a permanent committee to continue the work started. If it can thus develop a reservoir of jobs for the future, such crises as that through which we are now passing will be far less frequent in the future.

Editorial of the Day

BUT IT ISN'T FREE.

[Decatur Review.]

Just now we are hearing a good deal about "free" tolls for certain American ships through the Panama canal. It will be well for us to get it clear in our minds there is no such thing as free tolls through this canal. The ship owners may not have to pay, but in this case the public must.

It costs a great lot of money to operate and keep the canal going. The country generally was to the expense of building this canal, and now it will be lucky if it can get from ship tolls sufficient money to pay for running it. It will never get this money unless it collects tolls from all ships using the canal.

Letting American ships go through without payment of tolls means that the American people will be called on each year to furnish a few million dollars to make up the deficit; this money will be got from the people through some form of burdensome taxation.

We may not collect from ships of the Standard Oil company, W. R. Grace & Co., the Pacific Mail Steamship company, the United Steel Products company, the Union Oil company, and many others when they use the canal, but let us not be simple enough to imagine the service is free. If those ships don't pay the public of America must.

It strikes one that it is only the fair thing to ask that those who use the canal pay the bills. Why should they be paid by those who don't use it?

WHEN SUMMER DIES.

When summer dies, and all the trees
Are vibrant with sad memories,
And lovely gardens, lately gold,
Are lying prostrate in the mold,
There come, upon the swelling breeze,
From distant isles and sunny seas,
A host of fragrant memories,
And I am young—however old—
When summer dies.

I wander widely as I please
And capture heavy argosies
Of youthful dreams; with spirit bold
I seek far lands—though winds grow cold,
And sunset brings uncertainties—
And summer dies.

THE story of Laura's dual identity is traveling around the world. Here is a clipping from the Vienna, Austria, Daily News:

> In a great Chicago daily there appeared regularly for many weeks poems that recalled the insight and typical style of Keats and Shelley. These poems attained in the shortest time such admiration and popularity that a group of adorers and admirers got together and decided to honor the poetess, Laura Blackburn, with a formal dinner. They wrote to the authoress they admired, who had won their admiration to such a degree, and received from her to their great satisfaction an assent which was limited by only one condition, that the poetess might remain unknown till the hour of the toasts. This condition was, of course, accepted. As the first toasts were proposed the celebrated poetess stood up. She was a big and strong young man, heavy set. There was much laughter, but there was also not a little disappointment.

Philardee, who sent the clipping, writes: "Lest we forget, I have great admiration for his form of worshiping the muse, tho' I prefer vers libre. Incidentally, the prize of $50 offered by YOUTH, for the best free verse poem, has been raised to $100. I might add that the best thing about Puberty is Youth."

Sir: To what base uses do we mortals come? Memory is the only friend that grief can call its own. How many times in the long ago have I been the fleeting guest of mine host of the Red Lion, or Cross Keys, at the jovial season of the year, when peace on earth, good will to men, sup up lads, and come again was the order of the evening. The punch bowl with silver ladle was the pièce de résistance. Many old fellows of 80 years up (the old reprobates) could sing a song, dance a jig, and enjoy life and liberty. Not in America. This all took place in then and may be now, Merrie England. Of course these rambling remarks lead up to my information to you (if within the law), to the fact that I have just bought for friend wife a Tom and Jerry bowl, gold names and everything. This when filled with Dutch Bulbs will be a thing of beauty and a joy for months. What thinkest thou of my idea—brilliant, eh what, old chappie? YORKS.

SONG.

Over the land and sea,
Around the world, my dear,
With never one for me
But she who greets me here.
The ports I made were strange,
And strange the stars, my own,
But never once the change
Could make me feel alone.

Within my heart I heard
Your voice, as here and now;
My spirit seemed a bird
Upon your garden bough—
The bird that sang at morn,
The bird that sang at eve,
Too young to be forlorn,
Too happy, love, to grieve.

DYING FRANCE.

THIS month a congress of doctors will meet at Bordeaux to discuss the case of a very sick patient. The sickness has lasted a long time—almost 100 years. The patient is emaciated and the steady downward course indicates a fatal termination within 100 years unless something radical is done. The patient is France and the consultation of physicians is the National Congress on Natality.

France now has about 3,500,000 population less than it had ten years ago, not counting Alsace-Lorraine. In 1873 the birth rate of France was considerably above the death rate. At that time the population of France was not many millions below that of Germany.

The birth rate fell steadily while the death rate kept level, so that by 1889 the population was at a standstill. For twenty-five years, or until 1914, the two rates were about the same. Sometimes one was on top and sometimes the other. Since 1914 the birth rate has been much the lower. This low birth rate tendency has spread over France like a contagious disease. The disease started in Normandy soon after 1800. By 1830 the province of Garonne had caught it. By the middle of the last century the Champagne and Marne districts had contracted it. It is now in nine-tenths of the provinces and has spread across the channel to England, to the neighboring cantons in Switzerland, and nearby provinces in Italy and Belgium.

When Germany forced France to pay several billions indemnity in 1872, she struck at the life of the conquered country far harder than people realized. The Frenchmen economized to raise the money to pay.

But unfortunately they economized in babies as well as dollars. The birth rate dropped. Will Germany likewise economize in babies in its effort to get the money to pay its conquerors and thus weaken another great white nation?

But not all of the decrease in the French birth rate is due to the German indemnity. Stowman, whose interesting study in the International Journal of Public Health discusses family income, family wealth, the Napoleonic code and its tax on inheritance, racial decay, inherited disease, diseases causing sterility, all in relation to birth rate, says they are all factors, but no one is a dominating influence.

He quotes Bertillon as saying the low birth rate of France is a voluntary sterility. He also quotes the theory of Dumont that it is due to the harmful influence of social capillarity, by which is meant the general desire to rise into a higher class without any serious productive work or original intellectual contributions.

No doubt the primary cause of this race suicide is to be found in certain cultural dispositions and peculiarly contagious notions. The invincible, unselfish spirit embodied in the slogans, "Pour la Patrie" and "Ils ne passeront pas," command the admiration of the world, but they are a hollow mockery in the face of a declining population due to a low birth rate and a high death rate.

DON'T LET HER BE FRIGHTENED.

Mrs. J. S. R. writes: "Twice you have sent me baby feeding schedules. I wish to thank you, as they were quite a help. In return let me tell you how our little girl, nearly 7 years old, stopped stammering. She began to stammer nearly a year ago and grew worse all winter. In the spring I took her out of school and tried to use what advice I could from 'Speech Training for Children.' This helped some, as she began to prolong the words instead of repeating them. For instance, she said m-a-a-a-a-ma instead of m-m-m-m-mama. However, one day when she was talking better than usual I offered her a reward of two privileges that I knew she desired more than anything else if she would quit stammering. That was at least two months ago. She rarely stammers now, having conquered the habit immediately on being offered the reward. She received the reward after one week of good speech. Do you think she will ever stammer again?"

REPLY.

Continue the training until her mental equilibrium is well established. Should she undergo a profound mental shock, such as fright, she might begin stammering again. Guard her against that.

SIGN OF NERVOUSNESS.

Mrs. L. J. W. writes: "I have a 3 year old child and her appetite is poor. She seems to be healthy enough, but will not eat. What shall I do?"

REPLY.

A 3 year old child should eat from the table. She should have a pint and a half of milk, plenty of good bread, not too fresh; plenty of cereal, all fruits except those that are very sour, cooked vegetables, except corn; simple desserts and about an ounce of meat a day. Feeding her is a matter of discipline, combined with tact, but she must eat. Finicky appetite is one of the earlier signs of nervousness, peculiar personality and erratic mentality. It calls for training. Have her out of doors as much as possible.

WALK IS FAR BETTER.

H. C. R. writes: "Which is the better thing to do—take a nap after a meal or walk?"

REPLY.

If you are too thin and want to get fat, take a nap; otherwise take a walk.

AMBITIONS AT 17.

J. M. writes: "1. Is it dangerous to drink tea morning, noon, and night? 2. I am almost 17 years old and would like to know if I can start smoking a pipe or cigarets. If so, which do you think advisable?"

REPLY.

1. You might stand it a long time, but it would be too much for you and would do you no good.
2. Neither.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

Letters to this department must be signed with names and addresses of the writers.

YOU'RE TOO YOUNG.

Cicero, Ill., Oct. 17.—[Friend of the People.]—I am 20 years old and will be 21 April 2, 1922.

I took out my first papers for citizenship June 25, 1917, giving my age as 18 in order to enlist in the army. I enlisted the same day. I was discharged from the army by reason of 1st Ind. war department A. G. O. Aug. 10, 1917, on account of fraudulent enlistment. My character was fair.

Can my age be changed on my first paper without marring the oath? How can I get my citizen paper? J. H.

A declaration of intention filed by a person under 18 years of age is invalid and the person should file a new declaration of intention after reaching the age of 18.
FRED J. SCHLOTFELDT,
Chief Naturalization Examiner.

HUNGRY TOURISTS.

Chicago, Oct. 16.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you please let me know if the owner of a farm has any right to prevent tourists or others from picking up from the middle of a public roadway, fruit or nuts that may drop from the trees which are located outside of the owner's fence, or in other words, trees that are growing in the roadway? J. G. T.

If the farmer owns the roadway, subject only to easement in the public, he owns the fruit, etc. If the state owns the roadway in fee simple, he does not have right to prevent them. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

REPAIRED WITH CINDERS.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—[Friend of the People.]—The alley in the rear of the 7000 block of North Paulina street is in need of investigation. When it rains the water stands for days in great puddles and the cans and garbage from an adjoining vacant lot float out into the alley. It is an abominable sight and certainly not sanitary. J. S. B.

The alley back of this number has been repaired with cinders and the tin cans have been removed.
THOS. H. BYRNE, Superintendent of Streets.

THIEVING CHILDREN.

Chicago, Oct. 16.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Two small girls about 8 or 10 years old are continually stealing our mail. One of the girls belongs to our landlady, and if the incident is reported to her she only says, "Well, if you don't like it you can move." The mail box is broken and the landlady will not have it fixed, so it is quite easy for any one to steal our mail.

Is it possible to prosecute the landlady? S. I. M.

No. We advise you to have the lock fixed.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

IT COULD BE WORSE.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—[Friend of the Peopel.]—We wish you would loose the street and alley department into our alley. For ten weeks we have been trying to get it cleaned. There is all kinds of rubbish and an assorted lot of tin cans out there which should be taken away. R. S. B.

This is an unimproved private and blind alley and was thoroughly cleaned on Oct. 4 in its regular turn. Conditions were not as bad there as they were represented to be.
THOS. H. BYRNE, Superintendent of Streets.

MORE IDEAS ON IMPROVING LOCAL CAR SERVICE.

Chicago, Oct. 11.—Your timely editorial, "Chicago Must Dig Its Way Out," offers but one of the several aids to a more rapid street car transportation that must be accomplished. Another aid would be the "compulsory elimination of vehicles other than street cars from street car tracks."

To accomplish this would necessitate the retiring of all existing paving between rails and the prohibition of future paving between rails except at street intersections and the loop. This retirement will result in a depressed surface between the rails. Redrafting of parking ordinance in the loop will also be an attendant necessity.

The practicability of the scheme has been proven in several cities of the east, south and northwest, mainly St. Paul and Minneapolis.

There are many points in favor of and against the accomplishing of the projects and they can be in general summed up as follows:

To surface lines:

Benefits—Future operating economies resulting from the elimination of tearing up and repaving blocks on tie or rail renewal projects. Discontinuance of street cleaning work.

Immediate reduction in investment account and future reduction in fixed charges.

Lesser amount of new capital requirements for extensions of existing lines and construction of new lines.

To surface lines:

Objections—Initial expenditure to perform the work, including installation of track drainage system.

Large charge to either operating expenses or profit and loss resulting from retirement of present paving. While project is an intangible betterment to the property, it is a physical detriment to the investment book value of the property.

To people:

Benefits—More rapid transit.

Temporary unemployment aid, safety first aid.

Possible decrease in fares if arrived at from either valuation or operating expense rate base.

Objections—Certain team and automobile owners or drivers now classed as "road hogs." T. I. W.

HASTEN THE OPEN SHOP FOR CARPENTERS.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—Why do not the building contractors declare for the open shop at once against the carpenters who at present are blocking the building boom? If this were done many carpenters now idle would go to work at once for they would then know where they stand. At present they fear a certain ring among the contractors and the business agents may get together at any time. In such a condition they would be in a bad plight; they would be outlawed by the unions and of course would not be employed by the contractors. If this point were once settled there would be no difficulty in getting carpenters, all of whom worthy of the name wish to be at work. CHIPS.

IF GOVERNMENT DOES SO ILL BY THE SOLDIERS, HOW CAN IT BE EXPECTED TO DO BETTER WITH THE RAILROADS!

Beloit, Wis., Oct. 17.—After reading the statements of brotherhood chiefs as well as executive heads but one course seems open—bust them all. For several years I have had a certain sympathy with labor; likewise, when the merits of the case warranted, with capital.

But, as far as the two institutions are concerned, especially in connection with the railroads, it is certainly time that some outside agency, the federal government of the United States, should step in. If the people of the United States are to be incessantly under the domination of two opposing forces, working for mercenary motives only, then there is but one alternative: place the railroads under governmental control to a greater degree than at present.

As an ex-soldier, it is an interesting diversion to read about the quibblings of congress. Those high minded men working diligently to reduce the taxes for certain deserving capitalists is inspiring. Also they have devised means to aid the farmer, the banks, and certainly they sold their birthright for a mess of porridge when they calmly donated huge sums to the railroads, the poor industrial "war cripples."

Whether the railroad men deserve a cut or whether rates should be reduced is beside the issue when it comes to the treatment of the ex-soldier.

We are burdened with high passenger and freight rates, war taxes, and scarcity of work, still the ex-soldier is supposed to have a smile. Capital and labor may have their day, but we who had that vacation in France from the laborious task of "raking in the jack" will yet have our day. ROBERT T. EDWARDS.

A DANGEROUS SOLUTION OF UNEMPLOYMENT.

South Raub, Ind., Oct. 15.—I note that the manufacturers' committee at Washington conference on unemployment recommends as a solution "part time work."

This would be the worst thing that could be done. It would result in a condition more extreme than the 1919 demand for a six hour day. Labor would settle down to it with delight and expect "a living wage" to cover a full day's living for four or five hours' work. It would be at the expense of farm laborers and farm owners. The cause of unemployment is the price of a bushel of corn.

The only cure is to nullify the effect of bankrupt Europe. Europe normally buys a larger percentage of our total production of foodstuffs than of our manufactured articles. Bankrupt Europe has forced down food producers' prices. Industrial labor prices and prices of every thing that is determined by the labor price must come down in the same proportion as corn has come down. Among these prices which must come down are middleman's costs and profits (labor) in handling food products, interest (bankers' labor), janitors' salaries, etc. Note in this regard that the cost of farm labor has nothing to do with producers' prices. "RAILROAD WORKING RULES."

Chicago, Oct. 16.—In the issue of today under the caption of "Railroad Working Rules," written by one "J. M."

To a railroader of thirty years' experience this is amusing, to think THE TRIBUNE would publish such an article, when there are a few hundred of the best known railroad men in the United States in attendance at their wage session in this city.

J. M. might by having a little actual experience [which he evidently has never had], find out that he is slightly twisted in his writeup, as the men who work these tricks are usually extra men, and are on the waiting list for permanent assignments, and are quite often, yes, daily required to put in from fourteen and a half hours to even more and often fifteen or sixteen hours, in order to receive eight hours' pay. He must go to the office and sign the extra list, an hour or so ahead of the usual assigned hours for these lunch reliefs, say 10 a. m., wait around the office until 12 when the men are relieved for their lunches, work about two hours, maybe four, and again show up for the evening assignments or supper reliefs. He is practically up and ready for duty from 8 a. m. until possibly 6 p. m., ten hours, with two hours' work; if he is lucky at 6 p. m. he may get in two to four hours more. He arises at 8 a. m., signs up at 10, gets away evenings about 10 p. m.; he has been fourteen hours getting in this eight hour work. L. A. C.

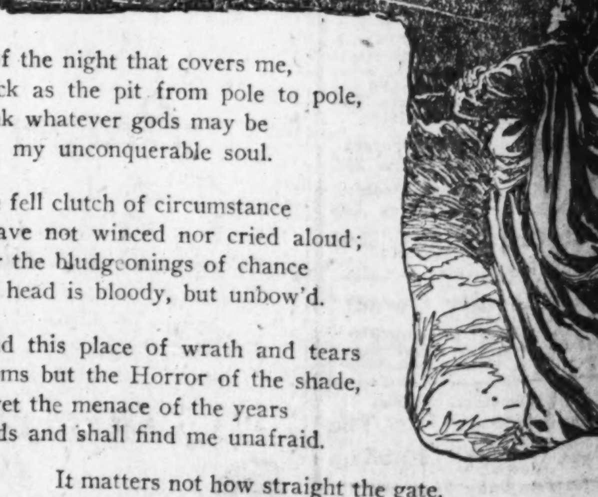
BUT "A MASON NEVER TELLS" THAT BARS THOSE WHO WOULD TELL.

Marshfield, Wis., Oct. 15.—I notice in today's TRIBUNE the "Editorial of the Day," called "Ku Klux Klan—Laugh 'Em Off," and taken from the New York Daily News, in which the statement is made that the Masonic order in general excludes Catholics. This is incorrect; the Masonic order does not exclude any man except atheists. THOMAS MADISON PARSONS.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

INVICTUS.

By W. E. Henley.



Out of the night that covers me,
Black as the pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods may be
For my unconquerable soul.

In the fell clutch of circumstance
I have not winced nor cried aloud;
Under the bludgeonings of chance
My head is bloody, but unbow'd.

Beyond this place of wrath and tears
Looms but the Horror of the shade,
And yet the menace of the years
Finds and shall find me unafraid.

It matters not how straight the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of my fate;
I am the captain of my soul.

RED FOES OF U. S. THREATEN PARIS REIGN OF TERROR

Warn Briand Not to Balk Parade Today.

PARIS, Oct. 22.—[United Press.]—France is threatened with the red terror if the government dares interfere with the communist demonstration at the American embassy tomorrow.

The internationale tonight warned Premier Briand that he must take the consequences if his police and troops attempt to halt the march on the embassy. Throughout Paris tonight communists were openly defying the government's decree against the demonstration.

The prefect of police made preparations to have thousands of police and troops massed in the streets leading to the embassy tomorrow to prevent the Reds from carrying out their plan to converge upon the building through eight avenues and demand release of Sacco and Vanzetti, Italian radicals convicted of murder in America.

Will Use All Police.

"The most rigorous measures will be taken to prevent this demonstration," a high police official said. "We will use all the police in Paris if necessary."

Ambassador Herrick will spend Sunday in the country, but it was made plain this was because of a previous engagement and not through fear of the Reds. Despite the wishes of his friends, Mr. Herrick has refused to alter his daily routine.

Among sixty letters and resolutions delivered at the embassy today, demanding release of Sacco and Vanzetti, were two which threatened Herrick with death. One was written in red ink in Italian. The other was inscribed on mourning paper with a deep black border.

Find Bomb Was Powerful.

The police today examined the bomb found under a bench in a street near Wagram hall, where a bomb was thrown during the communist meeting last night. It was of a most powerful nature, packed with cheddite, a high explosive.

Following the explosion at Wagram hall last night one wounded man and one wounded woman were arrested.

At least five persons were injured in the Reds' demonstration against the United States consulate at Havre, today's dispatches say. The mob fought with the police.

Radicals Busy in Italy.

ROME, Oct. 22.—[United Press.]—Communist demonstrations demanding release of Sacco and Vanzetti, Italian radicals convicted of murder in the United States, occurred throughout Italy today. The central anarchist organization ordered every massmeeting to telegraph a protest to American Ambassador Child, but to make no threats.

FOCH WILL "BUNK" WITH PERSHING IN GREAT K. C. HOME

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 22.—Marshal Foch and Gen. Pershing will occupy the beautiful home of Irwin B. Kirkwood, son-in-law of the late William Rockhill Nelson, founder of the Kansas City Star, during their visit to Kansas City to attend the national convention of the American Legion.

Plans for Marshal Foch's entertainment, aside from the official part in connection with the convention, where he will deliver a greeting to America, have largely been left open to find out from the marshal just what he most wants to do and see.

He has been quoted as saying that he hoped to be able to eat dinner in the home of some former private, "not a banquet," but just "drop in for supper," and "take pot luck."

50,000 TO MARCH IN FOCH PARADE

A call was issued last evening for the 45,000 Knights of Columbus in Cook county, and 5,000 more from other cities in the northern part of Illinois to march in the parade for Marshal Foch in Chicago on the afternoon of Nov. 6.

The mobilization of these forces will be effected through twenty-six district deputies and seventy-five grand knights of the order who were summoned last evening to a dinner and organization meeting for the Foch reception at the Hotel Sherman Wednesday evening.

Invitations are to be extended to other Catholic organizations to participate in the parade, and knights from outside Illinois have already made inquiries that indicate that at least twenty state banners will be carried in the march.

BETROTHED

MISS ISABELLA HOLT.
[Photo by Moffett.]

ANNOUNCEMENT was made yesterday by Mrs. Charles S. Holt, 38 Bellevue place, of the engagement of her daughter, Isabella, to Haldeman Finnie of Detroit.

Miss Holt has been in the limelight recently because of the forthcoming publication by Macmillan & Co. of her first novel, "The Marriotts and the Powells." She formerly was the president of the Junior league and is one of the best known young women in Chicago society. In addition to her literary work Miss Holt is a portrait painter of ability.

Miss Holt and her mother will sail for Europe early next month, so her marriage will not take place until after her return.

CHARITIES PLEAD FOR CASH TO AID KIN OF JOBLESS

At least $250,000 more than the normal support given the United Charities will be needed to care for Chicago's poor this winter because of the unemployment situation, it was announced in an appeal for more funds by an official of the charities organization yesterday.

"More than 100,000 able bodied men are tramping the streets looking for work, but unable to find it," says the appeal. "Their wives and children must be given temporary support until the wage earners find jobs."

Recently requests for aid, the appeal adds, were sent to 42,000 prominent Chicagoans. Responses numbered only 1,268, totaling $20,000, while in September the society cared for 51 per cent more families than in September, 1920, at an expense of over $50,000.

9 Doctors on the Carpet in Drive on Diphtheria

Nine physicians whose patients died of diphtheria in the last ten days were called before the diphtheria hearing board yesterday by Health Commissioner Robertson.

"In cases, if any, where criminal negligence is shown, the grand jury will be asked to make an inquiry," said Assistant State's Attorney Ernest S. Hodges.

Several of the nine physicians were warned that their actions "bordered on criminal negligence."

HOW ART CAN AID IN BEATING RENT PROFITEERS TOLD

Would Turn Old Houses Into Beauty Spots.

Practical plans for circumventing the profiteering landlord by turning the large, roomy spaces of old dwellings into artistic one room apartments was the subject of a lecture given by Lionel Robertson, friend of the struggling artist, on "The Home Beautiful" in the Fine Arts academy yesterday afternoon.

His talk was the second of six being given Saturday afternoons for prospective home builders and the many families whom the high cost of modern apartments has driven to seek shelter in the older class of dwellings.

Tells Importance of Color.

Mr. Robertson made an appeal to the student artists who, because of their limited means, are compelled to rent almost any available space, and showed them how easily they could turn an "eyesore" into a beauty spot by a little attention to color effects and the proper arrangement of furniture.

"Color is one of the most essential things to consider when you are fitting a one, two or three room apartment," said Mr. Robertson. "It is of utmost importance that the color scheme of a small space be in perfect harmony or the entire 'homey' effect will be spoiled."

Among the patronesses at the Robertson lectures are Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, Mrs. Edgar Lee Masters, Mrs. Joseph B. Long, Mrs. Charles Hough, Miss Olga Menn, and members of the Junior Friends of Art.

Will List Vacant Houses.

Details of his new plan to solve rent questions and to alleviate suffering this winter were announced yesterday by Judge Bernard P. Barasa of the Rentals court.

Aid of the police department, the Cook County Real Estate board, the Chicago Real Estate board, and the Chicago Tenants' Protective league was enlisted in the cause at a meeting held Friday in Judge Barasa's chambers.

According to Judge Barasa, the patrolmen will receive slips on which they will list all vacant apartments or apartments soon to be vacant.

The lists thus completed will be returned to Judge Barasa to be used for the information of the court, as well as the landlord or tenant who may be interested. The public will have free access to the list.

Dilly's Dogs Drive Wife Into Court for Divorce

William Dilly's pet dogs, according to his wife, enjoyed all the comforts of his luxurious home at Berwyn, while she lived in a room "more fit for a kennel than for a human being."

Therefore Mrs. Dilly filed suit for divorce yesterday. The bill sets her husband's annual income at $50,000 and states that a girl named Gertrude had crossed her husband's romantic trail.

Better Buy Some Candles, Folks, Coal Oil's Going Up

Chicagoans will pay more for kerosene beginning tomorrow. An advance of 1 cent a gallon in station tank wagon prices for all grades, with four exceptions, was announced yesterday by the Standard Oil company of Indiana. Three grades will advance 1½ cents and a fourth grade will advance 1.45 cents a gallon. These advances art a reflection of the recent sharp advances in crude oil prices.

BID VENIZELOS, 'GREEK SAVIOR,' TO VISIT CITY

Legionnaires Want Him Here Armistice Day.

Eleutherios Venizelos, former Greek premier, has been invited to be the guest of the American Legion in Chicago on Armistice day by a joint meeting of Hellenic post, Sig-Yeo post, and Camp Grant post.

"The American Legion is composed of men who fought for the same ideals that Venizelos strove for," said a resolution passed at the meeting. "As premier of Greece, he was instrumental in bringing the Hellenic armies on the side of the allies."

A committee, composed of A. A. Pantelis, D. A. Tasiopoulos, and A. N. Papadopoulos, was appointed to meet the famous Greek statesman and his bride, who arrived in New York the other day on their honeymoon.

Praises His Countryman.

"When history speaks of Venizelos, he will be described as a kingmaker and a king breaker," said P. S. Lambros, publisher of the Greek Star, last night.

"It was this lion hearted patriot who blocked the game of Germany and saved the allies in the Balkans. Venizelos was the father of the Balkan alliance against Turkey and succeeded. He was the father of the Greco-Roumanian alliance against Bulgaria and he succeeded.

"He saved Greece for a greater nation, made the restoration of Serbia possible, brought about the eventual surrender of Bulgaria, which was the beginning of the collapse of the central powers, eliminated Turkey from Europe . . . and he won the support of England, France and America during the peace conference.

Defeated by Leeds' Millions.

"We hear about the ungratefulness of the Greeks toward their liberator, and we hear that Mrs. Leeds' millions contributed toward his defeat . . . but he was crowned, like Demosthenes, when he returned from the peace conference to Athens.

"He made his famous philippic speeches against Constantine, as Demosthenes did against Philip, and met a similar defeat.

"Thousands of Greeks in Chicago and in neighboring states are waiting to welcome him with shouts of 'Zeto Venizelos!' Samuel Insull, president of the Commercial club, has invited him to be the guest of his club. Similar invitations have been extended by the Association of Commerce, the City club, the American Legion, the Sunday Evening club and several Greek organizations, as well as by Mrs. Lambros and myself."

Relative of Bergdoll Sails Secretly, Taking $100,000?

New York, Oct. 22.—[Special.]—Albert Hall, brother-in-law of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, left today on the Holland-America line steamship Nieuw Amsterdam. He is reported to be taking $100,000 to the expatriate in Germany. Hall had tipped a steward and department of justice agents had difficulty in locating him.

FIVE CASTAWAYS RESCUED FROM SUPERIOR ISLAND

Sault Ste. Marie, Oct. 22.—[Special.]—Harry Murray, his wife and three children, ranging in age from 4 to 16 years, who had been marooned on a small island in Lake Superior for two weeks, were brought to this port today by a coast guard patrol boat.

Murray is a cranberry picker. He was taken with his family to Iroquois island, seventeen miles from here, by a berry buyer named Mills on Sept. 27. They had a small tent.

Mills got into financial trouble and his boat was seized for debt. He had no boat or money with which to go to the island, and the Murrays were left there.

The stranded family built a rude shack and kept their campfire going. They lived by eating birds, fish, and cranberries. Thursday a fisherman sighted their fire. He notified the coast guard station, which wired to the Sault and the U. S. S. 752 went to the rescue last night.

ASSASSIN SLAYS WOMAN; ESCAPES; BOY SEES FLIGHT

MRS. IDA HOROSKO

Mrs. Ida Horosko was murdered early yesterday in her apartment at 509 East 29th street.

Her assassin, seen fleeing from the place by a young boy, left no clews behind, either as to his identity or indicating his motive.

The dead woman's money and jewelry were found on a table, intact. Beside the table, on the floor, her body sprawled, and, although most of her clothing had been torn to shreds, the police found no evidence of violence other than that caused by the knife which stabbed her to death.

ALD. HADERLEIN AND ALD. BRIESKE HAVE A 'RUCTION'

Ald. Leo M. Brieske and Ald. John Haderlein of the Twenty-fourth ward, both Democrats, are at sword's points.

"Haderlein is trying to run the ward and the public shoud know he isn't a real Democrat—he's a Lundin-Thompson Democrat," says Brieske.

"Some of these new aldermen have heads too big for their hats," is Ald. Haderlein's comeback.

"Haderlein's giving away public property," retorts Brieske.

The trouble comes from the closing of an alley near the Stewart-Warner Speedometer corporation's plant.

"I complained to Deputy Commissioner of Public Works Burkhardt, who seemed to know all about it," said Brieske, "and he sent a street inspector with me to order gates the company placed in the alley taken down. Speedometer officials told me they had Haderlein's permission to place the gates."

In reply to which Haderlein says he was in Germany and couldn't have O. K.'d such action.

And there you are.

New York, Oct. 22.—[United Press.]—Six bandits—known to the police as the "red mask gang"—raided a fashionable card game in Brooklyn early today and robbed the guests of $2,000 in cash and diamonds.

ARREST TWO AS HEADS OF STOLEN AUTO 'EXCHANGE'

A scheme whereby automobiles stolen in Minneapolis and St. Paul have been systematically driven to Chicago and sold here was nipped yesterday by the police with the arrest in Hotel Sherman of Irving Baer, 1339 South Springfield avenue, and in Minneapolis of Lawrence Bardine, owner of a motor sales company there.

Baer was arrested while attempting to sell an automobile recently stolen in Minneapolis, and when two other cars from the same source were found in his garage, he is said by the police to have confessed and implicated Bardine.

"He drives to Chicago in stolen cars, registers at the Morrison as Louis P. Meyers, and turns the cars over to me to sell," Baer is quoted as saying.

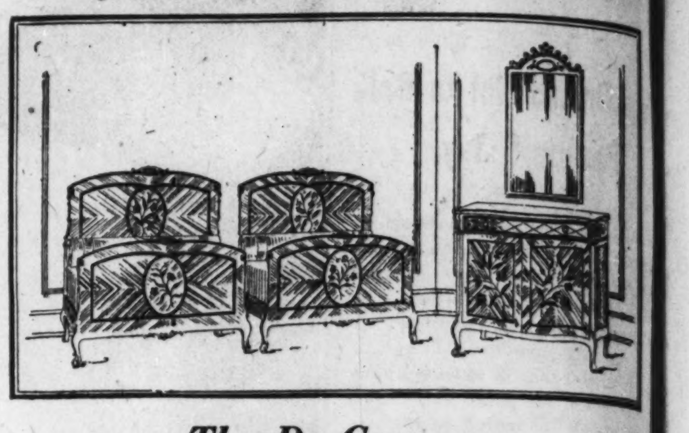
Tobey Furniture for Americans



The De Campan
9 pieces—$3810.00

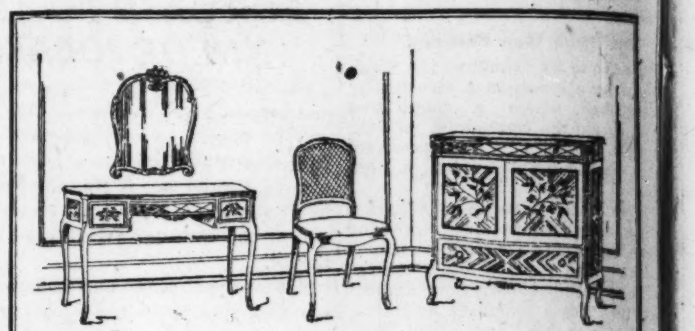
The De Campan, an American suite, has the features that mark fine furniture developed to a degree which Europe cannot improve upon.

The finest gilded hand carving, that has a feeling of soothing mellowness.

A light painted design similar to those used for inlay work, only much finer and infinitely more lasting.

Panels, carefully selected for their brilliant figuring, that expert finishers have developed to a hitherto unknown degree of elegance.

Contributions from the East Indies of fine satinwood and rosewood to heighten the brilliancy of the beautiful mahogany.



Styles do not change overnight. Often designs made in the midst of the transition between periods contain the salient charms of both.

Just as the 18th century artists adapted classic motifs to fit the social and economic life of their time, so has the motif for the De Campan been selected from the period of transition between the Louis XV. to Louis XVI. periods for 20th century America.

American furniture unites grace and utility in a fashion that has never before been possible. A hundred years have witnessed many improvements in furniture construction, while new finishes give longer life to the charm of the wood.

Above all the De Campan is adapted to the American mode of life so that it provides us with the maximum amount of relaxation for body and spirit.

What It Means To Buy Here

Come in for a demonstration. This great sale is a revelation in values to piano buyers. Your decision should be made during this sale. Pianos of late styles and finishes are included. They are all beautiful in design and enjoy exquisite tone. Hundreds of instruments are offered. Most tastes and pocketbooks can be suited. Buyers at a distance should write for complete list.

How You Can Save

Shrewd piano buyers will save from 25% to 50% on the purchase of a good piano. Included in this display are some of the world's finest instruments, and others that are thoroughly reliable, sweet toned, and beautifully finished at very moderate prices.

Pianos Like New

You can hardly tell the difference between these instruments and new ones. They have been completely overhauled. Four shops have been busy for several weeks preparing for this sale. The repairs were all of a minor nature, consisting principally of refinishing. As a result, you obtain an instrument practically as good as new. They are entirely satisfactory.

Years of Delight

An instrument bought in this sale will bring years of delight to its owner. The pleasure which you would derive from it this winter alone would amply repay you for the initial cost. When you come home at night tired and worn, an evening of music would pay you a liberal dividend on your investment. Music makes home life happy. Both parents and children find in it companionship. Why deny your family so much when you may obtain it at so little cost.

Special Groups

Late models are included in these groups. They contain the new improvements. Be sure to make it a point to see them. Every instrument is fully guaranteed. Grands priced as low as $650; Uprights at $125 up; and Player Pianos at $375 up.

What Shrewd Buyers Say

During the previous weeks of the sale those who bought pianos here told us they did not think such values were possible. You too can still equal their advantageous purchases. Year after year this sale has been held. The values are dependable. There are no fictitious reductions nor claims made. Selected groups in Grands, Uprights and Player Pianos merit your visit. Be sure to see them.

Pay Nothing Down

Pay no money down. Come in and choose your instrument today. We will send it to you on free trial. Only a small cartage fee is charged. Small monthly payments may be arranged. Musical instruments of all kinds taken in exchange. This is truly a remarkable offer. Your dollar now brings you greater musical value. Come in! An early visit will afford a wider selection.

Send In The Coupon Today

If you cannot come in person, send in the coupon. Have us reserve a fine piano for you. Remember that you have a thirty-day free trial. Play as your own, a piano just back from a summer home.

CHINA ASKS U. S. ALLIANCE; FEARS BRITAIN, FRANCE

Claims Big Powers Plot to Loot Asia.

BY GEORGE NELLIST.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

HONOLULU, Oct. 22.—Believing Great Britain and France, supported by Italy and Belgium, even now on the eve of the conference for the limitation of armaments, are conspiring for the dismemberment of China, the Asiatic republic proposes to seek an alliance with the United States. Gen. T. G. Chen, the principal military attaché of the Chinese delegation to the Washington conference, made this announcement here today.

Gen. Chen, who is a graduate of West Point, class of 1909, said China looked upon the United States as its only sincere friend among the great powers.

Greater Menace than Japan.

Gen. Chen says Italy and Belgium are not directly interested, but they will support the position of Great Britain and France at the Washington conference because of their desire to maintain friendly relationships with the dominant powers of the entente cordiale. He sees in the ambitions of the European powers a greater menace to China than Japan's calculated aggressions.

"China, in order to avert the fate of Poland at the congress of Vienna in 1815," he said, "will seek the only way out—the formation of a defensive alliance with the United States, enabling the two nations to impose their will upon the self-seeking nations whose imperialistic ambitions imperil the peace of the Pacific."

Tells of Secret Compacts.

Touching upon Japan's part in the far eastern game of international politics, Gen. Chen said:

"There is a great deal of disagreement between north China and south China, much of which is directly traceable to the machinations of the Japanese in playing one party against the other to the end that Japan may obtain dominant control in north China, including Manchuria. The Japanese general staff has constantly played this game with the connivance of the Tokio foreign office.

"But it is not alone Japan which has designs on China. The reason why the European powers so willingly surrendered to Japan the rights formerly enjoyed by Germany is because Great Britain and France entered into a compact with Japan whereby the former was to obtain absolute control over Thibet and France was to have domination of the provinces of Yunnan and Kuang-Hsi. These two provinces lie adjacent to Canton and are among the richest in China."

SALARY BOOSTS IN ILLINOIS HELD CONSTITUTIONAL

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 22.—[Special.]—Judge E. S. Smith of the Sangamon Circuit court today sustained the constitutionality of the salary increases voted by the last legislature, attacked in injunction proceedings brought by Augustus Peabody.

At the same time he declared illegal the $500,000 appropriation for an emergency fund under the control of the governor and finance department. This was on the ground that the law does not specify the purpose for which the appropriation is designed.

Both cases will be taken to the Supreme court for final decision. Walter F. Dodd, counsel for Peabody, elected to stand by his original bill in the salary increase case, and his motion for an appeal was allowed. Clarence Board, assistant attorney general, asked for the appeal in the emergency fund case.

SOUTH SIDE SHOOTING.

Arthur Lemerertz was shot in the leg near his home at 837 West 53d place last night. Edward Malloy, 6430 South Carpenter street, was his alleged assailant.

WOMAN, CHOKED WITH NECKTIE, FOUND IN PUDDLE

New York, Oct. 22.—[Special.]—The body of a blonde woman about 25 was found this afternoon. It was wrapped in two shirts and some oil cloth and lay in a small pond of rain water at Long Island City. She had been strangled with a man's necktie.

Both legs had been cut off, apparently with a hatchet.

The police believe the woman was struck, then strangled.

There were no identifying marks.

1,200 Cops Near, Bandits Get $5,000 Payroll Loot

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 22.—Three armed men entered the office of the Pioneer Cooperage company, in the business district, shortly before noon today, seized pay roll envelopes containing approximately $5,000, and escaped. At the time 1,200 policemen were assembling near by for the annual police dress parade, which marched through the downtown district at noon.

"HOME OF THE BABY LOBSTER"

Bring the "Kiddies." They like the North American. We use more high chairs and sell more Certified Milk than any other dining place in Chicago. That means lots of youngsters eat here, aside from the fact that we feed more people daily than any other high class restaurant or hotel in Chicago.

Pay more elsewhere—if you want to—but you won't get better food than here

These sea-food specialties suggest why the North American is the most distinctive sea-food restaurant since the days of Rector's.

Whole Baby Lobster, hot with melted butter and Chili sauce or cold with Chili sauce	65c
Half-dozen Cotuit oysters, on the half shell, with cocktail sauce	25c
One dozen fresh shrimps, with cocktail sauce	30c
Oyster Stew—made in an individual dish, with big New York Counts, an entire bottle of Certified milk and a big piece of butter	35c
Fried Oysters—7 big New York Counts, fried to your order, with Tartar or Chili sauce or ketchup	35c

While the North American Restaurant was the first high class Chicago restaurant to throw old restaurant customs to the winds, and ask you to serve yourself in order to get prices down low, its big success has been built because in the face of its low prices the food can't be beaten anywhere. You can pay more elsewhere but you won't get better food.

Good food first of all: That has always been the thought uppermost in our minds. Everything possible has been done to get prices down to rock bottom. But quality of food, and size of portions, have never been sacrificed in the interest of mere low price.

The portions here are generous—in fact most of them are ample for two people. And while the price per portion is small the fact that it is big enough for two—and that no extra charge is made for sharing it—makes the actual cost of food even less than our prices indicate.

For instance: For 60 cents you may have delicious Chicken a la King. In making it no veal is used—nothing but chicken, fresh mushrooms, imported sweet peppers and rich cream. And the portion is ample for two so two people can really get for 30 cents each, Chicken a la King which we will gladly have you compare with that served in the most expensive places.

For 65 cents you may have a Breast of Chicken (all white meat) with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce—a great big portion. For 55 cents a big portion of dark meat of Chicken. Or for 35 cents a big serving of Halibut and peas—plenty for two.

And remember this is a real restaurant. You have all the comfort and convenience of the most expensive dining places including the privacy of your own table instead of big boarding house tables. The only difference is you serve yourself, pay only for the food, and there are no waiters to be tipped.

We maintain large and comfortable rest rooms with special attendants in charge for the convenience of our patrons.

Whatever You Do Eat Breakfast Here

Big sweet roll, zwieback, coffee cake or fresh toast with butter or honey	5c
Individual pot of Coffee (2-cups) with real cream	10c
Fluffy Honey Waffle, with 3 strips of bacon or Mickelberry's Old Farm Sausage, butter, pure maple sap or honey	25c
2 fresh eggs fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon	30c
3 fresh eggs fried in butter and a big piece of real ham	45c

HOW CO-OP HEAD SHIELDED WIFE IN HEARING IS BARED

Kept Self in Ignorance of Her Movements.

Details of the formation by Harrison Parker of an intricate scheme whereby he could truthfully testify in bankruptcy hearings of the Coöperative Society of America that he was in ignorance of the whereabouts of his wife, Mrs. Edith Stubbs Parker, came to light yesterday.

Friday Parker's messenger, Miss Louise Fuller, testified that she had received her instructions from a mysterious "K." who she did not know. She spoke of taking a mysterious package to Mrs. Parker in Canada, and of subsequent movements with Mrs. Parker and her daughter from Montreal to Toronto and thence to London, Ont.

"K." Is Identified.

Yesterday Parker testified that "K." was a friend of his named Kylie, an official of the Wisconsin Rochdale company.

Parker said he borrowed some $600 necessary to defray the expenses of the messenger's trips to and from Canada from Gustave Kopp, president of the Great Western Securities company, a concern controlled by Mrs. Parker.

This money, he said, he gave to "K." —or Kylie. Kylie in turn gave it to Miss Fuller. The mysterious package contained handkerchiefs, Parker said.

Turns Over Vault Key.

Parker turned over to the receiver a key which he said belonged to the much talked about safety deposit box in New York. He said the receiver wouldn't find anything of importance in the box.

Parker also testified to the existence of a brokerage firm headed by F. J De Bartis, which dealt in resales of Coöperative society certificates. Parker said he didn't participate in the profits of the concern.

The hearing was adjourned until Monday morning, when C. W. Gillette, president of the Wisconsin Pea Canners' association, is expected to testify.

'SURE FIRE' HETH QUITS CROWE'S OFFICE FOR PRIVATE LAW PRACTICE

LLOYD D. HETH.

Lloyd D. Heth, for three years the "sure fire" prosecutor of the state's attorney's office, has tendered his resignation, effective Nov. 15, after which he will be engaged in the private practice of law.

"I am indeed sorry to lose Mr. Heth's services," said State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe. "He is one of my 'aces.' I had hoped to have him try the labor cases. A man of his ability, honesty, and conscientiousness deserves the success he undoubtedly will have. He has my heartiest good wishes."

Heth has prosecuted many of the big cases under Former State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne and his successor, Mr. Crowe. Among the more notable cases are the conviction of Carl Wanderer, William Bross Lloyd and his associates in the Communist Labor party, Arthur Haensel, Thomas "Bad Tommy" O'Connor, the Gloriana gang, and the Hyde Park bank bandits. Wanderer and Haensel have paid the penalty on the gallows.

STABBED BY BROTHER.

CITIZENS' ASSN. CREDITS NEW LAW FOR SMALL CASE

Reveals How Deposits Statute Forced Action.

Some new light on the question whether Attorney General Brundage was actuated solely by political motives in beginning the prosecution of Gov. Len Small was provided yesterday by the annual report of the Citizens' association.

This document, submitted at the annual meeting of the organization at the Mid-Day club by its president, Augustus S. Peabody, did not treat directly on the question of political motive in the case, but it set up unqualifiedly that the prosecution was due entirely to the taking effect of the new "state deposits law" enacted by the legislature of 1919.

Gov. Small's defenders have been charging incessantly that the attorney general failed for several years to take any action because of the conditions alleged in the state treasurer's office and acted only because his appropriation was cut in two by the governor.

View of Citizens' Association.

This is what the Citizens' association says about the inception of the prosecution:

"The recent amazing disclosures at Springfield regarding the alleged mishandling of state moneys, which have resulted in the indictment of the governor and lieutenant governor on charges of embezzlement and conspiracy to defraud the state while serving as state treasurer, are directly traceable to the new state deposits law which was placed on the statute books at the 1919 session through the efforts of the Citizens' association.

"Because of its stringent requirements for placing the deposit of state moneys on a competitive basis, State Treasurer Edward E. Miller, upon taking office last January, was obliged promptly to put the affairs of his office in such shape as to enable him to comply with the new statute within thirty days thereafter.

Irregularities Discovered.

"When he discovered apparent irregularities he naturally called them to the attention of the attorney general, to whom, as the chief law officer of the state, he went for advice, as a matter of self-protection.

"The intent of the law, which was drawn with the utmost care with a view to making it impervious to attacks and evasions, is to require the state treasurer promptly to place all moneys in his custody in banks selected on the basis of competitive bids.

"In order to put himself in a position to do this, it was necessary for State Treasurer Miller to quickly cash the certificates of deposit, amounting to about $10,000,000, given by the so-called Grant Park bank, when these were turned over to him at his demand.

"If Mr. Miller had not done so, or had knowingly permitted any one to make any profit out of interest earnings, he would have failed in his duty to the public and would have made himself liable to indictment.

"Consequently, he required his predecessors in office to turn into the state treasury securities for the $10,000,000 loaned the Grant Park bank in previous years and proceeded to reduce them to cash."

It was this forcing the display of the hands of Lieut. Gov. Sterling and Gov. Small, the report contends, that placed in Attorney General Brundage's hands for the first time the evidence upon which the two former treasurers were indicted.

7 ESCAPE FROM CHESTER; GEARY STILL IS THERE

Reports that Gene Geary, who dodged the gallows on an insanity plea, was among the seven prisoners in the escape Thursday from the Southern Illinois penitentiary's asylum for the criminal insane, at Chester, were denied yesterday by John L. Whitman, state superintendent of prisons, in Springfield.

Three of the seven fugutives were captured yesterday. They are Girk Ypana, Joseph Pent, and James Mibbs.

Philip Falke, James Arnett, Paul Huntley, and Nick Braulchi were still at large last night.

She is secretary of the Japanese W. C. T. U., and is on her way to Washington to present a monster peace and disarmament petition to President Harding. She is shown here examining a section of the petition.

TWO of Japan's most illustrious daughters reached Chicago yesterday on their way to Washington, where they will deliver to President Harding a petition with 10,000 signatories on the subject of peace and disarmament.

They are Azuma Moriyua, secretary of the Japanese W. C. T. U., and Kaja Yajima, 90 years old and for thirty years president of the Japanese white ribboners.

Yesterday afternoon the two distinguished women were entertained at the Evanston Woman's club, which is situated just a few steps from "Rest Cottage," the former home of Frances E. Willard, founder of the W. C. T. U.

Urges Camp Grant for Boys' Penal Institution

Washington, D. C., Oct. 22.—Use of Camp Grant at Rockford, Ill., as a penal institution for minor offenders convicted under federal laws has been recommended by the department of justice, it was said today by Senator McCormick of Illinois. The recommendation now is before Director Forbes of the veterans' bureau, but a decision has not been reached.

SMALL'S TRIAL MAY NOT BEGIN UNTIL JANUARY

The record in the Small-Curtis embezzlement and conspiracy cases will be transmitted Wednesday from Sangamon county to Lake county, according to information from Springfield yesterday.

As both sides state they are "ready for trial," and the docket is cleared for it in Lake county, the trial could start one week from tomorrow, attorneys say. However, preliminary and technical motions are expected to be made, and the belief is general that the actual selection of a jury will not begin before Dec. 1, and probably not until after the New Year.

Sheriff Green of Lake county yesterday gave formal orders to his deputies that they should not talk concerning the case with any prospective veniremen who may be called for service on the Small jury.

"I shall insist that my deputies shall keep absolutely silent about these important cases," Sheriff Green said.

Poisonous Draught Fatal Despite Fiancee's Efforts

Edward Stevenson, 3021 Jarvis avenue, died yesterday in the Passavant hospital of the effects of a poisonous chemical which he drank Oct. 14.

Before he drank the poison he called up his fiancée, Miss Alice Bergsten, 5930 West Ohio street, and told her his business affairs were too much for him.

Miss Bergsten rushed to his side and found him unconscious in his office in the McVicker Theater building.

PICK CITIZENS TO ENFORCE LANDIS PAY SCALE SOON

Violation of Decision by Plumbers Charged.

John W. O'Leary, chairman of the citizens' committee organized to aid in enforcing the Landis union wage awards, will return to Chicago from a business trip in the east tomorrow and will immediately announce the personnel of the committee, it was stated last night.

The committee first will try to induce refractory unions to abide by the Landis awards, and, if unsuccessful, will assist in putting the American plan in effect, in accordance with the Landis agreement, which provides that if unions refuse to abide by the Landis decision, employers have the right to obtain men from whatever sources they can.

Attention to Carpenters.

The committee will devote special attention to the carpenters, plumbers, and steamfitters it is said.

In a letter to THE TRIBUNE yesterday F. E. Davidson, president of the Illinois Society of Architects, charged that the master steamfitters and master plumbers have entered into agreements with journeymen in those trades to violate the Landis agreement by paying a wage of $1.10 an hour. The Landis award was 95 cents. The agreement is further violated by the master plumbers, he asserts, through an agreement to raise the pay of the journeymen to $1.12½ an hour on Jan. 1 and to make retroactive any increase which Judge Landis may grant at the rehearing of the wage awards.

Face General Repudiation.

"The action of the master plumbers in repudiating the Landis agreement simply means that all other trades will insist that they shall be treated equally as well in the way of wages as the plumbers, and that we are now facing a beneral repudiation by the other trades," Mr. Davidson writes.

OAK PARK SOLDIER, KILLED IN ARGONNE, TO BE BURIED TODAY

ALBERT H. MAYO.
[Koehne Photo.]

Albert H. Mayo, son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Mayo of 640 South Scoville avenue, Oak Park, will be buried today with military honors. The services will be held at 2 p. m. at Ascension church, Clarence avenue and Van Buren street. The funeral will be in charge of the 123d field artillery, of which Mr. Mayo was a member, and Oak Park post, No. 15, of the American Legion.

Mayo was 26 years old when he was killed on Sept. 27, 1918, during the Argonne engagement. Besides his parents, he is survived by three sisters, Dorothy Mayo, Mrs. E. A. Brady, and Sister Ascensia of the Ursuline order, and a brother, Walter Mayo, all of Oak Park.

ROBBED IN CITY HALL.

Detectives were assigned to ride in city hall elevators yesterday after Silbert La Plant, 4030 Grenshaw street, reported that he had been robbed of $57 within fifty feet of Chief Fitzmorris' office.

GARAGE OWNERS TO FIGHT STATE LICENSING RULE

Owners of public garages in Chicago are expected soon to attack the recent ruling of the Illinois commerce commission holding that such establishments are under their control and subject to an annual license fee of $25.

On the basis that there are in the state about 20,000 garages which store cars for their owners it is estimated the license fees alone would amount to $500,000 a year. In addition there would be the cost of bonds, which may be fixed by the commission from $5,000 to $100,000.

But the principal objection to the ruling is that its effect would be to place tremendous political power in the hands of the state commission. It is feared favoritism would be practiced and political support demanded from garage owners. There is no limit established for the commission's power of "regulation."

Challenge Validity of Law.

The ruling of the commission was based on its interpretation of an act of the last legislature "to regulate business of storing personal property for hire," which is directed at warehouses, except cold storage warehouses. Attorneys who have been looking into the subject say the law was not intended to cover garages, and they say the entire law may be proved defective by a court test.

On the question whether garages were included within the scope of the act, they have obtained a copy of a ruling given by Attorney General Brundage's office in reply to a direct inquiry on this point from W. P. Welker of Vandalia, state's attorney of Fayette county.

Opinion by Brundage.

"An examination of this law," reads this ruling, "discloses the fact that the term 'warehouse' is used throughout to designate the place where goods may be stored. In its broad sense, a warehouse is defined as a storehouse for wares or goods. The first rule of construction of a statute is that 'all general provisions, terms, phrases, and expressions shall be liberally construed in order that the true intent and meaning of the legislature may be fully carried out.'

"Applying this rule to the construction of this statute to ascertain the true intent of the legislature, and construing the statute as a whole, I am of the opinion that the intention was to license only such places as do a general storage or warehouse business

Doesn't Include Garages.

"A garage is a place for housing automobiles, and, often, the repair of the same. It is very customary for an automobile agency to have, in addition, to its salesroom, a garage house and repair shop. In fact, it is one of the incidental powers necessary to carry on its general business, being analagous to the implied powers of a corporation.

"Therefore, answering your question specifically, I am of the opinion that a garage does not come within the purview of the statute."

Hotel Somerset

SHERIDAN ROAD AT ARGYLE

If you have traveled much, you have come at rare intervals upon hotels which have impressed you from the very start as possessing indefinable qualities that caused you to know you were going to feel very much at home there. Such a hotel many have found the Somerset to be.

From the very inception of the plans for its construction, it was determined it should be in physical fact, and not in name only, a residential hotel.

THE SERVICE

The absence of that impersonal, detached attitude of the guests of the typical hotel is one of the marked characteristics of the atmosphere of the Somerset. It has sought, won and maintains the friendly regard of its patrons to a degree which is cherished as its most prized asset.

A LOCATION SUCH AS FEW HOTELS, ANYWHERE, POSSESS

In the very heart of that part of the North Shore conceded to be Chicago's finest residential district.

MODERATE RATES

Prices in themselves mean little. To appreciate the Somerset's rates it is essential that you investigate the accommodations and the full hotel service which they include. Suffice it to say therefore, that every room is provided with bath, both shower and tub, and that an excellent room may be had at a minimum of $25 a week, whether occupied by one or two persons.

ESPECIALLY NOTE THE REMARKABLE CONVENIENCE OF TRANSPORTATION WHICH BRINGS THIS OUTLYING HOTEL CLOSE TO THE LOOP AND TO ALL OTHER POINTS OF INTEREST.

Broadway surface cars (one of the main trunk systems of the city) are conveniently at hand. Two blocks west of the hotel is the Argyle elevated station at which, during the evening rush from the loop, through express trains make their first stop northbound, insuring a less crowded condition of trains and quicker transportation than favor localities much closer to the loop. Motor busses between Devon Avenue and the loop stop at the door of the Somerset. In the boulevard there is a constant stream of taxi cabs available upon the call of the footman day and night.

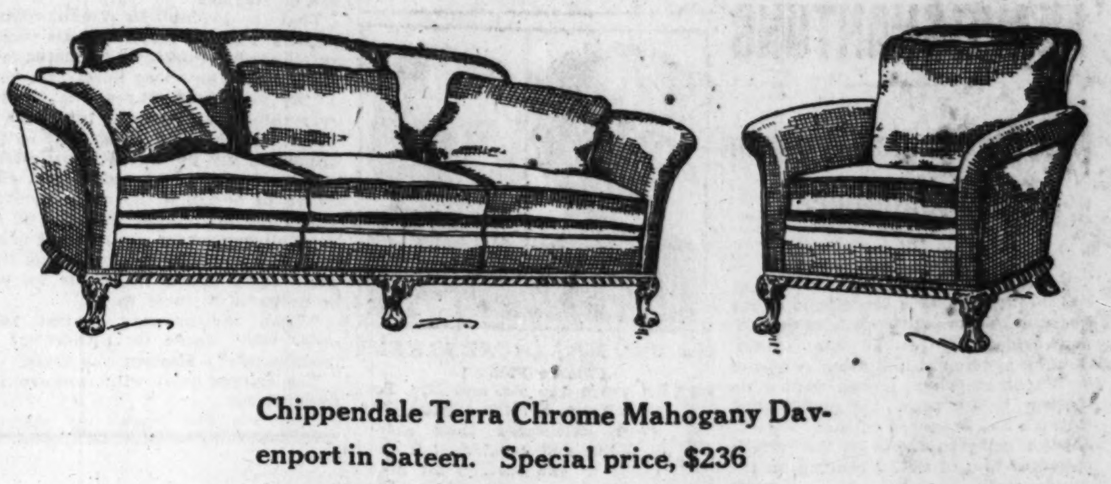
Scholle's Good Furniture



Chippendale Terra Chrome Mahogany Davenport in Sateen. Special price, $236
Arm Chair to match, special price, $107

YOU couldn't get along in real comfort these days if it wasn't for upholstered furniture; this is especially true in fall and winter when so much time is spent indoors and so much entertaining is done.

But the buying of upholstered furniture is more a matter of faith than most purchases; you have to take the dealer's word for everything that you can't see, and the part you can't see is the really important part in an upholstered davenport or chair: it's the part that either stands up and gives you long service or breaks down and gives you disappointment.

We have realized the significance of these facts and have been so careful in the manufacture of our upholstered goods that "Scholle upholstery" is recognized as the last word in quality.

Come and see what we are offering now in upholstered pieces; there's a wide variety; and your complete and lasting satisfaction is guaranteed in every transaction.

Every week we offer a few specials. Here they are for this week

JAPANESE SPURN PEKING PLEA TO LEAVE SHANTUNG

Note Puts Critical Problem Up to Conference.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 22.—[Special.]—Prospect of a settlement of the Shantung issue between China and Japan before the international conference on armament limitation convenes in Washington next month went glimmering today with the publication through the Japanese embassy here of Japan's reply to China on the latter's memorandum of Oct. 5 bearing on the controversy.

The Japanese government expresses a keen desire for speedy settlement of the Shantung dispute and invites further negotiations to that end, but takes decided views in opposition to the Chinese attitude as expressed in a reply to Japan's proposals of an earlier date.

Means Crisis at Conference.

The failure to agree upon a basis of settlement will, in the opinion of Washington statesmen, preclude any further progres in negotiations between the two powers before the date set for the Washington conference which will primarily discuss the problems of the Pacific and the east. Such a result will leave Shantung one of the outstanding sources of dispute and make it in all probability a subject of supreme importance before the conference.

Japan in the latest note to China feels aggrieved at the attitude of China toward the former Japanese proposals regarding Shantung and flatly denies the claim of China that she is entitled to return of former German territory unconditionally.

Japanese Chide China.

After outlining the early history of the Shantung negotiations and leading up to Japanese overtures on Sept. 7, last, the Japanese note, forwarded to China Oct. 19, says:

"Contrary to our expectation, China expressed its unwillingness to proceed for the time being with the negotiation on the ground that the terms of settlement as we proposed fell short of convincing them of the sincerity of Japan's desire to settle this question.

"Further, it used at the beginning of its memorandum an expression characterizing most of the Japanese declarations as hollow and devoid of meaning. Japan keenly regrets for the sake of China that such a derogatory expression, contrary to the principles of international courtesy, should have been used by her.

"Furthermore, contentions put forward by China vis-a-vis the Japanese project are inexplicit, and in particular there are a number of points on which Japan invites the reconsideration of China.

"For instance, argument is advanced by her that the rights formerly enjoyed by Germany in regard to the lease of Kiaochow, having totally expired in consequence of China's declaration of war against Germany, should be restored to China without conditions.

"This not only is an argument hardly warranted by the principles and usages of international law or by treaties in existence between China and Japan, but may be said to aim at the frustration of effects of the Versailles treaty.

"On May 20, last, the German representative in China declared that by virtue of the Versailles treaty Germany had renounced all her rights and interests and was no longer capable of restoring them direct to China.

"Tardy Declaration of War."

"It will be remembered that the Chinese declaration of war was made in August, 1917, when more than two years had already elapsed since the transfer of former German rights to Japan had been fully recognized by China. China made her declaration of war only at the instance of the allied powers, receiving in return for her action various advantages, and Chinese efforts in the war amounted to deportation of Germans and Austrians from China and the dispatch of workmen to France.

"As regards China's assertion concerning the Shantung railway, it appears that she intends to place its management under her own complete control and to leave for the time being one-half of the whole value of the railway unpaid. Japan's desire is to operate the railway by means of harmonious coöperation of both countries.

"It will be recalled that the Shantung railway was operated by Germany alone so long as it remained in her hands and that Japan has taken it over from her at the sacrifice of lives and treasure. In spite of that, Japan intends to work it as a joint enterprise with China on the basis of utmost impartiality."

100 RELATIVES GIVE SURPRISE PARTY TO PAIR WED 60 YEARS

MR. AND MRS. LAURENS KEUN

[Wielder Photos.]

TEN years ago Mr. and Mrs. Laurens Keun, 817 4th avenue, Maywood, celebrated their golden wedding and considered it their final affair of the sort. Last night, however, they were taken to the Maywood I. O. O. F. hall, ostensibly to a church affair, and were confronted by 100 relatives of four generations.

Music, toasts, speeches, and a huge wedding cake were features of the surprise party and banquet. Mr. and Mrs. Keun are each 83 years old and their five children helped celebrate their sixtieth wedding anniversary.

HAYNES PRIMES GUNS FOR WAR ON HOME BREW

Washington, D. C., Oct. 22.—Home brewing that violates the Volstead law will be stopped.

That is Prohibition Commissioner Haynes' position respecting his recent anti-home brew order as he stated it to the United Press today in an intreview.

"My job," said Hayes, "is to stop everything the Volstead law says is illegal. I am going to do that to the utmost of my power. I know efforts will be made in the courts and elsewhere to overturn the order recently issued for preventing the sale of articles advertised for use in home brewing. But you may safely assume that when those efforts are made we will be prepared to meet them."

"Then the protests against your order won't cause its withdrawal or modification?" Haynes was asked.

The answer came with Rooseveltian forcefulness.

"No one who knows my makeup, would need to ask that," he said. "Lawbreakers always regard the laws they break as autocratic and their enforcement as needlessly drastic." Haynes conceded that mistakes have been made, but, he declared with emphasis, "Prohibition enforcement is a fine thing when it's done right."

ILL. LABOR ASKS NATION TO TAKE OVER COAL MINES

Aurora, Ill., Oct. 22.—The Illinois Federation of Labor, in thirty-ninth annual convention here today, called upon the federal government to take over the coal mines now and eventually all natural resources of the nation. The body also called on the government to recognize the soviet government of Russia.

In other resolutions the convention "condemned the appointment of William J. Burns as chief of the secret service of the department of justice, expressed relentless opposition to strike insurance, and declared that present unemployment is largely the result of mismanagement, unnecessary duplication, and deliberate retardation of the development of natural resources." The coöperative movement was declared the remedy.

What Railroad Workers Earn

That the public, and especially the wage earners, may be informed as to the average pay received by employees on railroads between New York and Chicago, the following table of wages is published.

It shows the maximum, minimum and average compensation on Erie Railroad before the reduction of July 1, ordered by the United States Railroad Labor Board.

It shows what that reduction amounted to and what the average compensation now is.

The figures of a parallel railway operating between New York and Chicago are also given.

These two roads employ about 95,000 men. It will be seen that earnings vary slightly on different roads, but the earnings set forth here are representative.

It has been stated that the present railroad wage is not a living wage. Let the figures bear witness.

FAR EAST HOLDS SPHINX RIDDLE OF WAR, PEACE?

Open Door Big Task for Harding Parley.

the middle west again," said the Canadian.

"Not at all. Just let the country be roused, let orators get up and wave the flag, and women will be pinning white feathers on those that stay at home."

It is worthy of note that in this actual conversation the Canadian seemed to take "we" for granted. America and Canada together. The situation is likened to the commercial rivalry and the German menace in Europe in 1914. The ingredients of war are simmering on the far Pacific frontier of trade and business and commerce, and the chances of peace appear none too bright. It is like a conference of physicians around the bed of a patient gravely ill.

The problem is easy to state but difficult to solve.

China is the key.

In the exploitation of this ancient new stirring land and people the old type imperialism of the dominant group of Japan has challenged the world for leadership.

The United States must abandon the fiction of the open door or fight to make it a reality.

Discussion of armament relief appears to be futile until the causes that lead to the present race are analyzed and removed.

Who speaks for China at Washington? The Peking government is sending a delegation which claims to represent a united China, but that claim, if true, must rest on a very recent union.

Sees War from Arms Parley.

In Canton, Dr. Sun Yat Sen, who claims to be constitutional president of the only real republic in China, told me he thought the Washington conference would lead to war. The only way out, he said, was for America and the other powers to recognize his government in China and let him deal with the Japanese aggression.

"You must use us Chinese to fight Japan or do it yourself," he said. "Now with words or later with bullets."

He pointed out how the Versailles conference led to wars and said that the delegation that was going to Washington from China did not represent the south and he would not recognize any agreements made by them. He had not been asked to participate in the conference. He pictured Peking as filled with traitors and the government there as under the thumb of Japan.

This is hardly a good basis upon which to build a new understanding about China.

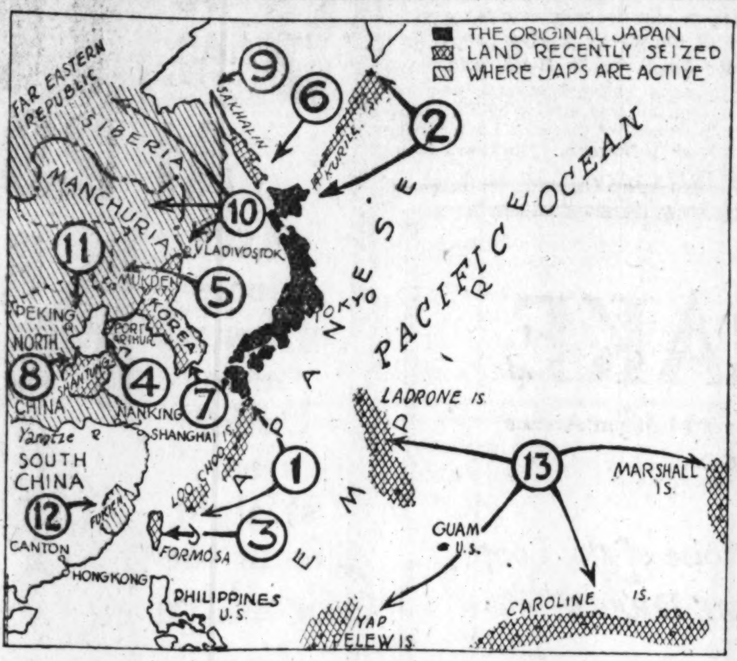
China will not be "liberated," but will be kept open and developed because the nations need her market and her vast stores of raw materials. It is a question of approach.

From Shantung to Eastern Siberia Japan can find everything to realize her ambitions.

She appears to be determined to hold on to the 750,000 square miles of land and the million miles of sea that she has acquired in one way or another since the Japanese-Russian war of 1903. The Japanese point of view is that America is the chief obstructive power to her policy and that for America to succeed means suicide for Japan.

Japan's guns watch the coast of all Asia and at her door lies inexhaustible and uncharted natural resources, an undeveloped market the greatest in the world, and an endless supply of docile cheap labor. In an even competition she might not be able to get what she considers necessary for national safety. So the cards are stacked for her in Siberia, Shantung, Manchuria. It is thought by some observers that to yield would be as dangerous as to stand firm for a new deal, for there is the possibility of the absorption and militarization of China and endless trouble for the next generation.

JAPAN'S EXPANSION



JAPAN has grown accustomed to expansion. From the purely insular kingdom of fifty years ago she has grown, adding bit by bit until she is now a major power and is shutting the door to Asia in the face of America. The history of the rise of Japan is testimony that she believes grabbing pays. The map illustrates the steps of her rise.

1. In 1879 the annexation of the Loo Choo islands, begun in 1609, was completed.

2. In 1875 the Kuriles were obtained from Russia in exchange for the southern half of Sakhalin.

3. In 1895 Formosa and neighboring islands were wrested from China in the Chino-Japanese war. Japan emerged as a world power.

4. Japan attacked Russia. Port Arthur fell Jan. 23, 1905.

5. Japan took the principal rights in southern Manchuria, nominally Chinese territory.

6. Japan also took back the half of Sakhalin given in trade for the Kuriles.

7. In 1910 Japan felt strong enough to extinguish Corean independence. Corea annexed.

8. Japan attacked Germany at Tsingtao in 1914. Germany defeated and the whole province of Shantung was seized by the Japanese. Their rights to the province confirmed in 1919 by the treaty of Versailles. They now admit that Shantung is "ready for annexation."

9. In 1915 the northern half of Sakhalin was seized from Russia and is still held.

10. Under the pretense of guarding unpaid for supplies at Vladivostok and stopping the spread of bolshevism, Japanese troops landed in Siberia Aug. 15, 1918. They seized northern Manchuria, Vladivostok, and forced demands on the new born Far Eastern republic.

11. Japan's twenty-one demands on China of 1915 are bearing fruit. Japan is reported to dominate the military chiefs of North China, and is pushing ambitious schemes to exploit and monopolize that country.

12. Japan is also asserting rights in Fukien province, South China, on the ground that it lies near Formosa. South Chinese claim this is an entering wedge to their country.

13. In 1919 the former German islands in the Pacific north of the equator were awarded Japan by the treaty of Versailles. This is regarded as a grave menace to the United States, as it cuts us off from the Philippines and Guam.

CYCLONE STRIKES SHIP CARRYING JAP DELEGATES

ABOARD STEAMSHIP KASHIMA MARU, Oct. 22.—[By radio to the Associated Press.]—A terrific cyclone, characterized by the ship's commander, Capt. Itsuno, as the worst in his thirty years' experience at sea, struck this ship Thursday. The Kashima Maru is carrying, among other passengers, the principal delegates of the Japanese mission to the Washington limitation of arms conference.

Prince Tokugawa, head of the delegation, narrowly escaped injury when a huge wave smashed the door of his room and hurled fragments of a broken mirror about the compartment.

Seas 120 feet high, towering sixty feet above the ship's bridge, swept aboard, demolishing furniture in the saloon and cabins, sent trunks and other articles spinning across the decks, wrenched the chairs in the dining saloon from their fastenings, and tumbled passengers into the scuppers.

Today the delegates are wondering if they will be forced to travel across Canada and thence by steamer to Washington because of a railroad strike.

SLASHING WAYS OF BARBER THROW LIGHT ON RUSSIA

Shaves Well When He, Not Soviet, Is Paid.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

REVAL, Oct. 22.—My traveling companion and myself nearly ended our friendship when I directed him to a barber shop in Astrikhan, where I had been shaved several times.

"You are a fine bird," he yelled at me. "I thought your barber friend was going to kill me. Before skinning me he said that I did not need a shave, although I had a two days' beard. Look at my chin."

My companion's face was bleeding in three places. I tried to explain that I had been given good service by the barber.

"You ought to know better than to get shaved at this time of the day," the interpreter intervened.

"What has the time to do with it?" said my friend, indignantly.

"Everything," replied the interpreter. "Don't you know that the barber shops have been partially denationalized and that the government gets all the receipts between 10 a. m. and 6 p. m.? The only time you can get a good shave is before 10 o'clock, when the barber can keep all the money he takes in. It is suicide to go after that."

Shows Swing from Communism.

This illustrates the new economic policy, said to have been forced on Lenin, of giving the people at least a share of the rewards of private initiative, for it is easy to lead a man to work but he cannot be made to do good work. The extent of the policy of swinging back from communism is known only to Lenin and a few officials. The highest officials of Astrakhan, Saratoff, and Samara only have a vague idea. In all these places the shopkeepers have opened without a clear understanding of what the government is going to tax.

The shops and restaurants are limited to size and all are in buildings rented from the government at floor space rates. The cities are divided into zones, each with fixed rates. Shops besides their rent, must pay 500,000 rubles for a permit to open. The government is going to tax the profits, but so far it has not been decided how much the taxes will be, although it is said they will probably be 25 per cent.

Will Return Homes, but——

Under the new policy the government is said to be willing to return confiscated homes to their owners, but the conditions are such that no one accepts. Most of the homes have been stripped of their furniture, and they also need repairs. The owner must put the house in order and then is allowed only so much floor space for himself and family. What is over the government assigns to a lodger, or, if the family makes its own terms with a lodger, the government gets a 50 per cent tax.

At present industry is still nationalized, but it is said that the builders of new factories will be allowed to retain them, but they must conform to union labor regulations. Builders of new office buildings and stores will be permitted to keep their property, but all houses are limited in size or rooms in them are subject to requisition.

Lenin is said to be working out a plan for stabilizing the ruble. To any one having seen how thoroughly the government has confiscated silver, gold, jewelry, rugs, and furs, while possessing in the treasury $500,000,000, not including $60,000,000 worth of Roumanian money sent to Moscow for safe keeping, the spectacle of the government asking an allied credit of $50,000,000 is puzzling. In the Kremlin at Moscow there are millions of dollars worth of jewelry, and in Odessa there are 400 tons of furs and rugs crated for export.

Moscow has issued three trillions worth of paper rubles. Azerbeidjan since its occupation eighteen months ago has increased the circulation of paper of that government from 2,500,000,000 to 19,000,000,000.

"What's the Latest in Closed Cars?"

Here is the answer—

The tendency is towards lowness and lightness—replacing the clumsiness and heavy appearance of old-time bodies.

Note how the new Marmon Sedans, Coupes, Suburbans and other closed models eliminate the usual top-heavy appearance.

Another tendency is towards added vision. Note how the new Marmons introduce an entirely new treatment of windshield design, giving the driver a wider vision, adding both comfort and safety in driving.

Larger doors and windows, roomier seating, more comfortable upholstering, and dozens of other important improvements, give the new Marmons an exclusive field amongst high-grade cars.

Don't delay in seeing them and riding in them. Mere words and pictures are insufficient in describing these superior closed cars, mounted on the dependable Marmon chassis.

May we have the pleasure of showing them to you this week?

URGES INSTANT ACTION ON LAKES TO GULF CANAL

State Commerce Chamber to Speed Project.

A demand for immediate action in the construction of the Great Lakes to Gulf waterway was the high light yesterday at the annual meeting of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce.

The demand was made by the waterway division. A. F. Schock, chairman of the division, appointed a committee of five, who will wait on Gov. Small and ask why no extensive work is being done on the project.

"This project was conceived thirty years ago," said Mr. Schock, "and in 1908 a bond issue of $20,000,000 was voted to carry it out. Only one contract has been let, however, and last spring work on the lock at Marseilles was begun.

"Work on the project would put thousands of men to work, relieving the unemployment problem, and would hasten the time when the people of the state can reap the benefits in lower living costs."

Schwab Augurs Prosperity.

Charles M. Schwab, head of the Bethlehem Steel company, advised the 1,500 delegates to "get busy and prepare for the period of prosperity which is sure to come."

"We have just gotten over a business orgy of ten years," he said, "and now is the time to prepare for the future. I believe that business would be helped if the government would not meddle in business affairs. No temporary legislation ever helped business in the least.

"Our government should not hamper American business and American initiative.

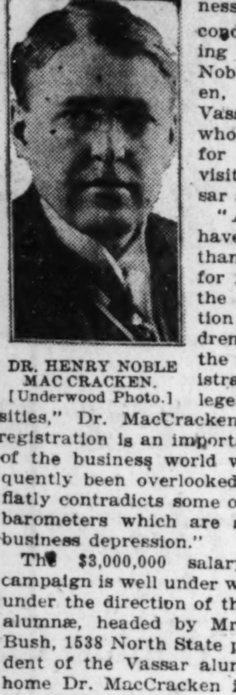
"And let us do away with labor boards. When institutions realize that all disputes can be settled through a shop plan of some sort, there won't be any labor troubles."

Debate on Fordney Plan.

A debate on the American valuation plan in the Fordney bill was between William H. Mann, general manager of Marshall Field & Co., and George Meyercord, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association.

Mr. Mann declared the plan would prevent American business from buying goods in cheap markets and by so doing give the American people the benefit of cheap buying, while Mr. Meyercord took the position that many American manufacturers would be put out of business by cheap foreign competition unless they were protected by an American valuation tariff.

HOLDS EDUCATION STATISTICS PROVE BUSINESS BOOMS



DR. HENRY NOBLE MAC CRACKEN.
[Underwood Photo.]

Educational statistics refute commercial statistics concerning present business and financial conditions, according to Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, president of Vassar college, who is in Chicago for a three days' visit to meet Vassar alumnæ.

"Americans have more money than ever before for investment in the higher education of their children, as shown by the increased registration in colleges and universities," Dr. MacCracken said. "The registration is an important barometer of the business world which has frequently been overlooked, and today it flatly contradicts some of the standard barometers which are still indicating business depression."

The $3,000,000 salary endowment campaign is well under way in Chicago, under the direction of the local Vassar alumnæ, headed by Mrs. William H. Bush, 1538 North State parkway, president of the Vassar alumnæ, at whose home Dr. MacCracken is being entertained while in Chicago.

HAS FATHER ARRESTED.

Mrs. Elva Stone of Duluth caused the arrest yesterday of her father, Anton Sommer, 532 North Wells street, for disorderly conduct. She asked that he be given a cure for drinking.

FARMERS' WIVES ORGANIZING ON NATIONAL SCALE

Farm women in every state will be represented at the third annual convention of the American Farm Bureau federation at Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 21 to 23. This is the first step made by the women's committee of the federal organization to affiliate the work of the farmers' wives with the bureau in a national way.

A plan of organization will be presented for ratification at the November convention. The work of the women will be that of improving schools, community centers, churches, health commissions, and to bring about a closer coöperation in rural social activities.

OPERATION CAUSES BOY'S DEATH.

Robert Buhrmester, 9 years old, 208 East 54th street, died yesterday in the Englewood hospital of shock following an operation.

FATHER SHOOTS ELOPING GIRL, THEN HIMSELF

Canton, Ill., Oct. 22.—Infuriated by the elopement of his 15 year old daughter Rosa with her sweetheart, Mike Mihelich, 37, Thomas Feltz, farmer, shot and killed the girl last night; then killed himself, it was learned here today.

The killing and suicide occurred at the Feltz home two miles northwest of Bryant, Ill., when the couple returned from Peoria, where they were denied a marriage license. They said they had gone to Iowa and been married. Feltz took a shotgun and killed her, then shot himself. Mihelich was arrested and held for questioning.

SWITCHMAN CRUSHED TO DEATH.

James Flanigan, 554 West 54th street, a switchman employed by the Pennsylvania railroad, was crushed to death last night between two cars.

Fort Dearborn SAVINGS PLUS INSURANCE PLAN
LIFE INSURANCE POLICY
ORDINARY LIFE POLICY

Savings Plus Insurance

As a protection for the future, which shall I start first—a Savings Account or a Life Insurance Policy? This question faces many young men, business girls, and newly married couples. Too often the problem has resolved itself into Savings versus Insurance or Insurance versus Savings.

This problem has now been solved by a Savings Plus Insurance Plan, which has been worked out by the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings Bank in conjunction with the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company, one of the oldest and best known of old line companies.

Under this Savings Plus Insurance Plan, your savings and insurance can both be paid for in monthly installments, the exact amounts depending on your age, and the sum you start out to save—$1000 to $25000.

Monthly deposits per $1000 Savings Account, plus $1000 Insurance, range from $8.16 at age 15 to $10.58 at age 55.

You are also given numerous options and privileges. You start out to save a definite amount for a period of 120 months. At the end of the first year, if desired, the original policy without re-examination, may be changed to any other form of Insurance written by this company, with the exception of term Insurance.

Beginning with the end of the second year your policy has a cash surrender value including dividends.

Also after one year, in case of total and permanent disability, you will be paid 12 per cent yearly of the face value of the policy, payable monthly, and at death the full face value of the policy will be paid the beneficiaries. During disability no further payment of premiums is required.

For an amount not to exceed 20 cents per month additional, per $1000 Insurance, a double indemnity will be paid in case of death resulting from accident.

You will receive a beautiful pass book for the entry of each deposit.

This plan which offers such a wide range of benefits and options is worthy of the serious attention of every man or woman, boy or girl, interested in both Savings and Protection.

For further explanation you are invited to call on our officers or write us for descriptive circular.

NONPARTISANS IN NORTH DAKOTA FACE A BIG FIGHT

Recall Election Test Set for Oct. 28.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 22.—North Dakota's two political parties, the Nonpartisans and the Independents, will come to grips on Friday, Oct. 28, in the most crucial of several critical elections in that state.

Voters of North Dakota will give their verdict on five years of rule by the followers of A. C. Townley. The result, it is believed, will be decisive. It will be either the league's finish as a dominating power in North Dakota or else the league will win a vote of confidence and go on juggling the millions of state money in its various public and private enterprises for at least another year.

The election, which will draw national attention, is noteworthy in other respects.

First "Recall" Election.

It marks the first attempt in the United States to oust state officials by means of the recall.

It will be the first contest in the United States since the origin of political parties in which state officers will be voted on without party designation.

It involves issues for the next state election, including the choice of a United States senator to succeed the veteran Porter J. McCumber.

It will be the first cleancut contest between the Nonpartisan league and its opponents, without complications in the way of party ballots.

The election is brought under the recall provisions of the North Dakota constitution, which were fathered in 1919 by the Nonpartisan league. Petitions signed by some 80,000 voters demanded the recall of three state officials, Gov. Lynn J. Frazier, Attorney General William Lemke, and John N. Hagan, commissioner of agriculture and labor. The petitions name a candidate against each of the trio. Under the law the names of all the candidates, those in office and those opposing them, go on the ballot without any party designation.

The Rival Candidates.

Additional candidates could have entered by petition, but did not do so. The lineup for the Oct. 28 election is as follows:

FOR GOVERNOR.

Lynn J. Frazier, Hoople, incumbent, Nonpartisan.

R. A. Nestos, Minot, petition candidate, Independent.

FOR ATTORNEY GENERAL.

John N. Hagan, Deering, incumbent, Nonpartisan.

Sveinbjorn Johnson, Grand Forks, petition candidate, Independent.

FOR COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE AND LABOR.

John N. Hagan, Derring, incumbent, Nonpartisan.

Joseph A. Kitchen, Sentinel Butte, petition candidate, Independent.

Nonpartisan leaguers insist the issue is unchanged, that they are battling to save the farmers of North Dakota from the "interests," and that the recall campaign is inspired by "big business." The whole purpose, they say, is to wreck the "farmer's program."

Independents say that program is already wrecked. It is a question now of salvage, they say. By mismanagement of the unlimited power granted it by law, they assert, the industrial commission has sunk assets of the state into favored banks now insolvent, into excessive farm loans, a mismanaged flour mill, and a Home Builders' association that has become a scandal.

BANDIT VICTIM NEAR DEATH.

Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 22.—Dr. R. W. Fuller of Murray, Ia., shot by bandits in a battle near that city Wednesday, is near death in a local hospital.

TWO NOTABLE WEDDINGS MARK DAY IN SOCIETY

When Miss Alice Pritchard Bradley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Dorr Bradley, became the bride of Frederick Taylor Fisher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lowrie Fisher of 1313 North State street, yesterday afternoon, she wore a chantilly lace gown which had belonged to her paternal great-grandmother. A narrow band of the same lace and a wreath of orange blossoms held her tulle veil in place. She carried swansonia and lilies of the valley.

The wedding took place in the Church of the Holy Spirit in Lake Forest, the Rev. John Herbert Edwards officiating. Lilies ornamented the altar. Chrysanthemums were used to decorate the church and the Arthur T. Aldis house in Lake Forest, which the Bradleys occupied this last summer and where a reception was held following the ceremony.

Sister Maid of Honor.

Miss Eleanor Bradley, the bride's sister and maid of honor, wore a gown of flame color crêpe embroidered in old gold and a tête de nêgre velvet hat with a yellow feather. The bridesmaids, Miss Margaret Fisher, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Cordelia Carpenter, Miss Miriam Ladd and Miss Alice Forbes of Boston, wore gowns of yellow crêpe and tête de nêgre velvet hats with flame color feathers. Their gowns also were embroidered in old gold and they and Miss Bradley carried chrysanthemums in autumn colors. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher will be at home after Dec. 1 at 56 West 11th street, New York City.

Miss Watkins Is Wed.

Another fashionable wedding that took place yesterday afternoon was that of Miss Isabel Joan Watkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ogle Watkins of 199 Lake Shore drive, and Alexander H. Revell Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander H. Revell of the Drake. It took place at the Fourth Presbyterian church, the Rev. John Timothy Stone reading the service. The bride's gown of white satin was trimmed with lace, which had been on the wedding gowns of her mother and maternal grandmother, and the court train was of the same lace. She wore a coronet of lace and seed pearls to hold in place a tulle veil.

The bridesmaids, Miss Alice Rodiger, Miss Grace Andrews, Miss Eleanor Jackson, Mrs. Hempstead Washburne, Miss Helen Gould of New York, and Miss Evelyn Searle of Minneapolis, wore quaint old fashioned frocks of taffeta and silk net in fuchsia shades. Their hats were of velvet in the same colors and they carried bouquets of autumn flowers.

Mrs. John H. McIlvaine, matron of honor, wore a gown of heavy crêpe in a fuchsia shade with a hat of the same shade velvet, and Miss Catherine Rehm, maid of honor, wore a crêpe gown of a shade lighter than Mrs. McIlvaine's. Mr. and Mrs. Revell will spend their honeymoon in the south and upon their return will live in Chicago.

CHICAGOAN SHOT DEAD FOLLOWING FIGHT OVER DUCK

John L. Johnson, 4507 North Robey street, member of the hardware specialty firm of Ackerman-Johnson company, 625 West Jackson boulevard, was shot to death yesterday at Antioch, Ill., after an argument over the possession of a duck with George Niggemery, owner of a boat livery on Fox lake.

The two men were out in the lake in rowboats, several hundred feet apart, shooting at the mallards and teal. When they both fired at a duck and it dropped to the water both men claimed it. There was a heated argument.

Witness Describes Slaying.

Johnson, according to Charles Holmes, who was hunting from a boat 100 feet away, started to row away. Then Niggemeyer is said to have pulled up his gun and blazed away at the Chicagoan. Johnson was shot in the back of the head. He died almost instantly.

Following the shooting, Niggemeyer rowed to shore and disappeared. A search was begun by Wesley Gray, deputy sheriff of Lake county, and Tom Tyrrell, assistant chief of police at Waukegan. They were aided by Antioch citizens.

Bring Body to Chicago.

Hunters, witnessing the tragedy, hastened to bring Johnson, lying in the bottom of his boat, to shore. Dr. H. F. Beede of Antioch was summoned, but the man was dead.

Last night, while an inquest was being held at Antioch farmers, duck hunters, and police officials were searching the countryside for Niggemeyer. Johnson's body was brought back to Chicago.

CAUSES WOMAN'S ARREST.

Mrs. Emma Jager, 1100 West Huron street, was arrested yesterday on complaint of Thomas H. Hurlbert, real estate dealer, 81 East Madison street, who declared she loitered in his office annoying employés and refused to leave when requested.

INSURANCE MEN WARN PUBLIC OF TWISTER'S WILES

"Cupid Gussie" Is at It Again, They Say.

Gustave Myers, known as an insurance "twister" by officials of the Chicago Association of Commerce, but more widely hailed as "Cupid Gussie" of the cabarets, because of his expeditions in Chicago's night life, again is operating in the city.

Modishly attired and riding in a flashily decorated motor car driven by a liveried chauffeur, an equipage that would have done credit to a king in the days before the war, Myers arrived a few days ago. This time he terms himself an "insurance counsellor."

Warns Public of Twisters.

James A. Davis, manager of the Advertisers and Investors' Protective Bureau, Inc., an organization formed by the Association of Commerce, issued a statement yesterday warning the public against the methods which he alleges Myers and his followers employ.

Mr. Davis defined an insurance twister as a person who attempts to twist your insurance from one company to another.

"Twisters," said Mr. Davis, "make it their business to induce policyholders to discontinue their policies for their cash values on the theory that they can invest the money thus obtained more advantageously and also be insured in a different company for a lower premium than they have been paying.

Gets 10 Per Cent for "Service."

"For this service, which the companies would perform for nothing, the twister charges 10 per cent, and also collects a commission when the client reinsures in another company."

A law which would make it a felony to "twist" insurance policies in this state will be advocated at the next session of the legislature, Mr. Davis said. Already New York state and several other states have enacted such laws.

Advertisements warning the public to avoid such agents have been inserted in the newspapers by the Advertisers and Investors' Protective bureau.

219 cubic feet of air, at nearly a mile-a-minute speed, is the air rush of the Hamilton Beach with its motor-driven beating brush. Column marked A represents this. Column marked B shows actual comparison of air volume per minute of ordinary cleaners with a beating brush.

We have added
Super-suction to the Beating brush
The vacuum cleaner sensation of 1921

Leading cleaners are of two basic types. One class relies on good suction, the other on a beating brush. The decision between them has been difficult because both have their points of advantage—and their limitations.

We knew the ideal type cleaner should have both strong suction and the beating brush! Strong suction to take up the surface dust and to make the attachments for cleaning and dusting everything in the house really efficient and tremendously worth while; Beating brush for instantly sweeping up clinging threads, hair, lint, and fuzz—and for shaking loose all deeply imbedded particles of cutting grit that are so destructive to the life of fine rugs. So we worked to this end.

Our efforts were rewarded by a gale of 219 cubic feet of air per minute! More than that of any previous cleaner. And besides we had the beating brush. We had succeeded in merging all the advantage of other cleaners in one amazing machine with multiplied cleaning power.

Doubly Efficient

So now you can have double efficiency in this marvelous cleaner. It is simple and swift, finely finished throughout; well balanced and compact. Though light, it has strength in generous measure, and looks, and a motor that works without whining. It is the only cleaner that has both super-suction and the beating brush. And it is absolutely guaranteed.

See This Latest Development

We believe you will be satisfied with no other, once you see the Hamilton Beach. It is a shining servant that is doubly thorough, though doubly swift. From corded bumper to handle tip, every detail points to lastingness and quality. No desired feature has been overlooked. Yet you can obtain its 30 superiorities for $55.00, an unrivalled value. BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

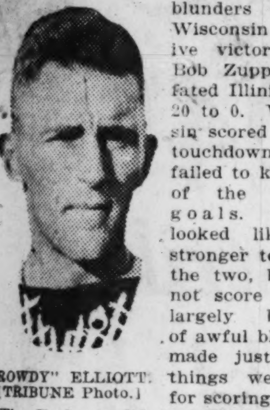
Urbana, Ill., Oct. 22.—[Special.]—Badger luck, combined with Illinois blunders gave Wisconsin a decisive victory over Bob Zuppke's ill fated Illini today, 20 to 0. Wisconsin scored three touchdowns and failed to kick one of the three goals. Illinois looked like the stronger team of the two, but did not score at all, largely because of awful blunders made just when things were set for scoring.



"ROWDY" ELLIOTT.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

The Badgers didn't make first down over five times during the entire battle, but they scored three touchdowns.

The Badgers had absolutely nothing in the way of offense, not even a shift or a deceiving formation, but they scored three touchdowns.

Badger Passes Fail.

The Badgers never once were able to complete a forward pass, though they tried at least a dozen. Every one of them fell flat. But they scored three touchdowns.

The Badger kickers were outpunted all afternoon by the kickers of the Illini. Probably the Wisconsin punts didn't average thirty-five yards. But the Badgers scored three touchdowns.

The first count came just before time was called for the second quarter. It had been mostly a kicking battle. Illinois had the ball and Mohr was back for a punt on his own 20 yard line. About three Wisconsin men charged him, and one of them blocked the ball. It went bounding back toward the Illinois goal, stopping about two yards from the goal, where Brumm, a Wisconsin linesman, pounced on it and dived over the line for a touchdown.

Early in the fourth quarter, after Wisconsin had intercepted an Illinois forward pass and had the ball in midfield, Half Back Elliott got loose on a regular old fashioned 1898 end run, making a big circle around the Illini right end and getting loose, with a man for interference. He went the fifty yards for a touchdown, incredible as it may seem.

Badgers Score Again.

Toward the end of the fourth quarter Illinois had taken the ball on its own 15 yard line, having held the Badgers for downs. In a desperate attempt to score a forward pass was tried. Dawson shot the ball to Rollin, a midget speeder sent in to see what he could do. He grabbed the ball away off to one side and barely on the line of scrimmage. A Wisconsin man tackled him and he fumbled the ball. The oval rebounded right into the arms of Wood of Wisconsin, who, with a clear field, dashed twenty yards for the third touchdown.

There wasn't much to be proud of in gaining the score, unless it was that 1898 end run by Elliott. Illinois looked a lot better and undoubtedly was much stronger than a week ago, when it lost to Iowa. But Iowa won by only 14 to 2. Wisconsin never once showed the attack or the defense of Iowa today, but won, 20 to 0.

Bad Passes Costly.

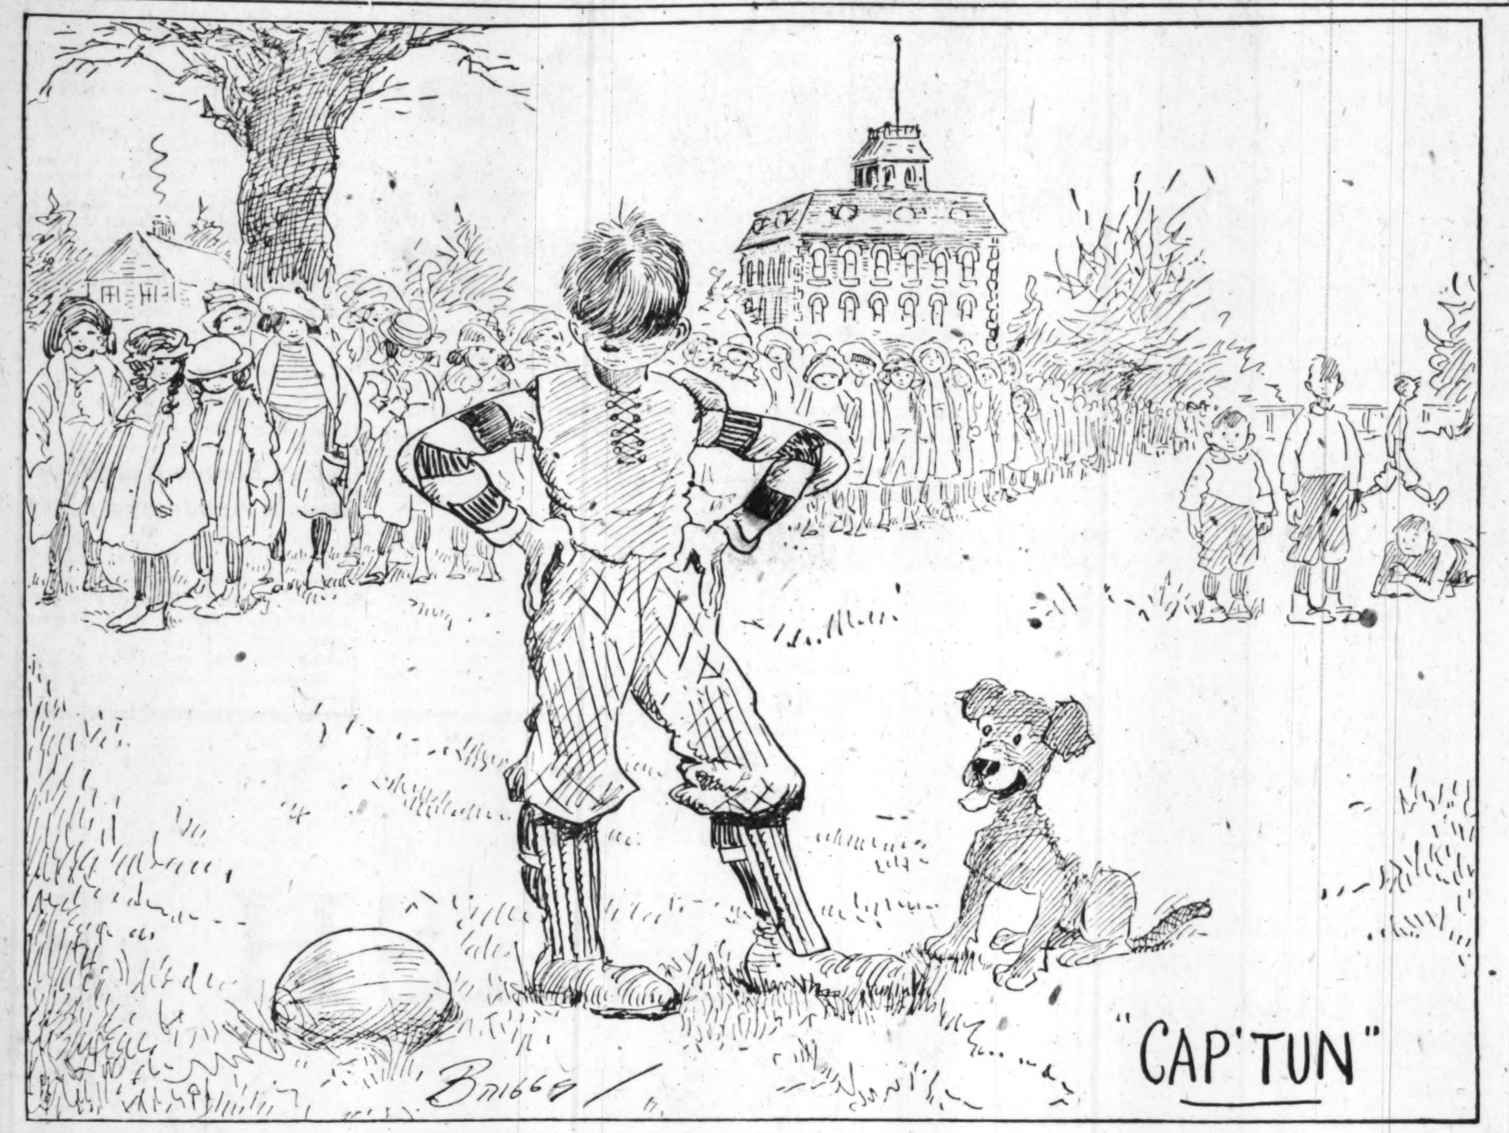
Bad passing and fumbling by Zuppke's men spoiled their chances and helped the Badgers to count. Five times during the game the center passed the ball clear out of range of the man waiting to receive it. Four of the bad passes were by Vogel, the regular.

In nearly every instance those awful blunders came when the Illini had the ball in Wisconsin's territory and were all set for big business. On one occasion it occurred on Wisconsin's 40 yard line.

On several occasions Illinois completed sparkling forward passes, but never was able to keep up the attack long enough to get results.

The weather was too hot for the players, and time was taken out often when it seemed the men were simply fagged out from heat. A crowd of perhaps 14,000 enjoyed the weather but got few thrills out of the game.

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT



IN the WAKE of the NEWS

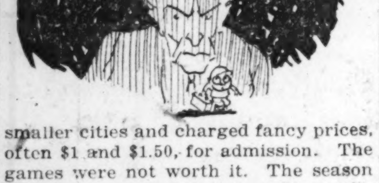
"EXHIBITION" BASEBALL.

"WHY shouldn't Babe Ruth go out and get all the money he can for exhibition games after the world's series is over?" is the question most frequently heard in arguments concerning the present controversy between the home run king and Judge Landis, baseball commissioner.

To say there is a rule against such action is merely begging the question. The Wake does not undertake to espouse or oppose the rule in its present form (although if it were slightly modified we could be enthusiastic), but the rule is there. Why?

According to the rulers of baseball it is both for the protection of the public and to sustain the dignity and reputation of the name "world's champions."

In olden days barnstorming trips after the season ended were common. So-called all-star teams played in the smaller cities and charged fancy prices, often $1 and $1.50, for admission. The games were not worth it. The season was over, nothing was at stake in the exhibitions, and the players were out for the money only. The games were no credit to baseball. In some instances they developed into mere hippodromes. So much for the public.



Several years ago an aggregation of Boston Red Sox, after winning a world's title, booked games. It was not the regular team, but filled in with other players. It did not play world's championship baseball. If we remember rightly, it was beaten by an unknown aggregation. This took glamour off the name.

Baseball's rulemakers contend that supervision of the world's series gives it standing, that the players profit from the receipts, that nothing should be allowed to cheapen the annual classic.

So they passed the rule of which Babe Ruth has run afoul.

Football as Is.

Bro. Crusinberry is making the rounds of "Little Nineteen" football elevens. At one college where, rivals assert, athletics are not held secondary to education, Bro. Crusinberry was present when the following conversation occurred in the training quarters:

Coach—Where's Blank? I heard he is sick.

First Star—I haven't saw him today.

Second Star—I seen him at lunch.

BABE DONE WITH OUTLAW GAMES; GOES HUNTING

New York, Oct. 22.—[Special.]—The baseball activities of George Herman Ruth ceased today, in consonance with the burly Babe's promise made on the previous evening to Col. L. Huston in Scranton, Pa. However, the four base flogger did not trek immediately in the direction of Chicago to face Judge Landis, supreme administrator of baseball. The Babe grasped the extended hand of Bob Shawkey and fled into the wilds with the red sleeved pitcher for a few days of hunting.

In the course of time Babe hopes to work his nerve up to the point of going to Chicago and telling the commissioner that he is sorry for his acts and is prepared to take his punishment.

SCHAEFER BEATS M'ANDLESS 3,307 POINTS IN MATCH

Jake Schaefer defeated Dave McAndless, 4,800 to 1,493, in their handicap match, which finished last night at Mussey's Madison street room. He won the afternoon block, 400 to 173, in thirteen innings, and the night session, 400 to 112, in seven innings. His grand average for the 4,800 points was approximately 55.

Starting tomorrow afternoon Welker Cochran will meet Dave McAndless, playing on the same terms as Schaefer, 4,800 to 3,000. Next week Edouard Horemans will play with Koji Yamada at Mussey's, and the following week Hoppe will appear against Charles Peterson.

HARVARD'S RALLY TURNS DEFEAT TO HARD TIE, 21-21

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 22.—Honors were even in the Penn State-Harvard game today, 21 to 21. It was a game of hard hammering, hard running, and scintillant open field play. Harvard led at the start and scored touchdown on touchdown with completing goals. Penn State followed suit and finally gained the lead, but Harvard, defeat impending in the fourth quarter, gathered its strength and scored again for a tie.

At the very end, almost in the gloom, Penn State was pounding hard and the ball was only ten yards from the Crimson goal.

Killinger Is State Star.

Penn State's story today had as its setting a shifty offensive formation, with power in the line, that opened holes consistently for Killinger, its crack quarter back; Wilson, a substitute, and Lightner. Wilson's run of sixty yards in the third period was a brilliant feat.

Harvard's eleven, uncertain in early games, found itself today. Its first touchdown marked its longest sustained advance of the season. Owen, who made it, had to retire soon afterward, but the makeshift backfield got together for another touchdown, with Chapin carrying the ball, before State could marshal its strength.

Harvard gave way in three Penn State rushing campaigns for touchdowns, then the Crimson backfield rallied.

Subs Stave Off Defeat.

Coburn, recently of the second team; Johnson, ordinarily a caller of signals, and Churchill, who came in as a substitute, hit the State line repeatedly until the twelve yard line was reached. Then the Crimson spread out, Buell threw the ball thirty yards obliquely, Churchill caught it on the run and carried two Penn Staters on his back for seven yards and a touchdown. Buell kicked the goal. Lineup:

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

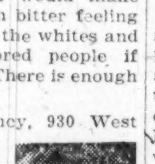
Should Jack Dempsey fight Harry Wills, or draw the color line?

Where Asked.

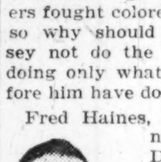
Madison street and Michigan boulevard.

The Answers.

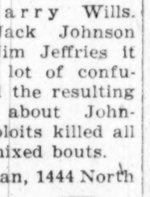
Martin Warshaw, 1512 South Homan avenue, salesman—The color line should be drawn by Jack Dempsey. The public would not stand for it anyway. It would make too much bitter feeling between the whites and the colored people if Dempsey fought Wills. There is enough bad feeling now.



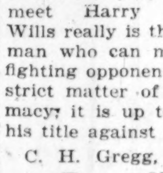
Mrs. Josephine Clancy, 930 West 35th street, saleswoman—Yes, Dempsey should meet him. It is not like running for president or an office-seeking proposition. All the former good fighters fought colored men; so why should Dempsey not do the same? He would be doing only what many champions before him have done.



Fred Haines, 5603 Blackstone avenue, chauffeur — No, Dempsey should not fight Harry Wills. When Jack Johnson fought Jim Jeffries it raised a lot of confusion, and the resulting scandal about Johnson's exploits killed all future desire for such mixed bouts.



Miss Katherine Newman, 1444 North Rockwell street, manicurist—The champion should show his fighting ability when it is challenged. For this reason Dempsey should meet Harry Wills. Wills really is the only man who can make a fighting opponent for Dempsey. As a strict matter of championship supremacy it is up to Dempsey to defend his title against every good opponent.



C. H. Gregg, 4618 Cottage Grove avenue, salesmanager—Yes, he should draw the color line, not only against Wills, but against all colored fighters. The pugilistic game went through a lot of trouble before, when the black man, Jack Johnson, became champion, and it is for the best interests of the sport that this should not be stirred up again. I am satisfied with Dempsey as the champion.

TILDEN DEFEATS VINNY RICHARDS BY CLOSE MARGIN

New York, Oct. 22.—[Special.]—William T. Tilden II., national and international tennis champion, and Vincent Richards, national junior champion, had another of their hammer and tongs battles this afternoon at the Jackson Heights Tennis club on Long Island, and once more Tilden was returned the victor, 7—5, 4—6, 6—4.

Richards played so brilliantly that Tilden was forced to employ every resource at his command. Richards' volleying was a revelation, while Tilden's control of his chops and drives bordered on the marvelous.

BY W. W. ("BILL") ROPER.
[Head Princeton Coach.]

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 22.—[Special.]—Chicago defeated Princeton today mainly because the Princeton line was unable to diagnose the Chicago offensive shifts. The Princeton linemen played too high and failed to shift with their opponents. When the latter were on the defense I repeatedly saw the Princeton line charged back.

BILL ROPER.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

The only way to meet an offensive formation of this character is by a hard charging defense cleaning up behind the line of scrimmage, and this the Princeton line, greatly to my disappointment, failed to do.

The Princeton ends were boxed all through the first half and practically offered no support to the tackles. The same thing was true of the guards.

Tiger Line Waits for Play.

The Princeton tackles were Chicago's objective point, and they swung plays inside and outside of them with splendid massed interference ahead of the runner. Had the Princeton line charged through they would have broken up this massed play, but their waiting on the line proved fatal.

At the start of the game the Chicago team was not sure of itself. Princeton had several opportunities to recover fumbles deep in their opponents' territory, but the Princeton ends seemed asleep. Twice I saw the ball lie on the ground without a Princeton man near it. Had these fumbles been recovered before a Chicago man was permitted to pick them up Princeton would have had a chance possibly to have scored in the first half.

Fail to Get Fumbles.

Princeton teams have always been famous for having a nose for the ball, but this team seemed to be particularly weak in this important point.

Chicago on the defense, while good, was not as good as on the offense. It played seven men on the line, one back about three or four yards behind the center, and two backs about ten yards back. This defense offered great possibilities for forward passes.

The Princeton quarter didn't take advantage of these opportunities and seemed to be more or less on the defensive. I admit there was little opportunity to open up the game in the first quarter. Chicago had the wind and the ball most of the time. In the second quarter, however, my team missed golden opportunities by playing too conservatively.

Tiger Ends Slow on Punts.

Van Gerbig punted beautifully. His kicks were nice and high, but the Princeton line, and especially the ends, were slow getting down the field all during the first half. In the second half they covered kicks better. The Princeton blocking, which was atrocious at Annapolis, was greatly improved, and Van Gerbig had no difficulty in getting his kicks off.

I thought there was a possibility to win the game at the beginning of the fourth quarter. Garrity, who is just recovering from a nasty injury, replaced Smith and signalized his appearance by making ten yards through the center of the line. Garrity's appearance on the field put ginger into the whole team.

An unfortunate penalty put the Princeton team back five yards with third down and twelve yards to go. Garrity, who was calling signals, called for a forward pass. He was free, but lack of practice prevented the perfect execution of the play. Had the ball not grounded Princeton might have had a faint chance to score.

Praise for Garrity.

Garrity really did wonderful service, in view of the fact that he hadn't been in a scrimmage for three weeks and only in the lineup a couple of times the whole year. He is a great back when in condition.

Chicago didn't open up the game as much as I had anticipated, but held the forward pass in reserve for the psychological moment in the fourth quarter. On a spread formation the ball was shot as true as a bullet to Romney on the left wing.

The play was beautifully executed and gives some idea of Chicago's forward passing ability. Chicago made much ground on the forward pass on this particular play.

Substitutes Help Stagg.

Chicago's kicking, while good, was not quite as long as Van Gerbig's. I thought the frequent substitutions in the Chicago team showed good headwork and an effective use of all the possible material.

Chicago came a long distance, played under tremendous disadvantages, and proved to be the better team. I have no excuse to offer. The Maroons were better than I anticipated and won the game fairly and squarely.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 22.—[Special.]—Ohio State's Big Ten champions of 1920 took the second step toward retaining their honors today when they downed Michigan's Yostmen, 14 to 0, on Ferry field before 40,000 spectators, the largest crowd which ever saw a football game in Ann Arbor.

JOHNNY STUART.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

To enjoy the triumph, which cast an unexpected shadow over Maize and Blue, were 6,000 Buckeye supporters, a record pilgrimage in western football history, who came from Columbus in eight special trains and hundreds of automobiles decorated to inform the holders that a big event was impending. Ohio State thinks well of its football team. So does Gov. Harry Davis; who mingled on the sidelines with the cheer leaders and band before the game. So does Michigan now.

Greatest Crowd in West.

It was the greatest football crowd we have known in the west, and while a majority of the spectators, caparisoned with yellow and blue or scarlet and black ribbons, was disappointed, the vast assemblage saw a spectacular contest in which punting and the open or passing game predominated.

A Wolverine partisan might say Ohio State won through taking advantage of Michigan's mistakes. This was true in part, but the neutral would add that the better team won. It won because it outsmarted, to borrow a rustic expression, its opponents for the first touchdown in the second quarter and because it had the necessary punch to drive through when opportunity offered early in the fourth quarter.

Trick Helps Buckeyes.

The break which turned the tide was an unexpected and wily trick by the visitors which they had been rehearsing behind closed gates and which took Michigan unawares, although we must ascribe some stupidity to the Wolverines in being outwitted.

With the ball on Michigan's twenty-five yard line, Steketee, whose kicking was hardly up to his usual standard, dropped back to punt on a fourth down. The kick was high, barely to the center of the field toward the north side. The ball fell among a cluster of Wolverines and Buckeyes, bounding slowly in the direction of the Michigan goal. The Yostmen, as polite and considerate hosts, stood waiting for an Ohio man to fall on the ball.

Stuart Races for Score.

The Buckeye jazz stepped and fox trotted around it, then suddenly opened their ranks. Stuart came up on the dead run, picked up the oval, veered to the extreme edge of the gridiron, and scampered forty yards along the sideline for a touchdown; and two frantic Michigan tacklers failed to reach him until he had passed the last chalk mark. That was Ohio State's first touchdown.

Up to this point Michigan was slightly more than holding its own with the invaders. Even after Ohio scored, Michigan strove desperately, and near the end of the half had the ball on Ohio's eighteen yard line as the result of a twenty-five yard heave from Robey to Goebel, but four passes in succession were broken up.

Touchdown in Fourth Period.

The touchdown, which effectually settled the issue, took place at the opening of the fourth quarter. Near the end of the third period Ohio obtained the ball on Michigan's 45 yard line when one of Steketee's punts was partially blocked. It added a first down through the line and then, after two plays, Workman tossed far over the line of scrimmage to Trott, who was downed on Michigan's 11 yard line. Weaver replaced Taylor and, against a desperate Michigan defense, Ohio required four attempts for a first down.

Puts Ball on One-Foot Line.

Workman put the ball twelve inches from the Wolverine goal as the quarter ended. Then a strange thing happened. Weaver, whose effort had made the score imminent, was replaced by Taylor as the quarter opened. Once again that maize and blue line held its enemy one foot from a score, but on the third attempt Taylor plunged and rolled over the objective line at the bottom of a heap of blue and cardinal jerseys.

MAROONS JOLT TIGERS; WIN, 9-0; ROMNEY A STAR

age brand of football played by any Maroon team of recent years. The westerners tackled in a manner which augurs well for success in remaining conference games. The interference took off tacklers in a pleasing fashion while the men followed the ball with accuracy.

Maroon Rooters Wild.

It was the sort of football which caused close to 1,000 Chicago rooters to go wild with joy and caused Princeton enthusiasts to worry about the future battles with Yale and Harvard.

In winning, Chicago cast aside all principles of football. Its work brought forth severe criticism from the great assembly of scouts who occupied seats in the press stands. Contrary to the usual custom of kicking when they retrieved the ball on their own ten or fifteen yard line, the Maroons put the ball in play in a go-as-you-please manner as if they were opposed to a team which could be defeated easily.

The possibility of a fumble or missed signal was nothing in the young lives of the warriors who invaded the east. When they needed a yard for first down in midfield the punter was not called into commission. On such occasions the full back was sent at Capt. Keck, regarded the strongest point in the opposition.

When Chicago made its march in the second quarter and got the ball to the 10 yard line the team was criticized because it did not have the punch to put it across. In the fourth period, when the oval was close to the Tiger goal line, another failure to register a touchdown was noted. A second later Princeton enthusiasts and scouts were amazed to see the ball go flying into the arms of Romney, who had an unmolested path to the goal.

Beaten at Own Game.

Princeton was beaten at its own game—the slashing, driving attack directed at the line and off the tackles. No sooner had Chicago obtained possession of the oval than a line attack was called into commission much to the surprise of those who had expected the high advertised aerial attack. The comparatively easy manner in which the Tiger line was thrown apart and the forward left lying on the ground was something which has seldom happened to a Princeton team.

On defense Chicago was equally powerful. The Tiger team made only four first downs. Chicago played a tight line defense whenever the Tigers started to hammer the forwards. On spread plays the forwards opened up with the result Princeton was helpless. The green line of Chicago had turned into a veritable stone wall since the last time it showed its wares to the public in the Purdue game.

Shift Puzzles Princeton.

In striking contrast to the sluggish attempts of the Tigers to gain ground was the smooth working offense of the Maroons. Coach Stagg had perfected a shift for this game which could not be stopped. The shift consisted of plays being sprung behind an unbalanced line, with the back field shifted to the side of attack. On some plays a lineman would move over to the strong side and place himself between center or guard or tackle and guard. The ball was passed directly to the runner, who drove with so much power that ground was gained when opposition was met.

The work of Chicago's forwards was beyond criticism. They played far better than even Coach Stagg expected. They did not play the low, rooting game of the Princeton linemen. Instead they charged in bentover positions and used their hands well on defense.

The Maroons entered the fray in a confident manner. Plays were sprung in deliberate fashion and when the backs or linemen were not set for the effort the signal was changed and a new formation called. They were not disturbed when Hank Garrity, the Tigers' great full back, was injected into the fray after Chicago had scored its touchdown in the last quarter. Like Keck, the big full back was totally unknown to the visitors and they treated him to several surprises before he even reached the scrimmage line.

Garrity Makes Ground.

In justice to Garrity it must be said he made two of the first downs made by Princeton. He made this yardage through his own efforts to carrying the ball on successive downs. He tore into the Chicago line with all the speed and power of his makeup, but in the majority of cases he was stopped before he had made decided impression.

Princeton's attempts at forward passing were not cleverly executed. The ball was snapped back to the passer who stood in the kicker's position. The ends tried to outrun the Maroon flank players and beat them to the ball. Crisler, Hallady and Strohmeier proved too speedy and the oval was generally knocked down.

Stagg Uses Fresh Men.

One of the main factors in deciding the issue was the great generalship of Coach Stagg in resubstituting his men. He used almost every man of promise on his team and when any player showed the slightest signs of weakening he was taken out and a fresh player injected.

It was a great triumph for western football. It was the first time in years that the two sections have met with representative teams and the victory was sweet to those who upheld the brand as played by western conference universities against that employed in the east. It was the first time the Tigers have given battle to a western eleven since the early 80's when Michigan was defeated.

In the second period Princeton worked the oval inside Chicago's 40 yard line. It was held, and then Smith tried a drop kick from midfield. The oval fell short, and this was the closest the Tigers ever came to scoring. The Maroons would not budge when their territory was in danger.

Crisler Plays Good Game.

It would be almost impossible to pick out an individual star on the victorious eleven. They all played well, and each made it possible for the other to do something to help bring about victory.

Although Romney kicked the field goal and caught the forward pass which resulted in a touchdown, there were other reliable performers on the Chicago team. Fritz Crisler played one of the best games of his career at right end. It was his work in boxing Keck in or out which aided the full backs and half backs to make ground through the Tigers' captain. He was down under kicks and always in the vicinity of the ball.

Charles Redmon played himself out at guard. During the time he was in the battle he was among the last to pick himself off the ground and get back in position. He was picked as the soft spot in the Maroon defense, but such proved far from being the case.

McGuire Makes Holes in Line.

Capt. McGuire played a great game despite being opposite to the much advertised Capt. Keck. He was not pushed out of position and he was instrumental in making holes for his ball carriers. Fletcher, who was picked for left tackle just before game time, played all through the battle and performed flawlessly. King at center played a strong game, although two bad passes lost yards for Chicago at times when its attack was going well.

Strohmeier and Halladay did all that could be expected. The Tigers' backs did not get around them and they smashed the interference in such a manner that the runner was turned out clean for a clear tackle by the secondary defense.

Plunging Game Unexpected.

Back of the line Timme, Thomas, and Zorn, who held down the full back position, could not have done better. Their line plunging was wholly unexpected by the opposition. Bryan and Hurlburt did well at right half back, although the latter showed a tendency to run back when trying to get out around the end.

Bobby Cole, the 150 pound left half back, was at the top of his game. This little demon tore into the big Tiger tacklers with absolute fearlessness. He plunged with the power of a man much heavier and was generally good for substantial gains. Romney handled the team in excellent fashion. He played the ball safe when catching punts and allowed it to strike the ground whenever he was in doubt about catching it.

STUDENTS CELEBRATE HERE.

The University of Chicago campus took on the appearance of an Indian encampment yesterday when the students learned of the 9 to 0 victory over Princeton.

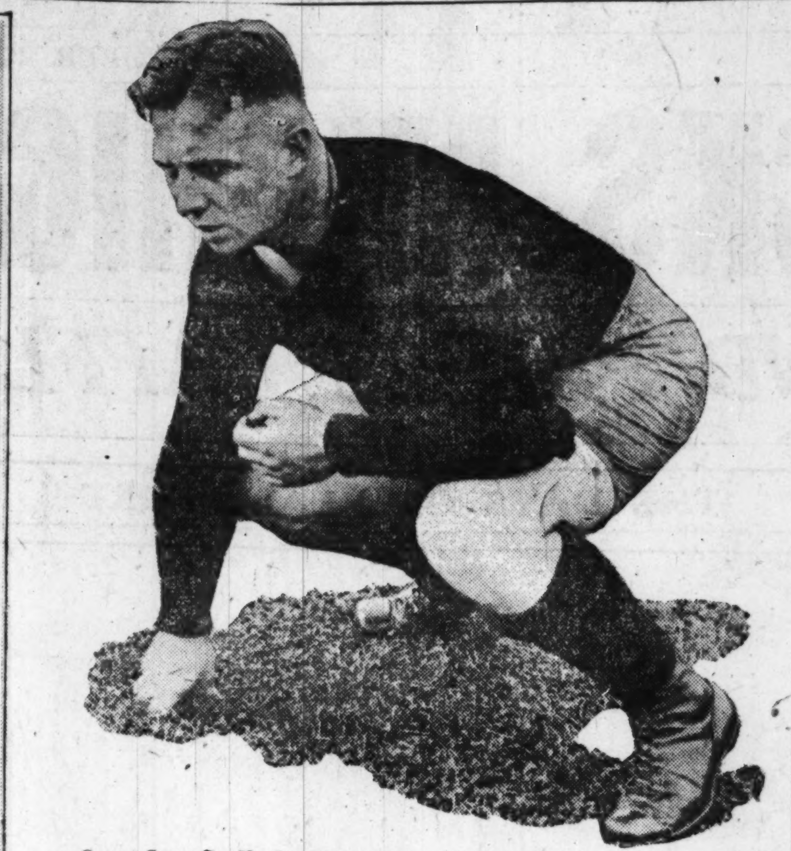
Fires were built in several places on the walks through the campus, and hundreds of the students did a snake dance. The police were called by residents who feared their property would be damaged. Three policemen were sent to the scene and were kept busy for several hours trying to keep the students within bounds.

The "snake dancers" moved along the Midway, and many of the students entered alleys in the neighborhood and built fires. The police extinguished these as fast as they were found and drove the students back to the Midway.

MAROON HERO AND TIGER CAPTAIN, OBJECT OF STAGG'S ATTACK

Milton Romney, star quarter of Maroon eleven, scored every point for Stagg's team in triumph over Princeton yesterday.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]



Capt. Stanton Keck, Princeton's all-American tackle, suffered the brunt of Chicago's terrific line-pounding game yesterday, but went down at the head of his warriors, game, although exhausted. Even Keck was not invincible against the special attack on him, but he played a gritty, fighting game, which was one of the individual features of the great struggle.

GOPHERS UPSET INDIANA ELEVEN BY 6 TO 0 SCORE

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 22.—[Special.]—Minnesota made a brilliant comeback this afternoon on Northrop field and stopped Indiana's husky eleven, 6 to 0. A long forward pass in the third quarter, Gilstad to Martineau, took the ball from the 46 yard line to within 5 yards of the goal. Martineau made a brilliant one handed catch of the ball on the 16 yard line and fought his way to the 5 yard line. Then Brown smashed through center for a touchdown.

Three times in the last quarter Indiana carried the ball to within five yards of the goal but each time the Gopher defense stiffened. Lineup:

Notre Dame, Ind., Oct. 22.—[Special.]—Notre Dame's power and versatility and above all, one Eddie Anderson, made a combination too powerful for Nebraska to cope with in the homecoming game today, and the Huskers went down in defeat, 7 to 0.

Notre Dame made thirteen first downs against Nebraska's three, and 196 yards in scrimmage, as compared to 54. Neither team showed much in the way of an overhead attack, although Nebraska tried desperately by this route in the last quarter.

Between halves the 15,000 spectators stood in silence for one minute in honor of the memory of George Gipp, Notre Dame's All-American half back, who died shortly after the end of the 1920 season.

To the Notre Dame linesmen and to Capt. Eddie Anderson goes credit for the victory. Anderson, with his flank mate, Kiley, were down the field under Castner's punts with remarkable speed, and invariably dumped the receiver in his tracks. Eddie recovered two Nebraska fumbles, which helped swing the tide.

Castner tried four drop kicks, varying from 25 to 50 yards, but none went true. Nebraska showed a rugged defense under its own goal, but was unable to make headway through Notre Dame. The excellent punting of Llewellyn enabled Nebraska to stave off a larger score.

OLD ELI ELEVEN WINS OVER ARMY TEAM BY 14 TO 7

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 22.—[Special.]—By the margin of a single touchdown Yale triumphed over the Army eleven in the "reunion game" between the two schools in the bowl this afternoon. The score was 14 to 7 when the bulldog finished grappling with an opponent that promised to be easy, but turned out to have a punch concealed in each hand.

This resumption of the historic series between the Elis and the soldiers from West Point was the biggest football spectacle of the year so far at Yale. A crowd that reached the proportions of about 73,000 attended and was treated to a game chock full of thrills.

It was not exactly a complete victory for the Elis. Their goal line was crossed for the first time this season, and a determined Army onslaught nearly evened the score in the closing moments. Lineup:

The

presents the most striking contrast of high quality and low price that the industry has ever known.

A big, handsome, roomy car of slim, graceful lines, amply powered and slung on unusually long semi-elliptic springs, the Nash Four was designed and built as the quality leader among high grade four-cylinder cars. Even at its original price of $1395, its remarkable value was apparent in every feature.

In quality it is comparable only with the very highest grade four-cylinder automobiles.

Yet in price, at its new low figure of $1045, it is virtually on a par with the accepted popular priced car market.

You Expect More in a Nash

You expect the power, flexibility and ease of handling for which the Nash Perfected Valve-in-Head Motor is so widely famous. You expect the beauty of body design and finish which always characterizes a Nash product.

And you expect the riding comfort of a big car, even over the roughest roads.

And You Get It for Less Money

In every attribute of appearance, performance and riding comfort, this car will exceed your expectations.

The new low price, $1045, for such unheard-of value, is possible only through greatly increased production and a slender margin of profit.

Drive this car today—test its speed on some smooth stretch of road, try its power and acceleration on some stiff hill, then drive it through traffic and observe how smoothly it throttles down.

Jack Preigh's 35 yard drop kick in the second quarter broke a 7 to 7 tie and La Grange High school's football machine handed the Oak Park High eleven its first defeat in four years of play in a Suburban league battle at La Grange field yesterday. The score was 10 to 7.

The game was one of the best played and most bitterly contested ever seen on the La Grange gridiron, the teams fighting to break the tie in the second quarter, while in the third and fourth periods the Oak Park players extended themselves to the straining point in a futile attempt to grasp a last minute victory.

La Grange First to Score.

La Grange scored its touchdown in the first quarter, Williams going over after a series of line bucks had brought the ball to Oak Park's 3 yard line. In the opening minutes of the second period Robinson evened the count for Oak Park, taking a pass from Ferretti and running twenty yards for the touchdown. Preigh won for La Grange with three minutes to play in the second quarter with his field goal.

La Grange opened up an open and shift play attack which apparently puzzled the Oak Parkers, Williams and Evans circling the right side of the Oak Park line for consistent gains. The shift play evolved by Coach Osborne worked well, with Evans carrying the ball. Oak Park used a line shift, but attempts at ends were quickly smothered by the forwards, Capt. Kennedy leading in the defense.

Three Oak Parkers Hurt.

Three Oak Park players, Robinson, half back; Wilkins, quarter back, and Kirchman, half back, were forced out of the game through injuries. Lineup:

A THRILLING MOMENT IN PREP GRID GAME

LANE HITS SENN LINE FOR TRIUMPH OF 12-0

Lane Tech cleared the way to the championship of the north section in the Chicago High School league at Cub park yesterday, defeating Senn, 12 to 0, by the success of its line plunging and end runs.

The Lane eleven used steam roller tactics, with Baird and Woodward, plunging through the line for steady gains. Senn was unable to stop this smashing attack, and Baird went over for the victors' initial touchdown toward the end of the first half after the ball had been taken down the field by plunges and long end runs in an onslaught led by Bohusky.

Senn endneavored to turn the tide in the third quarter by raining passes but the Lane backs broke up the aerial attack and Bohusky carried the oval across the goal line for Lane's second touchdown. As after the first touchdown, Koch missed the goal kick.

The lightweight game between Lane and Lake View was played to a scoreless tie, neither team getting within twenty yards of a touchdown. Both elevens relied on line plunges and end runs to chalk up their gains, trying few passes. Seven thousand backers of the three high schools turned out for the battles. Lineups:

Woods and Waters

by BOB BECKER

IN THE DUCK BLIND.

BOB BECKER.

WHEN the big flights of ducks come piling in from the north, every duck hunter has just one ambition in mind—to get into a snug blind and unlimber the old cannon. This type of water fowl shooting is, without doubt a great sport and requires the most in a bird shooter, as it takes patience, keen eyes, alertness, and skill in the use of the shotgun to get ducks.

In many parts of the United States shooting from a blind for open water ducks is considered the cream of water-fowl hunting. However, many of us would just as soon bag the mallard, the king of marsh ducks, as any bird that flies.

Of the open water ducks, the highly praised canvasback is usually placed at the head of the list. This duck favors the open and deep water and feeds by diving. Great bird, the canvasback, and to shoot him is a mighty sporty proposition. After you get him you have something, too.

Alongside of the canvasback can be placed the redhead, who is not to be sneezed at when you are talking about good looking and good eating ducks. The redhead is not quite as big as the canvasback, but he is considered by many hunters the equal of the larger species for eating. These two birds are the topnotchers among open water or sea ducks, and most any of us would be perfectly satisfied to put in a few days shooting them alone.

The bluebill is another open water duck that furnishes hundreds of hunters some sport each fall.

Among the marsh ducks the mallard and the pintail are usually ranked as favorites. Some fellows can't see anything but mallard shooting, and you can't blame 'em. The wily "greenhead" is a wonderful bird and furnishes splendid sport.

The pintail is in some respects a peculiar bird. He is about the most suspicious, wary member of the marsh duck group, and when it comes to high flying he takes the prize. This long necked, handsome fellow—a favorite of many gunners—loves the high spots, but, as one hunter says, "the higher they fly, the nicer they fall."

But bagging ducks from a well placed blind is not as easy as it sounds. We have seen any number of green hunters come in disappointed because they didn't observe two requirements. They didn't sit still and they didn't use the duck call properly. To sit perfectly still while a flock of ducks is circling around is not easy, but it is essential to success. Many a good shot is lost by the hunter's being impatient and moving before he should.

Using the duck call at the right time is a clever trick, but too much of it will scare birds rather than attract them. Choke off the call with one hand, take it easy, and just talk a little chummy duck chatter into it. That is all that is necessary.

CARDINALS EXPECT TOUGH GAME TODAY

PADDY DRISCOLL.

The Chicago Cardinals will have no easy foe to battle this afternoon at Normal park, judging from the appearance of the Columbus Panhandles, who with their manager Joe Carr, arrived in the city last night. Carr has a husky bunch of players, and if they have any measure of fleetness comparable with their weight they are going to display some real football in the south side grid clash.

The Nesser family, which composes a large part of the team, was in evidence and the name Nesser was conspicuous on the register of the hostelry where the Panhandles are quartered. The Cardinals today will be reinforced by the addition of Pete Steger, former Oak Park half back, and Gob Buckeye

STALEYS TO PLAY STRONG DAYTON GRID TEAM TODAY

RUSSELL HATHAWAY.

"Harley to Stinchcomb," an all-American combination which brought fame to Ohio State's champions, is looked for to carry the Staleys to victory over the strong Dayton (O.) Triangles at Cub park this afternoon. Play is scheduled to start at 2:30.

The game is expected to develop into an open one, with both elevens trying for long gains via the forward pass route. Stinchcomb was considered the best receiver in the west when he was with the Buckeyes, and George Halas, Illinois and Great Lakes end, is almost equally as proficient.

Dayton Lineup Strong.

Dayton has one of the most powerful elevens in the American Professional Football league, numbering among its stars Dale Sies, Pittsburgh's giant guard; "Hack" Abbott, last year Syracuse star half back, who received honorable all-American mention; King of Centre; Russell Hathaway, former place kicker and captain of Indiana, and Eddie Sauer, the 240 pound tackle from Miami.

Coach Halas will start the same lineup which already has won three games this fall, with Huffine (Purdue), at full back; Chick Harley (Ohio), and Sternaman (Illinois), at halves, and Pete Stinchcomb (Ohio), at quarter. The ends will be taken care of by Chamberlain (Nebraska), and Halas (Illinois).

Staleys Out to Win.

TICKETS FOR AURORA BOUTS ARE GOING FAST

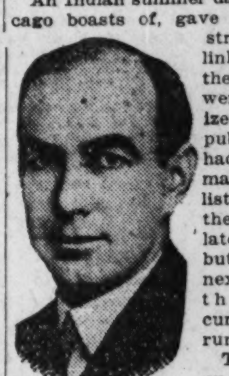
Jim [Tex] Mullen is personally handling the ticket sale for next Friday night's boxing show at Aurora. Mullen says that, judging from the advance orders he has received, the opening of the indoor season of his Aurora club will be a financial success. One order was received yesterday from Tommy Malloy, a Frankie Schaeffer booster, for fifty seats.

Schaeffer's friends will be on hand to root for the south sider against Kid Wagner, the Philly opponent. Wagner is a member of the Glassman stable and learned many points from Lew Tendler, with whom he has been boxing for the last three years. Up to date Schaeffer rules a 7 to 5 favorite in the betting.

Tickets for the Aurora show are on sale at 153 North Clark street and at 129 North Dearborn street.

INDIAN SUMMER DAY BRINGS MANY TO GOLF COURSES

BY JOE DAVIS.



GEORGE O'NEILL.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

An Indian summer day, the kind Chicago boasts of, gave the golfers a strong call to the links, and most of the local courses were well patronized, while the public courses had their customary waiting lists. A few of the clubs have belated schedules, but inside of the next two weeks the competitive curtain will be rung down.

The fine weather is giving the groundsmen plenty of opportunity to rush alterations, and work at Beverly, Calumet, Chicago, Exmoor, the new Butterfield club, Northmoor, and several other clubs is progressing finely.

The new course at Barrington, being constructed by George O'Neil and Jack Croke, is well under way, and it is expected that nine holes will be ready for play early next year.

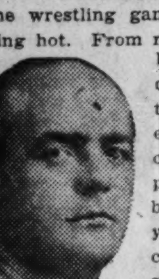
ZBYSZKO DEFI BRINGS RETORT FROM PLESTINA

BY FRANK SMITH.

The wrestling game in Chicago is getting hot. From now on there will be a mass of charges and counter charges which eventually may clear an atmosphere that has been foggy for years. Taking exception to some statements in an article that appeared in THE TRIBUNE several days ago, J. H. Herman, manager of Stanislaus Zbyszko, was the first to unloose his guns.



STANISLAUS ZBYSZKO.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mr. Herman set us right on the date of Zbyszko's departure from Europe. We had him in the United States at the time the article was written. It seems that he had just sailed. We stand corrected. We took it from a very good friend of Mr. Herman—we must get our information from his friends for it never has been our pleasure to meet Mr. Herman—that Zbyszko was to wrestle Caddock in Des Moines last Tuesday (later we learned the bout had been postponed). We stand corrected again.

A Joker in Letter.

There is one paragraph in Mr. Herman's missive that bears repeating here.

"As long as he [Zbyszko] is champion," Mr. Herman writes, "you can rest assured that all those entitled to a chance and those Zbyszko has not already defeated will be given an opportunity to defeat Zbyszko for the title."

That brings us to a letter, or rather a challenge, received late on Friday night from the manager of Marin Plestina. If information given us is correct—and we have no reason to doubt its authenticity—Zbyszko defeated Plestina several years ago when Plestina was young and green at the game. Since that time Plestina has improved and improved greatly, we are told. Those few words, "those Zbyszko has not already defeated" in Herman's letter may be an "out" for the Pole and his manager, but the Plestina challenge is printed herewith and it is for the public to come to its own conclusion regarding a match betwen the men.

Here Is Challenge.

The challenge seems fair. We do not vouch for any charges made therein. Here is the challenge:

In THE TRIBUNE of Oct. 15, I read an article on the wrestling game written by you. I note that you say three dates have been arranged for the appearance of Stanislaus Zbyszko in Chicago and these dates are Oct. 31, Dec. 1, and Jan. 2, but the opponents have not been picked as yet, or if so they have not been announced. It is whispered among those who know that 'Strangler' Lewis is to be his first opponent, and the next will be either Pesek or Caddock and the third will be Joe Stecher, at which time Zbyszko is to lose the 'trust' title.

"This comes from people pretty close to the 'trust.' Why should Zbyszko wrestle the same men he defeated last season when there are others anxious to wrestle him, but whom he dares not take on because he is controlled by the 'trust'?

Gives Herman a Chance.

"His manager, J. H. Herman, has in the last week sent broadcast over the country letters stating that Zbyszko was ready to meet any wrestler in the world, so I am going to give him a chance. They haven't announced their card for any of the dates yet, so I am going to ask Zbyszko and his manager to make good on their latest talk.

"Before they (the trust) announce their card for their Dec. 1 date I wish to give Zbyszko a chance to meet a real wrestler and one that he cannot fix. Martin Plestina will meet Zbyszko on Dec. 1 and will donate all of his share of the gate to any cause the editor of THE TRIBUNE may name. Under no condition is Plestina to receive one dollar for his work. I will also add that I will present the same cause with $1,000 out of my own pocket if Plestina fails to defeat Zbyszko in two straight falls.

Benefit for Worthy Causes.

"There are many very worthy causes in Chicago at the present time which could be greatly benefited by the proceeds of such a match. The wounded soldiers, for instance, or the unemployed of the city. But I'll let THE TRIBUNE pick the cause Plestina's share of the gate is to go to. I will also add that we are willing to wrestle winner take all. But if Herman and Zbyszko are afraid to wrestle winner take all we will wrestle 60 per cent to the winner and 40 per cent to the loser, all of Plestina's share to go to the cause and Herman and Zbyszko can do whatever they like with theirs.

"Plestina is a Chicago man. An American citizen. Has lived in Chicago over sixteen years and has a wife and four children living here.

"Now watch for the alibis Jack Herman, manager of Zbyszko, will have to offer."

The challenge is signed by J. C. Marsh, manager of Plestina.

Said the Motorman:

Brown's Beach Jacket

"Brown's Beach Jacket certainly fulfills all the claims you make for it. The cloth, while thick, is pliable, and readily adjusts itself to the form, making it a very comfortable garment to wear. Besides, it is just as warm as a leather coat or vest, and more neat and tasty in appearance."

It is as warm as an overcoat, cheaper than a good sweater, wears like iron and can be washed. It comes coat with collar, coat without collar, and vest.

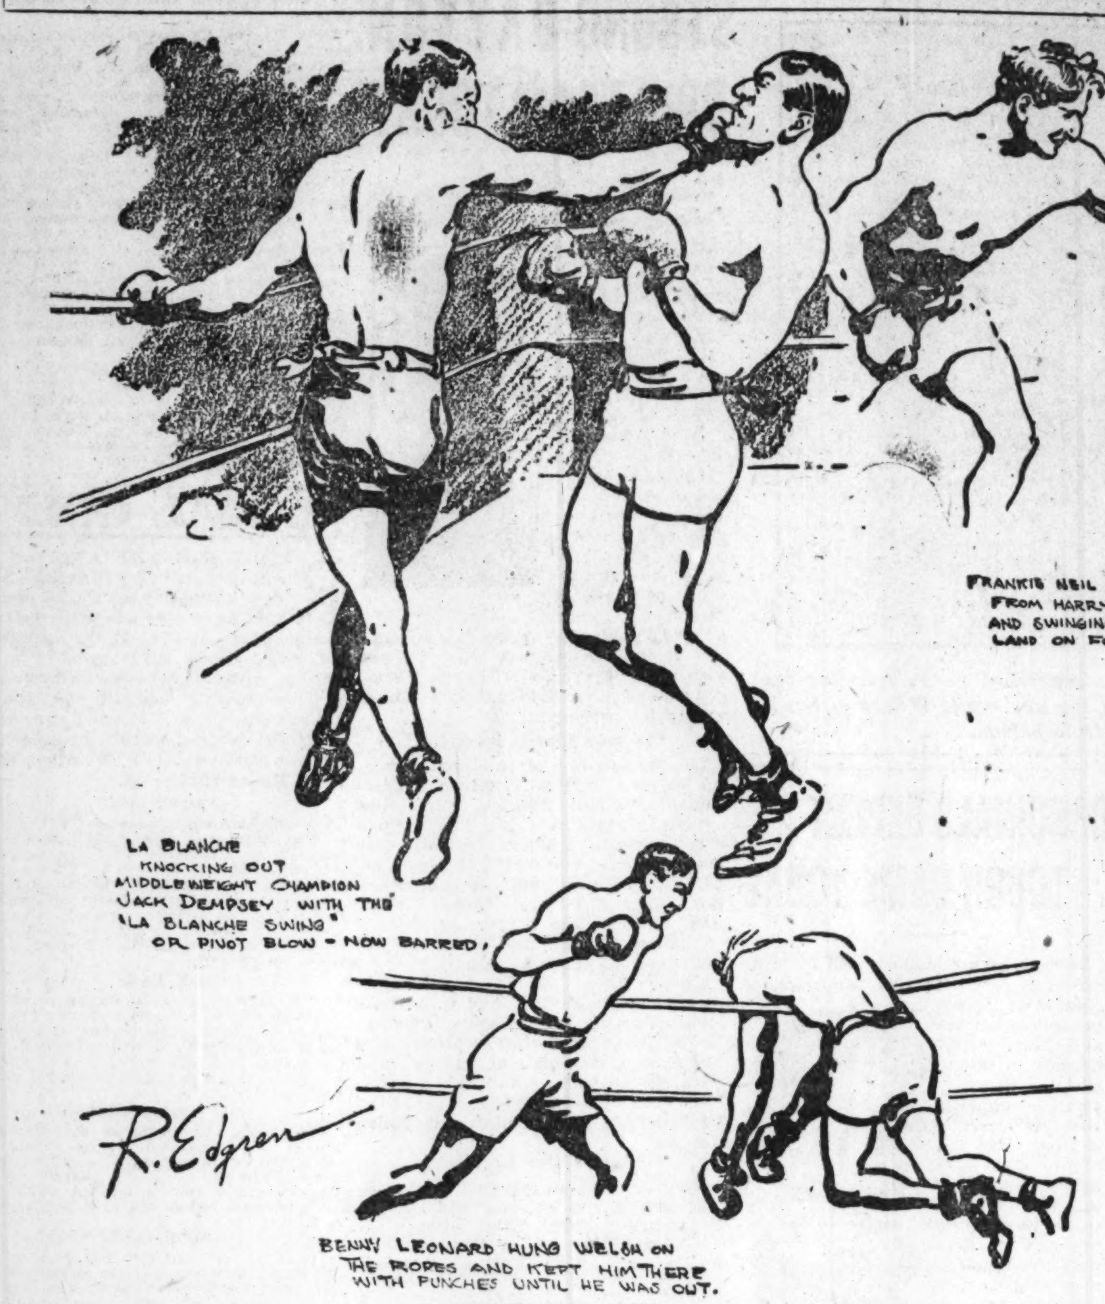
ODD KNOCKOUTS THAT WIN CHAMPIONSHIPS



FRANKIE NEIL WON THE BANTAM TITLE FROM HARRY FORBES BY SIDE-STEPPIN AND SWINGING HIS ARM LIKE A CLUB TO LAND ON FORBES' STOMACH
LA BLANCHE KNOCKING OUT MIDDLEWEIGHT CHAMPION JACK DEMPSEY WITH THE "LA BLANCHE SWING" OR PIVOT BLOW - NOW BARRED.
R. Edgren
BENNY LEONARD HUNG WELSH ON THE ROPES AND KEPT HIM THERE WITH PUNCHES UNTIL HE WAS OUT.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

QUEER things happen in the ring. Nothing is more uncertain than a boxing match in which two good men meet. A fight is never over until the last count or the decision of the referee. Often an apparently beaten man wins through landing an unexpected blow.

Such a thing happened when George La Blanche knocked out the old Jack Dempsey, the Nonpareil, former middleweight champion. The fight was in San Francisco, Aug. 27, 1889. At that time Dempsey was regarded as without a peer in his class. He had met the Marine, as La Blanche was called, in 1886, and had knocked him out in thirteen rounds. After that La Blanche had beaten a lot of other good men and earned a right to challenge Dempsey again.

No Rushing at Start.

In those days fights were usually to a finish, and when good men met they often went many rounds. There was no rushing in for a quick knockout. Each man tried to outgeneral the other, and the finishing blows started only when one was weakened or tricked into leaving sure openings.

Jack Dempsey outfought La Blanche all the way until the thirty-second round. Here he had the Marine dazed, groggy, and bewildered. The fight seemed all over. La Blanche, unable to hold off Dempsey's swift attack, turned his back, and catching the rope with his left hand tried to slip aisde and escape until he could recover. Dempsey stepped in La Blanche whirled around to face Dempsey again and in turning swung his right arm at full length as if trying to brush Dempsey back.

Dempsey Knocked Out.

The side of his fist struck Dempsey on the point of the chin. To the amazement of the crowd Dempsey fell in a heap, knocked out. La Blanche was as startled by this unexpected result as any of the spectators. But when he realized that he had won he encouraged the impression that he had simply used a new and clever blow. They called it "the La Blanche swing," and for some time afterward La Blanche practiced it, and other fighters tried to use it.

It was renamed the pivot blow and finally was barred, and all boxing rules today forbid it as a foul.

Odd K. O. by Frankie Neil.

I saw Frankie Neil knock out Harry Forbes for the bantamweight championship in San Francisco with an odd punch. Neil was a machinist. His work developed a remarkable pair of forearms. In his first twenty fights he won eighteen with clean knockouts, nearly all in one round. He knocked out Clarence Forbes, the champion's brother, and Harry gave him a match to get revenge.

Harry Forbes was one of the cleverest little men I ever saw, and a corking good fighter. He was rushing Neil and hitting him fast with both hands when Neil suddenly plunged straight at him, swayed to the right, and swung his stiffened left arm like a ball bat, twisting his wrist as his glove landed on Forbes' ribs. Forbes dropped, wriggled around, and couldn't get up. His legs were paralyzed for the time, and the referee counted him out.

How Leonard Won Title.

Benny Leonard won the lightweight championship by hanging. Freddy Welsh helpless on the ropes, hitting him rapidly with short hooks that kept him from falling to the floor, where he might have taken a nine second rest. Welsh was doubled over the ropes and swaying there when Referee McPartland stepped in and waved Benny away. Released from the ropes, Welsh crumpled and fell to the floor, out.

No championship changed hands when Young Corbett knocked out Terry McGovern at Hartford, as the fight wasn't at the featherweight limit. But the way Young Corbett handled Terry deserves a place in this story. Terry was rushing Corbett like fury, fists flying, and Corbett was trading blow for blow. Suddenly Corbett stood stock still, reached out his left glove, open and palm up, placed it under Terry's chin so that it tilted his head up, at the same time shooting over a right that dropped Terry to the floor. The knockout followed quickly.

JOHNNY MEYERS SAYS HE'S READY TO DEFEND TITLE

Ed White, manager of Johnny Meyers, claimant of the middleweight wrestling title, and other grapplers, has started his mat artists training for contests which will keep them busy during the coming season.

JOHNNY MEYERS.
[International Photo]

Although Meyers is not the originator of the double wrist lock—called one of the deadliest holds in wrestling—he has improved the grip to such an extent that opponents can be pinned in comparatively easy fashion. Meyers can clamp the hold from a standing position, and he can secure the lock from underneath.

May Meet Parcaut Again.

Meyers was brought to the front by Manager White, who discovered him in a local tannery. For three years he has steadily advanced in his division, although Ralph Parcaut of Iowa has a technical decision over him.

When the local expert met the Hawkeye Meyers had trouble with his eyes. After each man had won a fall Johnny was compelled to forfeit the third and deciding fall because he could not see, Manager White says.

With the exception of Mike Yokel of Salt Lake City and Joe Turner of Washington, D. C., Meyers has met all of the leading middleweights in the world. Manager White says Meyers is open to meet any grappler who will scale 158 pounds at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of a night contest or five hours before a contest held in the afternoon.

Meyers has a pending match with Parcaut at Royal, Ia. His services are wanted in other cities, and he is training daily at the Arcade gymnasium.

Minkley Plans Campaign.

Charles A. Minkley, well known to local amateur mat fans, is also in White's stable. The former amateur champion is being groomed for the light heavyweight championship. Minkley defeated Helmer Myre in Minnesota last August. Myre was considered a strong contender for the light heavyweight title, along with Clarence Ecklund. A match with Pat McGill of Nebraska, who is under the management of Gene Meladay, is pending.

Carl Zoll, a heavyweight grappler of Green Bay, Wis., is also under White's management, as is Tommy Cannon, a promising middleweight, and Charley Miller, welterweight. Manager White is ready to match any of his grapplers with suitable opponents at any time.

NINES IN TITLE GAME.

The final game of the series for the championship of the Liberty baseball league, between the St. John A. C. and Thorndale A. C. nines, will be played this morning at 11 o'clock at Murley park. In the first game two weeks ago the teams played to a tie while last Sunday in a double header each team won a game.

SWEDISH SOCCER TEAM PLAYS OLYMPIA TODAY

Preceding the opening of the Chicago Soccer league schedule this season, the Swedish-Americans defeated the Olympia team, which now leads the league. Today at 35th street and Wentworth avenue these clubs will clash in their first league fixture and the biggest crowd of the season is looked for, both clubs having big followings.

In the other league game the Thistles will play Pullman at 103d street and Corliss avenue. Both games start at 3 o'clock.

U. S. BUSINESS IS FORGING AHEAD, REPORTS PROVE

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 22.—[Special.]—Business conditions continue to show a moderate improvement in nearly all sections of the country, declares Archer Wall Douglas, chairman of the committee of statistics and standards of the chamber of commerce of the United States, in his monthly review of the business situation.

"Fall and winter seasonal goods are beginning to move and the outlook is for fairly good business the remainder of the year," he says. "As the season advances there appears to be a better prospect of a good holiday and Christmas trade.

Rise in Cotton Helps All U. S.

"One of the most striking developments is the great improvement that has come about in the south, due to the rise in cotton prices. The good effects of this boom will not be confined to the southern states, but will be reflected in other districts.

"The story of the sudden rise in the price of cotton is a dramatic one. In August there seemed nothing ahead for another twelve months but the practice of grim fortitude and endurance which carried the south through periods of depression and trial.

Sudden Boom Arrives.

"Then came the government September report and the south came back after a sudden and dramatic fashion.

"Business already has felt the impulse of the incoming currency and will grow gradually better.

"Textiles are in fair shape and leather maintains both its demand and appreciation in prices. There is some increase in the output in steel and iron products.

"There is better demand for lumber at somewhat higher figures. The belief is general that next spring will usher in renewed construction activity. The oil business seems to have struck bottom and started upward."

Protect Your Investments.

The securities of public utilities companies are largely bought by investors who rightly judge those of many of the good companies as sound investments. These investments are sound and profitable only as long as the companies are able to earn reasonable profits, but if they are allowed to be forced down to or below the line of legitimate profits, the value of their securities is weakened and the investor who is depending on the income from these securities to take care of him in his old age may find that income diminished or entirely wiped out. The investor's remedy lies in his right to vote directly or indirectly on measures for rate regulation. He should secure his rights as a citizen to fair rates for public service, and also his rights as an investor to an assured fair income from his investments.

The investor should inform himself as thoroughly as possible just where the point of safety lies, below which the company cannot operate profitably to itself and its securities holders, and then use his voting power to oppose legislation which attempts to reduce rates below this point.

Argentine Government.

P. B. L.—The $50,000,000 government of the Argentine nation two year 7 per cent treasury notes are payable, principal and interest, in United States gold dollars. The notes are issued to pay the Bank of the Argentine Nation for advances made the government. They are the direct obligation of the government. The national funded debt on Dec. 31, 1920, was approximately $533,000,000, or about $63 per capita. The national wealth is calculated at over $13,800,000,000. The country leads the South American countries in volume of foreign trade. During the war a total of $73,500,000 Argentine government notes were sold in the United States, and all were promptly paid at maturity. We rate the present issue of notes as a business man's investment.

RAILROAD NOTES

Officials of railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis report conditions generally favorable from an operating standpoint. There are plenty of available cars, and plenty of motive power, with some lines of freight showing moderate increases. There is no great difference now with many roads between the traffic this year and a year ago.

Officials of southern roads said that cotton was moving in considerable volume, but the receipts of grain at gulf ports have fallen off as the result of the embargo placed on grain shipments to Galveston. Seasoned produce is moving in about the usual way. Lumber and coal shipments are moderate.

Steamship lines participating in the trade between New York and the west coast of South Africa have cut rates on several commodities. It was said that the reduction was due to changed conditions in the southern ports and not to tramp steamer competition.

The Canadian bureau of statistics reports the railroads of Canada as a whole were able to operate at a lower ratio in July than for any previous month this year or last. The figures were 93.65 per cent for July against 101.71 per cent for July, 1920, and 94.53 per cent for June, 1921.

Inland Steel Will Make Rails After Next March

Announcement was made yesterday by officials of the Inland Steel company that after March 1, 1922, the company's structural steel mill in Indiana Harbor, Ind., will be converted into a mill for the manufacture of rails. There are only four mills in the country now producing rails, and the conversion will stabilize production in the Calumet district.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

The lard situation is attracting attention. Chicago has the bulk of the lard stock of the country, and while the make is liberal the export buying the last week was the largest on the part of England and Germany that several of the leading packers have ever experienced. The figures are well up in the millions of pounds. Germany is paying cash for its purchases of lard and meats. England is buying hams, and packers have made large sales of hams and picnics during the week. England has bought more hams than at any time in recent years. Late cables yesterday said that sales of lard were made at ½@¾c above previous asking prices. One packer says lard is too low and should not be selling at around present prices. He believes that consumption will be heavy and that the short interest in lard will soon realize that their position is wrong and when they start to cover prices will be advanced.

One set of strong operators are favorable to the buying side of wheat on all breaks, believing that the statistical situation will eventually become a most potent factor and that prices will advance after the big movement in Canada is over. Another set who are also influential take the reverse position and say that the statistical situation is largely offset as a bullish factory by the limited outside speculative buying power, which gives no indication of enlarging in the immediate future, and so long as present conditions exist they believe in selling on all sharp bulges. This keeps the trade nervous.

One of the commission houses who were among the largest buyers on the break said at the close thta the Canadian visible is expected to show a good increase for the week, and there is possibility of a small increase in the United States visible. It is quite evident that the market is in need of a better foreign demand than now prevails. One of the largest operators says that wheat might decline, while corn should advance 10c. He believes wheat too high on the world's situation and corn and oats too low, as the United States is the main producer of these grains.

Australian wheat crop, based on the present outlook, is estimated at 137,000,000 bu, suggesting an exportable surplus of 96,000,000 bu, compared with 136,000,000 bu harvested last year, from which there has been 90,000,000 bu exported so far this season.

A large amount of cash wheat changed hands at Winnipeg yesterday, but offerings exceeded the demand, and it is predicted there that there will be some deliveries on October contracts Monday through the clearing house. Deliveries Saturday were 130,000 bu oats, 38,000 bu barley, and 17,000 bu rye.

Buenos Aires November wheat is quoted at $1.03 and February at $1.01, based on prevailing rates of exchange, which puts Argentine grain to a discount under Chicago futures. Higher ocean freight rates, however, keeps the cash grain c. i. f. Europe somewhat above a parity with hard winter via the Gulf. The break of 12½c in the last few days is generally regarded as a readjustment to a new crop basis. London cables reported the wheat market weak on offers of Argentine wheat.

"Advices received from interior mills throughout Minnesota indicate that farmers' deliveries of wheat are at a low ebb," says the Northwestern Miller. "Some stations where the crop is light reports that farmers have already marketed all they raised. At other points farmers are disposed to hold wheat for higher prices, and are selling only enough to take care of pressing financial needs. In the Dakotas the situation is much the same as in Minnesota. Watertown reports that 60 per cent of the crop has already been delivered and sold. It is believed that as soon as the ground freezes and fall work is no longer possible deliveries will pick up."

M. M. Day, formerly with Simons, Day & Co., has formed a connection with Al V. Booth & Co., 69 Board of Trade.

"The English move to cancel $7,000,000,000 of its foreign debts will have little effect on world trade," said Joseph Wild of E. W. Wagner & Co. "The amount is too small in relation to world mortgages. In reality it is an invitation to get back to normal in grain prices. Winnipeg wheat receipts of wheat will continue large all during November. R. O. Cromwell estimates that 10 per cent of the Indiana crop has been damaged by molds, etc."

Lake shipments from Chicago for the week included 308,000 bu wheat, 1,521,000 bu corn to Buffalo, and 1,800,000 bu corn to Canadian ports, a total of 3,629,000 bu.

There are indications of a reduction in wheat stocks in Chicago for the week, as shipments of 563,000 bu compared with receipts of 472,000 bu.

Gus Gruber, the Philadelphia exporter, who has been a radical bear for two years, has not changed his position. He says Canadian flour is cheaper than American.

Beak & Co. bonds are legal investments for Savings Banks, Trust Companies and Insurance Companies.

Bonds we offer are always secured by a direct first mortgage on both land and building.

The Chicago Title & Trust Co. acts as Trustee on all our bond issues and guarantees title to all property securing our loans.

We make no loans on new buildings. The bondholder is thus protected against the possibility of inflated property value, as new buildings have been constructed during an era of high costs.

The financial standing of the borrower in each instance must be unquestionable, and property on which bonds are issued must give positive assurance of sustained income.

We require the borrower to make substantial prepayments of principal and interest annually. The longer a loan has run, therefore, the greater the margin of security.

The first deduction from the income of bonded property is made for the payment of bond interest and prepayments. In our position as managers of the property, we see that this deduction precedes all others.

Our investment customers are protected by ample insurance on bonded properties, placed with the strongest companies. The policies are assigned to the Trustee.

These bonds may be bought on the Partial Payment Plan. A small first payment is all that is required.

Important — Manufacturing Business for Sale

We are building three distinct styles of machines for stores; they have proven satisfactory sellers and as essential as a cash register.

We are on a limited production basis. All experimental work is done. Lack of capital for advertising and sales force compels sale just as we are ready to go over the top.

It will take $50,000 to buy this business, and the same amount will put it on an earning basis of $100,000 within 12 months. Nothing to hide; everything clean and open for investigation to qualifying investigators. No brokerage proposition.

PROFIT TAKERS AND BEAR NEWS SEND GRAIN DOWN

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Lower prices were made for all grains, with the close around the inside at losses of 1¾@2¼c, December leading. Corn ⅜@½c lower, oats ½c and rye 1¼@2c lower than the previous day. The buying power, which gave evidence of increasing on Friday, was not existent to any extent during the day, the main support on the decline coming from profit takers. News was favorable for a break, particularly that from abroad, and especially from Argentina.

Wheat was under pressure from local interests as well as hedgers and a majority of the news favored lower prices. Argentine news was particularly depressing. Crop prospects there are favorable and prices are said to have declined 12½c in the last two days, although Argentine wheat is selling at equal to $1.28 at continent, as compared with $1.24 for American hard winter at the Gulf.

Liverpool cables said: "Wheat depressed and declining, affected by Argentine. Corn limit unobtainable. Can do nothing near your price. Market affected by the decline in Argentina, the price of 28s in Liverpool being equal to 1c under December c. i. f. Buffalo.

Australian cables estimated the wheat crop at approximately 137,000,000 bu, or about the same as last year.

Highest Prices at Start.

Prices were highest at the start and nearly the same as the previous day's close, with a break toward the last of 2¼c, the low point being $1.05¾ for December and $1.10¼ for May, with the finish ¼@½c above the low point. There was good buying of May on the break by Thompson-McKinnon, and others. The movement in the Canadian northwest continues heavy, 1,882 cars for the day, against 1,298 cars a year ago. For the week receipts were 10,042 cars, against 7,365 cars last year.

Primary receipts for the week of 10,296,000 bu were larger than last year's. Less was heard about the milling demand and more about depressed conditions abroad and the world's economic and financial conditions. Export business was very light.

Wheat Depression Hurts Corn.

There is a feeling that corn and oats should do better, but speculative trade is light and the depression in wheat tends to curtail new buying. Word has been sent to country shippers of coarse grains not to put grain in transit, which might deteriorate in quality should there be delay in unloading as the result of a railroad strike. This is expected to curtail the movement.

The week's receipts, however, were the largest at this time in recent years at the primaries, 7,430,000 bu, or 3,519,000 bu more corn than last year, while of oats there were 4,846,000 bu, which is a good average, and 121,000 bu below last year. A little hedging pressure and local selling carried prices off ⅝@⅞c on corn and ⅜c on oats, with the close on May corn 51⅝c and oats 37¼c. Bids on new corn in central Illinois were reduced 3c late in the day and 25 cars of new received here for the day.

The rye trade for the day was light and prices lower, the close being at¼c and prices lower, the close being at ¼c 1¼c, May leading. Cash rye on track was 3c under December.

Provision Market Oversold.

A better trade was on in provisions, both in cash and futures, with offerings lighter and the market oversold. Export sales of lard and meats were heavier, especially of lard, at advanced prices, more being sold in England than at any time in years. October led with an advance of 25c, and other futures gained 7½@20c. Ribs were up 5@10c. Packing here since March 1 aggregates 3,689,000 hogs, or 285,000 more than last year. Shipments of lard and meats for the week were 31,433,000 lbs, or 9,000,000 lbs short of last year. Prices follow:

GRAIN RECEIPTS LIGHTER

Grain was held back by country shippers last week, owing to uncertainty regarding a strike by the railroads. Receipts at Chicago were 6,253,000 bu, or 1,787,000 bu less than the previous week and 1,764,000 bu more than last year, nearly 800,000 bu above the average. Wheat increased 140,000 bu and oats 239,000 bu, while corn decreased 2,050,000 bu.

Primary receipts of all grains were 24,343,000 bu, or 1,680,000 bu less than the previous week, but 2,691,000 bu more than last year and 1,000,000 bu above the average. Corn receipts, although decreasing 2,379,000 bu, were the largest in over five years. Wheat increased 959,000 bu and oats decreased 47,000 bu for the week. CASH·GRAIN NEWS

No bids for cash grain to arrive are being made to the country as the result of uncertainty over the threatened railroad strike.

Export demand at the seaboard Saturday was limited and no sales were reported. Domestic shipping sales at Chicago aggregated 28,000 bu wheat, 50,000 bu corn, and 60,000 bu oats, with charters for 350,000 bu corn at 1¾c to Georgian bay.

Spot wheat premiums at Chicago were unchanged, with light offerings. Receipts, 26 cars. Omaha prices were unchanged to 1c higher and Kansas City unchanged to 3c lower on hard and 1@2c higher on red, the latter, however, closing unchanged. Considerable hard winter was carried over unsold. Minneapolis was unchanged.

Cash corn prices were unchanged early and ¼c lower at the last on old, with No. 1 and No. 2 mixed and white ⅜c under and yellow ¼@½c under December. Receipts, 196 cars, including 25 cars of new. Outside markets were 1c lower to ½c higher.

Demand for cash oats was fair, with the basis firm as compared with futures. Sample values were unchanged to ¼c lower, with receipts 98 cars.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The weekly review of F. M. Zeller & Co. follows:

The local unlisted market was generally active, although price changes were within a narrow range. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply was traded in at 39½ and Inland Steel continued in good demand at 39½, with offerings at 40. Kellogg Toasted Corn Flakes, which had been inactive, advanced 2 points to 17½ bid, with offerings at 19. Goodyear preferred developed weakness, declining to sales at 22½, but improved later to sales at 25; the common was traded in around 10. Moline Plow preferred was slightly easier at 6½ to 7½. The motor stocks were without feature, Continental Motors being steady at 5 to 5¼, Paige Detroit at 11¾ to 12½, and Stearns at 24.

While public utility securities continued in good demand, the closing prices, with few excepions, showed little change for the week. Early in the week the Cities Service issues were subjected to a sharp decline, but rallied to a close of 179 bid, 182 asked on the common, and 53½ to 54½ on the preferred. Bankers' shares 19 to 19½. American Light and Traction common improved to sales at 94½ to 95, a net gain of 5 points for the week and the preferred was unchanged at 80 bid, 81 asked. Appalachian Power common was neglected at 5 to 5½, while the preferred was up 5 points at 49 bid, 51 asked. Northern States Power common was scarce and a bid of 47 failed to bring out offerings; the preferred was offered at 82 and the best bid being 79½. Standard Gas and Electric common was traded in at 8 and 8½, and the preferred between 33 and 33½. Transactions in United Light and Railway common were registered at 23¼ to 23¾, while the preferred was active at 62¾ to 63¼.

The feature of the local bond market was the decline in the local tractions; Chicago Railways first 5s losing a point in selling at 65¼, while the Chicago City 5s reflected a light loss at 65 bid, 65¾ asked. The public utilities were also fractionally lower. Commonwealth Edison 5s declined ¼ to 86¼ to 86¾, while the 6s and 7s were unchanged. Peoples Gas 5s at 77¼ to 77¾ were fractionally lower, while the Public Service of Northern Illinois 5s gave way ½ point to sales at 77. The packing house issues were generally stronger. Swift & Co. 5s were very active and improved to sales at 87½, closing at 86¾ bid, 87¼ asked. Swift 7s of 1925 and 1931 were unchanged at 99⅞ to 100⅛; a firm undertone, however, was noted. Armour 7s advanced ⅛ to 100 bid. The Wilson convertible 6s were decidedly stronger, continuing to advance to sales at 88⅝, representing a 4 point rise; the first 6s also improved ¾ of a point to 92.

EXPERIENCE

That Goes Back to Chicago in 1835

1835

WHEN THE WILD DEER, the wolf and the Indian still lingered about and, at the corner of La Salle and Adams Streets, the last wild bear had been killed—

When Fort Dearborn was still a military establishment and the main village of Chicago was a string of primitive houses on South Water Street—

H. O. STONE settled in Chicago and made his first real estate investment—in 1835!

This lot on Clinton Street, bought for $90, he soon sold at a profit of nearly $260—and the course of his life was set. He became the leading real estate operator of his day.

Thus was laid the foundation of H. O. STONE & CO. And if you are seeking the service of a house whose record is proof of its strength and ability to serve you well, these historical facts give you unmistakable guidance.

Entrust your mortgage and bond investments to this organization, where you profit by 86 years of experience in handling Chicago real estate investments. No investor in our First Mortgage Real Estate Serial Gold Bonds has ever lost a dollar. These Bonds pay 7 per cent.

The New York Times.

New York, Oct. 22.—[Special.]—The two important occurrences of the day were not generally known until today's financial markets had closed. It had been expected that some further downward revision of railway rates for western farm products would be made, but the interstate commerce commission's order of today for a reduction estimated in the dispatches at 16 per cent brings the rate on western railways to barely one-half of the basis authorized in the July, 1920, award.

It was probably in contemplation of a reduction in rates on steel products that the United States Steel corporation this afternoon announced its price for steel rails would be lowered from $47 per ton to $40.

How Rail Prices Compare.

This concession brings the price to the lowest figure since the autumn of 1917, just before the $55 price was fixed by the war industries board. The new price is still, however, more than 40 per cent above the pre-war price of $28, which prevailed unchanged from the spring of 1901 up to the spring of 1916.

Taken together, the Washington announcement and the Pittsburgh announcement pointed rather clearly to something like a general readjustment which will cover railway rates and railway material, but it is not apparent what part, if any, is to be played by railway wages. The most that can be said at the moment is that events thus far appear to have been pursuing the course prescribed by the logic of the general situation. Today's incidents largely obscured the question of the railway brotherhoods and their threatened strike.

Bear Operators Are Punished.

Some railway shares were lower on the stock exchange today, but most of them were little changed and all were inactive. The bulk of the day's business was in a few industrial stocks, some of which marked by their further advance the exemplary punishment of certain "bear traders" who broke prices early in the week on invented "rumors." The day's foreign exchange market hardly moved.

The outstanding fact of the weekly associated bank statement was the $73,000,000 decrease in the loan account. This rather unusual contraction is accounted for by the last week's withdrawal by $150,000,000 government deposits from the New York banks. In effect, nearly half of the loans in which those government deposits had been invested were either called or shifted to outside institutions. Private deposits increased $82,000,000, as a result of which a deficit in reserves appears.

Call Money Rate Low.

The most interesting aspect of this series of movements is that they occurred in a week when rediscount of private banks with the New York federal reserve bank decreased $61,000,000, and in which the New York call money rate declined to the lowest, except for one day last July, since the autumn of 1919. We Want a Man Who Can Make and Sell Oleomargarine

OUR plant, which is located near New York City, is one of the best equipped of its kind in the United States. Machinery, processes, etc., are of the most modern and approved character.

Our capacity is practically unlimited. Our product is trade-marked and has been broadly advertised. It is well distributed and enjoys a favorable reputation with the trade and the consumer.

Through a change in condition, a real opportunity is now available to a big man, not only a high-calibered executive, but also a man who can make and sell Oleomargarine and who has a record of success to prove it.

Obviously, the salary for this big job is a worth-while one. In addition, a stock interest will be available just as soon as we are satisfied that we have found the right man.

In answering this advertisement, please be specific. Your fitness for this eminently desirable opening necessarily must be measured by your achievements in the Oleomargarine industry—past and present. If you are not a candidate for this position you may know of a man who squares up with the opportunity. You may do him a favor by sending him this advertisement.

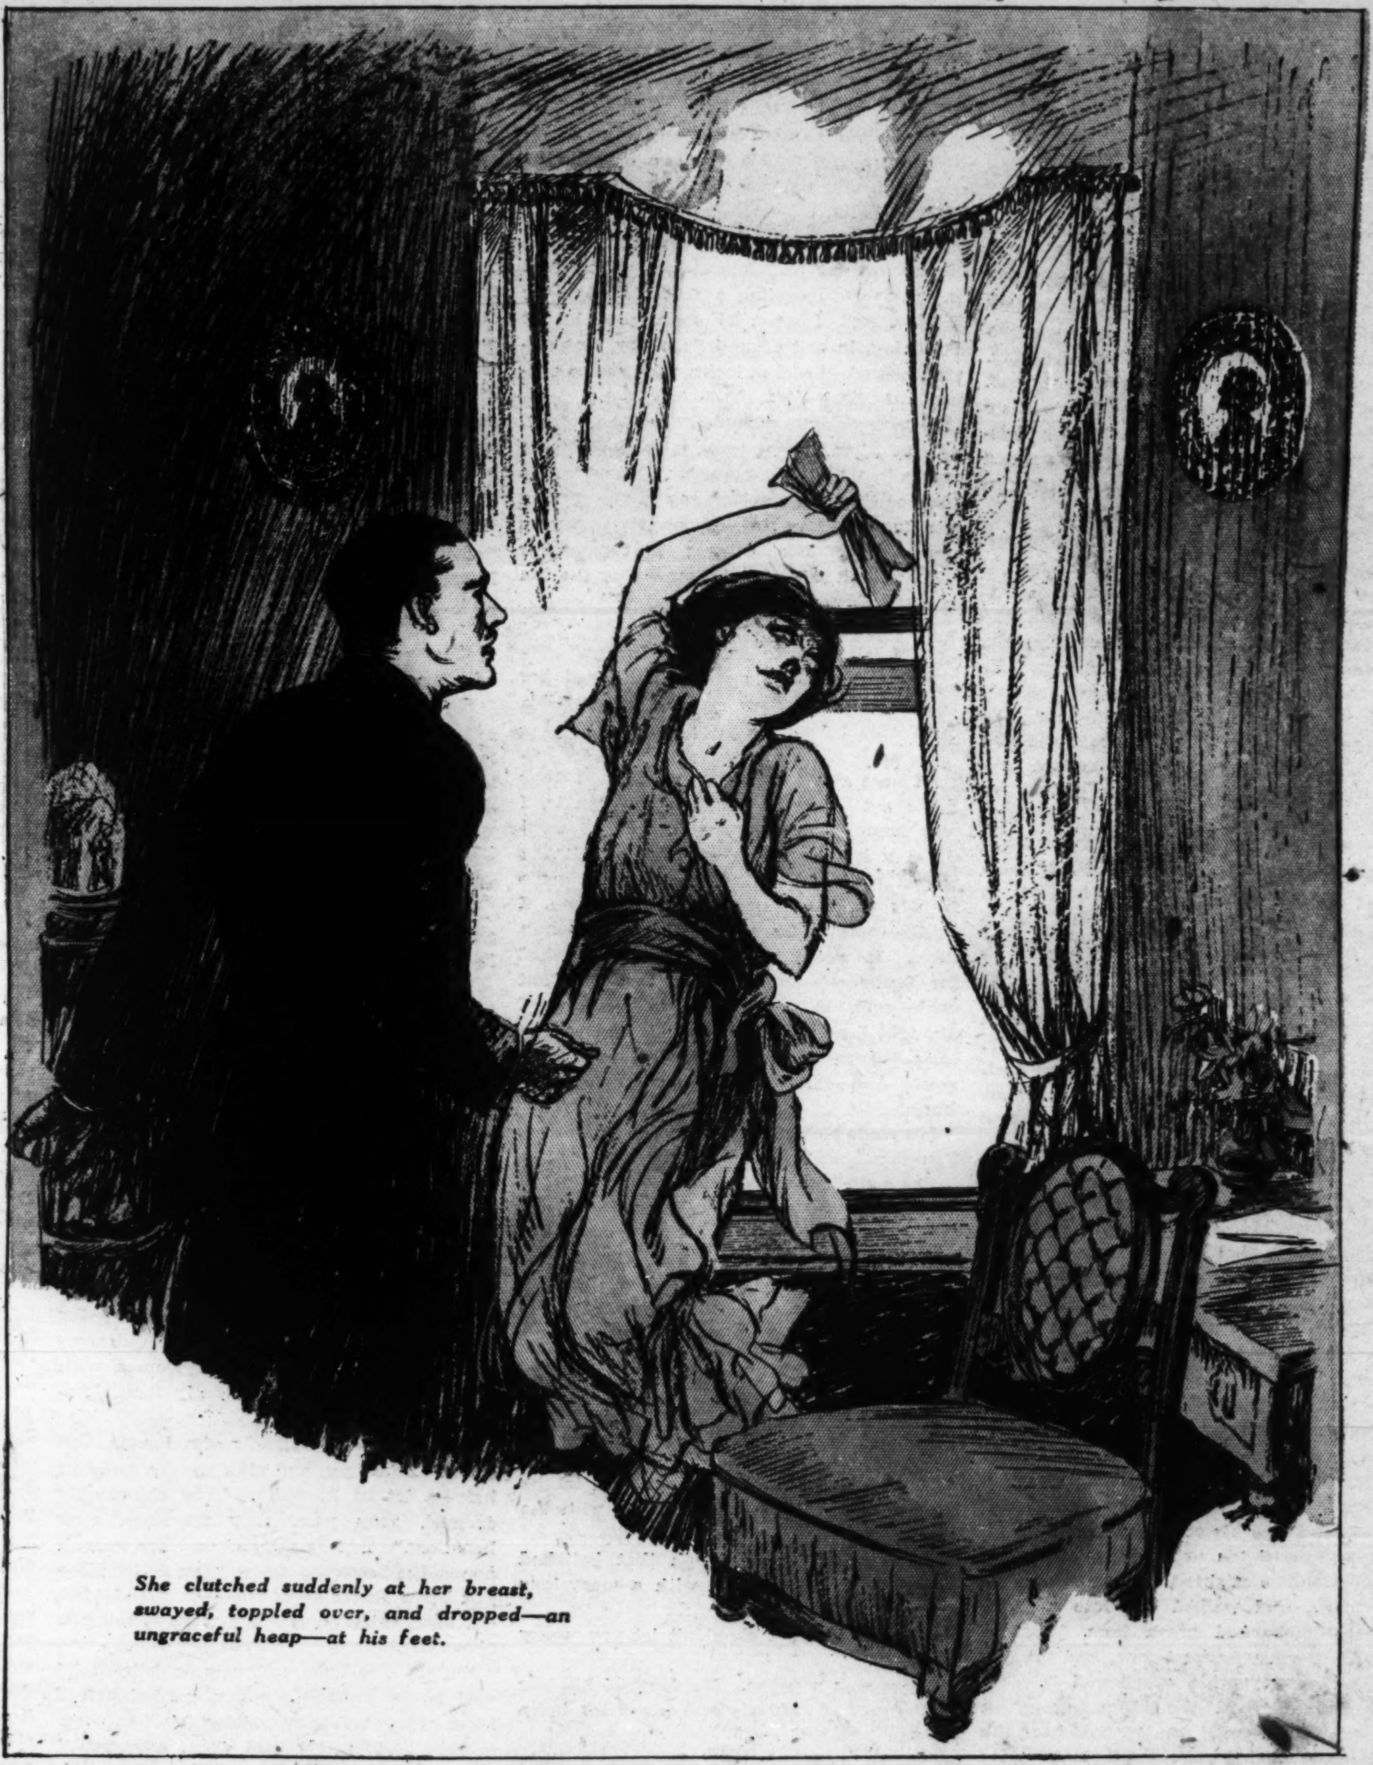
THE SOUL AND THE ALMANAC

by May Edginton

On the Injustice of Fate Which Gives to One Woman All That Makes Life Worth Living and to Another Nothing



She clutched suddenly at her breast, swayed, toppled over, and dropped—an ungraceful heap—at his feet.

"POOR Edgar badly wanted to find his way out," said Rose, "so of course he wrote to her—with sympathy and all that, you know—but that he'd married me. Ha! ha! ha!"

"Ha! ha! ha!" Driver echoed.

"Some women are predestined to be old maids—not that I ever saw her," said Rose, "and they ought to accept the fact."

"And some," he murmured, "seem predestined to receive far more than their fair share of love and admiration. The balance of things should be adjusted, don't you think?"

She looked at him and laughed, shaking an elaborately dressed head. They were sitting together at a little breakfast table on the veranda of a Riviera hotel, waiting for her husband to join them.

"I don't think. Most certainly not. O! I'm greedy, I know I'm greedy; but how dull it would be if everything were averaged up. It's the extremes that provide the excitements of life. Not that Edgar could have found much excitement from love affair number one——"

"Your arithmetic, or Senhouse's?" Driver suggested, smiling.

She shrugged.

"O, well—as if I care whether it was number one or number fifty, since, after all, the column adds up to me! I was going to tell you about it, while we wait for Edgar, if you are the least interested to hear."

It was his sorry business, as social sponge, to be exceedingly interested in anything Rose might say. (He had occupied himself most assiduously in scraping rather more than an acquaintance with the Senhouses during his stay in the same hotel.)

"Of course, I am more than the least interested——"

"You see," said Mrs. Senhouse, putting her elbow on the table and her round chin into her palms, while she stared at the women at adjoining tables, "you see—I like that white serge. Do you? No? O, how threadbare! Can't you do better? I don't mind your admiring it!

"You see, the woman was a small farmer's daughter, or some person of that sort, in Wiltshire. Not pretty, Edgar assured me; no milkmaid beauty, or roses and cream combination, but quite—quite plain and dowdy. Hopelessly rustic. She was three or four years older than Edgar. Her mother was dead, and she kept house for an old father, and when Edgar was holidaying once in the wilds he had rooms at the farm. Then he was dreadfully ill, and she nursed him. He says her devotion was wonderful. And men are such hopeless imbeciles on the ministering angel subject. So, overcome by gratitude, or something equally fatuous, he proposed to her. Of course, she jumped—positively jumped—at it. Needless to say, as soon as he could decently get away he got. And began repenting. Then he met me."

"Ah!" said Driver. He knew how to say "Ah!"

"Nonsense!" said Rose, but with a dimple wavering into each of her pink cheeks. "Well, yes, of course, we—converged. There had been a kind of understanding between him and this person for about a year. He didn't write to her much. He meant to cool off gradually, you see, and by and by her letters stopped. Edgar told me all about it, and I should have insisted on a more definite breaking, only I was so busy with my frocks and things, you know, that I forgot. So we were married, and when we were honeymooning in Paris, a letter was forwarded to him from her saying she had had a long illness—rheumatic fever, or something—that left her with a-a-crocky heart, and had contorted her face a little, somehow. She thought she must tell him, as he might wish to 'break it off.' 'Break,' you know. Absurd! when there had never been any definite engagement at all! Naturally, I was very upset——"

"Naturally," said Driver sympathetically.

"And so, as I told you, he wrote and said he was already married to me, and that we were both sorry to think she had ever contemplated the matter seriously. I enclosed five pounds. Edgar said he was sure it was quite wrong, but I felt I could be magnanimous."

"And——?" he asked quickly.

"She sent it back," said Mrs. Senhouse, "without even thanking me. Said her father had died and left her the farm, and more money than any one expected he possessed, and she did not need pecuniary compensation for the wrong I had done her."

Rose's big eyes were round and aggrieved—and quite shallow. Driver looked into them meditatively.

"O, you little kitten with claws!" he said to himself.

"But wasn't it quite a romance?" she said vivaciously. "So interesting, don't you think? Of course, we laugh about it now, but at the time it was quite a tragedy to me. You may imagine my feelings—married a week, and that sort of thing happening! We call her the Wiltshire heiress now, Edgar and I, because of the stuffy way she wrote about her few potty acres and her pig and her cow. O, I've told the story to ever so many people!"

She was almost the silliest little chatterbox Driver had ever met, but he had the greatest respect for her husband's bank book. He was breakfasting at their expense this morning, dining likewise freely in the evening, and in the interim would sample Edgar's good cigars.

"But the poor heiress!" he remarked. "I can't help dropping a tear for her, since fate won't average up her dues. I wonder how Miss—the heiress—Miss—Miss——"

"Kate," Rose supplied—"Kate Sheppard."

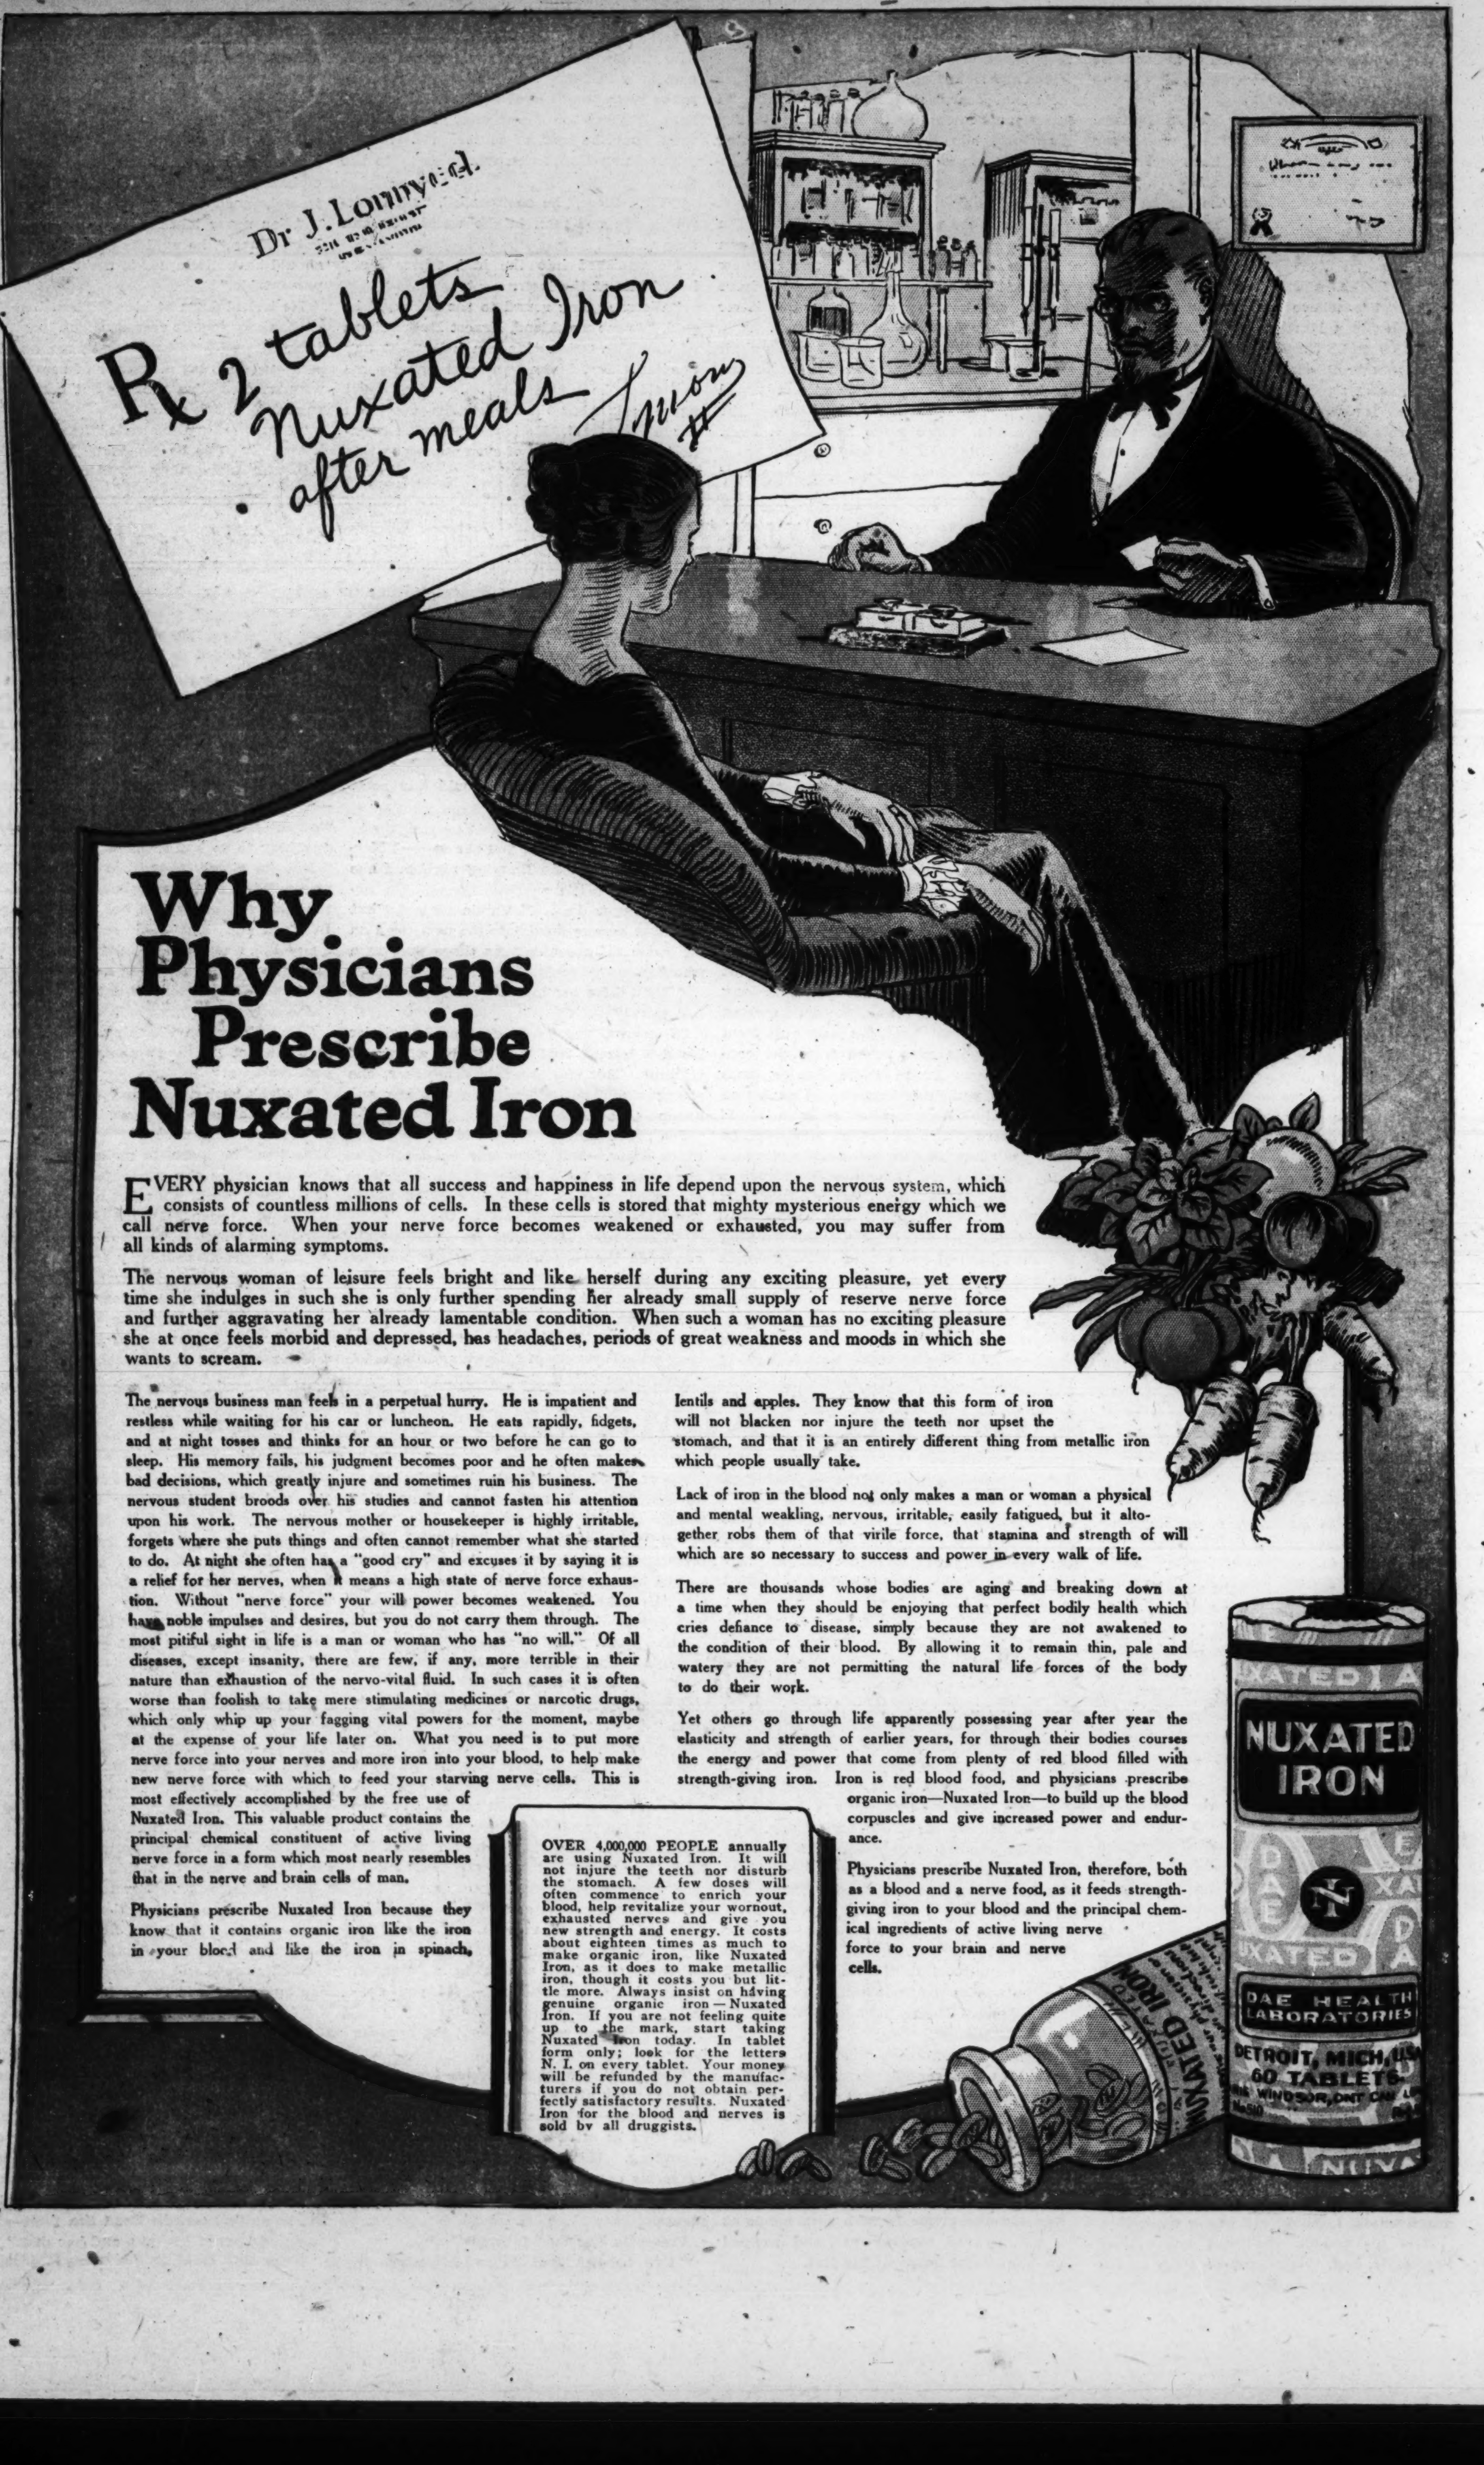
"How Miss Kate Sheppard liked her 'extreme of fortune' which provided the 'excitement.' I think I'm a little bit sorry for her. On the ground of fellow feeling, you know! You and your husband are the lucky kind of people. Yours is the extreme of bien-être, and jollity, and prosperity. You're on the right side. Now I'm like Miss—Miss—Sheppard; I'm on t'other. You have all the ha'pence, we the kicks. Softened occasionally, I must admit, as at the immediate present——"

"Do you mean," said Rose, withdrawing her contemplation from the white serge frock at a far table, "that—that——"

"Frankly," said Driver, smiling into her eyes—he spoke frankly sometimes to rich acquaintances—"I'm just at the end of my tether, Mrs. Senhouse. Dead beat!"

"O!" she cried softly. She leaned across the table to him. Women liked Driver. "O! Can I—do let me—you know Edgar gives me——"

"You are a darling!" said Driver. "But—thanks—it's not temporary, you know. I think I must seek for some relief. I think



Why Physicians Prescribe Nuxated Iron

EVERY physician knows that all success and happiness in life depend upon the nervous system, which consists of countless millions of cells. In these cells is stored that mighty mysterious energy which we call nerve force. When your nerve force becomes weakened or exhausted, you may suffer from all kinds of alarming symptoms.

The nervous woman of leisure feels bright and like herself during any exciting pleasure, yet every time she indulges in such she is only further spending her already small supply of reserve nerve force and further aggravating her already lamentable condition. When such a woman has no exciting pleasure she at once feels morbid and depressed, has headaches, periods of great weakness and moods in which she wants to scream.

The nervous business man feels in a perpetual hurry. He is impatient and restless while waiting for his car or luncheon. He eats rapidly, fidgets, and at night tosses and thinks for an hour or two before he can go to sleep. His memory fails, his judgment becomes poor and he often makes bad decisions, which greatly injure and sometimes ruin his business. The nervous student broods over his studies and cannot fasten his attention upon his work. The nervous mother or housekeeper is highly irritable, forgets where she puts things and often cannot remember what she started to do. At night she often has a "good cry" and excuses it by saying it is a relief for her nerves, when it means a high state of nerve force exhaustion. Without "nerve force" your will power becomes weakened. You have noble impulses and desires, but you do not carry them through. The most pitiful sight in life is a man or woman who has "no will." Of all diseases, except insanity, there are few, if any, more terrible in their nature than exhaustion of the nervo-vital fluid. In such cases it is often worse than foolish to take mere stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. What you need is to put more nerve force into your nerves and more iron into your blood, to help make new nerve force with which to feed your starving nerve cells. This is most effectively accomplished by the free use of Nuxated Iron. This valuable product contains the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form which most nearly resembles that in the nerve and brain cells of man.

Physicians prescribe Nuxated Iron because they know that it contains organic iron like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. They know that this form of iron will not blacken nor injure the teeth nor upset the stomach, and that it is an entirely different thing from metallic iron which people usually take.

Lack of iron in the blood not only makes a man or woman a physical and mental weakling, nervous, irritable, easily fatigued, but it altogether robs them of that virile force, that stamina and strength of will which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life.

There are thousands whose bodies are aging and breaking down at a time when they should be enjoying that perfect bodily health which cries defiance to disease, simply because they are not awakened to the condition of their blood. By allowing it to remain thin, pale and watery they are not permitting the natural life forces of the body to do their work.

Yet others go through life apparently possessing year after year the elasticity and strength of earlier years, for through their bodies courses the energy and power that come from plenty of red blood filled with strength-giving iron. Iron is red blood food, and physicians prescribe organic iron—Nuxated Iron—to build up the blood corpuscles and give increased power and endurance.

Physicians prescribe Nuxated Iron, therefore, both as a blood and a nerve food, as it feeds strength-giving iron to your blood and the principal chemical ingredients of active living nerve force to your brain and nerve cells.

OVER 4,000,000 PEOPLE annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. A few doses will often commence to enrich your blood, help revitalize your wornout, exhausted nerves and give you new strength and energy. It costs about eighteen times as much to make organic iron, like Nuxated Iron, as it does to make metallic iron, though it costs you but little more. Always insist on having genuine organic iron — Nuxated Iron. If you are not feeling quite up to the mark, start taking Nuxated Iron today. In tablet form only; look for the letters N. I. on every tablet. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain perfectly satisfactory results. Nuxated Iron for the blood and nerves is sold bv all druggists.

I want—an heiress this time. Here's Senhouse. O, good morning, Senhouse——"

"Edgar," said his wife, "you're late. So I've been telling him all about Kate to amuse him. We've laughed tremendously. I'm awfully hungry. I think you'd better give Mr. Driver Kate's address, and furnish him with a letter of introduction to the pigs and the poultry, because he's going home in a day or two. Aren't you, Mr. Driver?"

"Home?" he repeated, a little plaintively. "Home? My dear Mrs. Senhouse, I have no home. I'm just a wanderer on the face of the earth, hardly knowing sometimes where I shall lay my head."

Senhouse began his breakfast.

"I'll bet it usually finds a soft pillow," he said.

In which he was right.

Driver had spoken literal truth when he told Rose he was at the end of his tether. His social accomplishments undoubtedly served him well, but they could seldom put hard cash into his empty pockets. He was known as a persistent sponge. Men had begun to look away and button up their pockets when he approached. Pretty women, with soft hearts for the troubles he poured into their ears, were vigilantly shepherded by husbands and fathers. Not a few had applied the term "adventurer" to him, and it began to stick.

He was nearing forty, and had pulled out not a few gray hairs. He said that most things in the universe were flat, stale, and unprofitable, but knew that it was he who was becoming so. Thus, for a remuneration, he was willing to make the sacrifice. He would offer up staled senses, some vices, an unsavory past—in short, himself—upon the alter to an heiress. But he could not aim high. He knew that. He must content himself with humble game, having dallied too long.

The man actually came back to England with the address of a certain Wiltshire farm in his pocket book. Also, incidentally, a photo of Rose—who scented intrigue as a warrior snuffs battle—cast into some corner of his portmanteaux.

Martin Driver was by way of being a bit of an artist. In the wider sense of the term he was more than "a bit." That is to say, he painted a little and sketched a good deal, in a slipshod, dilettante sort of way, that had put, in his more strenuous days, a few guineas now and again into his pockets.

He arrived in England the possessor of a few shillings over and above his railfare into Wiltshire, and sufficient drawing materials, old paints, and palettes to confirm his intention of "a sketching holiday."

I should like to say here that I do not consider him a lurid villain of fell intent, seeking to enmesh a fair heiress, but only a quite ordinary, albeit handsome, ne'er-do-well, nearly down to his last half-crown, stalking an almost middle aged farmer's daughter with a competence. The better part was not quite choked in him. He still had his emotions, his finer moments, his occasional sincerities—and also his occasional shames.

He shouldered his own bag at the rural station when he alighted, asked the way to the village, and walked out into a high-hedged, high-banked green lane. Such a lane! It was hay harvest time, and the dog roses and honeysuckle overflowed it. On either side, beyond the shrouding green hedges, he could smell the hay and hear the creak of the moving wagons and rustic voices uplifted, whose owners were sweating and toiling in the June sun.

A little way ahead of him a woman on a brown pony turned suddenly out of a gateway and went on before him at walking pace down the lane. He tramped on and looked at her back, very upright on the long tailed pony, and wished that he could see her face. This in spite of the fact that it was not a very interesting back to a man who was wont to sum up a woman's points with some fastidiousness. She was evidently not very tall, though her shoulders were broad, and her careless skirt hung ungracefully and wrinkled where it should not. Driver had been a connoisseur of a habit. Above the stiff linen collar was a knob of rust brown hair, and above that an uncompromising hat. She dawdled along, and the pony snatched at the wisps of hay hanging about the hedges where the heavily laden wagons had passed. He quickened his pace to a run and overtook her.

"Will you be good enough to tell me if I am near a farm called, I think, 'Sheppard's Farm'?"

She checked her pony, and he stood at her stirrup and saw her face. A sudden surprise and almost excitement shook him. It was rather a square face, very composed, very plain, perhaps a little lined—and very slightly distorted on the left side when she spoke.

"My farm"—she had a strong Wiltshire accent—"did you want to find it?"

"I wanted to see Miss Kate Sheppard——"

She answered quite simply and straightly:

"I am Kate Sheppard. I have been out to the hayfield. We're very busy carrying. I am just going home. It's quite close. If you have any business with me, will you come in and talk it over?"

Driver had mapped out his plan of campaign, but he faltered a little under her deep, considering eyes. I think it was that his rare shame overtook him for a brief instant—no longer.

"I—I—had no idea you were Miss Sheppard, of course." He was walking beside the pony, and shifting his heavy bag from hand to hand.

"The fact is I—may I give you my card?" He hunted for and found one. "The fact is, I am—am spending a sort of wandering holiday, and I want to do a good bit of sketching, in and around Salisbury for preference—and—and I'm looking for rooms conveniently near——"

Salisbury's spire rose clearly on their right.

"I'm afraid there are really no suitable rooms in the village here, Mr. Driver." She glanced in a businesslike way at the card in her hand. "You see, I know its resources pretty well. The cottages don't cater for visitors, and I happen to know that the inn is full just now."

He sighed.

"I didn't want to stay in Salisbury."

She jogged the pony and shortened her reins, as if to trot on.

"I wish I could help you, but——"

He made his bid, quickening his pace, too.

"Please give me another moment I hope I am not detaining you; but the fact is, I was hoping—till I saw you, when I wondered if it was wrong—whether you'd take me in at the farm. I, the fact is, some friends of mine once stayed with you, I think—some years ago." He blundered a little. It would be awkward if she asked for Senhouse's name. "And they held out such—such halcyon hopes to me that I thought I might apply, too. If I'm wrong, Miss Sheppard, you will forgive me, won't you? And—tell me to tramp on to Salisbury."

His smile was extremely rueful. He added: "In this heat."

She smiled, too, and said:

"It is getting cooler, you know. But about the rooms. I have not let any since my father died, some years ago. Your friend must have been with us before then. I find I don't care to let my rooms. I've refused all applications since. But I don't know——"

"I shouldn't be the least nuisance," he said, with charming humility.

She looked at him with undoubted interest in her deep eyes.

"And—and you could let me feed in the kitchen if you liked—or in the sty with the other pigs."

She laughed out, a laugh that twitched her distorted cheek, but with a marvelous freshness in it.

"Oh certainly! I shouldn't let you worry me——"

There was a pause. He dropped his bag to the ground suddenly and wiped his damp brows.

"Bag's awf'ly heavy," he said, a little pale.

The laugh went out, and there was nothing but divinest woman's kindness in her face.

"Hoist that bag up on my off pommel—so! The house is just round the corner. We'll put you up for to-night, any way, now you've walked here, and we can talk about to-morrow. By 'we' I mean my old servant and myself. Are you really very tired? See, here we are——"

A long, low farmhouse, with flagged courtyard of cloistral coolness. He cried out genuinely: "Oh, what a paradise!" and saw her flush with pride and pleasure.

They had supper together in the low ceiled parlour, waited on by a sturdy old woman, who seemed delighted at the advent of an unexpected guest. There were fowls, fruit and cream, and Kate pressed a famous cider upon him. She had changed her dowdy habit for a dowdier gown, and his critical eyes appraised her fastidiously. She may or may not have noted the scrutiny, but she was the kind of woman to be utterly impervious to it.

After the meal she took him to a little sitting room, barbarously decorated with such historic remains as starched antimacassars and ornaments set on mats, where there was a piano. She seated herself before it, and indicated an easy chair.

"I generally play after supper—to myself," she said. "Stay if you like, and smoke if you like. But please do as you like."

"Thank you, I will," he answered, and sat down to listen, a little ruefully.

In a moment, however, he got up and quietly wheeled the armchair to her right side, because he had been facing her distorted cheek. It was a tiny action, and he did it most by instinct, more than a reverence for a woman's sensitiveness, yet I think that was why, and when, Kate began to love him. She made no sign of acknowledgment, and went on playing.

Her music was an agreeable surprise. He had expected some intricate attempt, with tortuous variations, badly executed. She played the simplest themes. One or two of Mendelssohn's songs, and presently a trifle of Chaminade's, all sympathetically interpreted. He studied her, in her dowdy dress, with her brown hair pulled straightly back from her plain, pale face. Following the direction of her upward gaze, he found it fixed on a photograph of Edgar Senhouse, which stood on the top of the highbacked old piano. Senhouse, before he was fat with ease of prosperity, and old before forty with worldly cares and lusts. So she "played every evening to herself"—and Senhouse, did she? What dear sentimentalists women were!

Suddenly she glanced round and saw him looking at the photo too, as a man meeting an old acquaintance. Instantly she took her hands off the keys.

"Do you know—that gentleman?" she asked, a little pale.

He shuddered inwardly at her phrasing.

"It is—isn't it Edgar Senhouse? May I look closer? I thought so. Yes, a little, you know. That is to say, I met him on the continent a while ago. And his wife too. We struck up quite a sort of friendship for a time. She was awf'ly jolly to me. Oh! and so was he. Charming chap, Senhouse!"

She played a few distrait chords.

"Is—is—she very pretty—Mrs. Senhouse——?"

He shot a glance at her face before he answered:

"N—n—no. Oh, no!"

She dropped her hands into her lap again, where they nervously smoothed her gown.

"Oh, but——" she said, after a pause, "I expect she is—and I expect you think so too. I am sure she must be pretty."

He murmured a little protestingly, but really there was nothing to reply. Her air was quietly considering.

"Tell me what she is like."

He found, on obediently recalling Rose to his consciousness, that she seemed very far away—miles away—years away. Quite removed from this plain countrywoman with her remote eyes, and suddenly from himself. He began:

"Oh! a—a little butterfly of a woman, you know. Blue eyes, and pink cheeks, and fair hair—a lot of it, fluffy. Very charmingly dressed, very vain, very frivolous, very heartless." But he remembered her remark across the breakfast table: "Oh! do let me—you know Edgar gives me——" "And—and —I don't think there's any more to tell you about her."

"What you have said sounds delightful," said Kate. "Shall we say good-night? I hope you will be very comfortable."

They had not "talked about tomorrow." Somehow it was some days before they did, and then he had quite established his footing there. They seemed to fall at once into a certain pleasant intimacy, that, with this end in view, he set himself to fan into something hotter. For, remember, the man was nearly down to his last half-crown, and he could not have paid for the food he ate and the roof above his head, had the matter been pressed. Kate had, in quite a shrewd way, put things on a business footing, and then they were relegated to the limbo of a very vague by-and-by. On some days he painted and sold one or two sketches in Salisbury: others he spent with Kate, loitering about the hayfields and the garden after her. The lonely woman began to spend some very happy weeks. Driver knew how to loosen tongues. She talked to him more than she had talked to any man for years. She was a woman shy of expression, but she voiced to him much of her quiet philosophy. He found himself able to look right into a very straight, simple, passionate mind, and he looked with an enforced reverence, and perhaps a little creeping shame.

The youngness of her was a perpetual surprise to him, blasé skeptic as he was. Under her dawning oldmaidisms she had kept, unsullied, girlish enthusiasm and ideals. Her heart as the heart of a child still, in spite of the many sorrows she must have had—and at least one bitter lesson. She said to him one night, as they walked, weary, together, from the hayfield after a late carrying:

"Do you know, I feel so young at times—so young. Why does one count age by the almanac? I think it's rather cruel. Surely it is the soul's almanac that matters. On a night like this"—the moonlight was flooding them—"or of a morning early, when I get up and go into my fields with the dew on them, I—I might be—any young girl again. Am I foolish? . . . Then one looks into the nearest glass, and sees the mistake. . . . And, of course, you've noticed my face—No! no! no! Don't lie! I don't want flattery from you. Not that I'm a woman who's ever had much of it. Never a pretty woman like—oh! like—Rose Senhouse, for example. You said she was pretty."

His perceptions were quick, and he knew she must have weighed herself in the balance against her imagined Rose many times.

"No—I never said so."

"But you showed it. Oh, do you think I don't know?" He saw her smile in the moonlight. "It counts for such a lot—that —and youth—of the body. Perhaps—some day—I'll tell you a story"—but he had already laughed over it with Rose at that Riviera breakfast—"of a time when a little more prettiness, and a year or two less——"

She stopped, and Driver, communing with himself a moment, put a firm hand through her arm.

"Or if God would have given me clearer sight to see myself as men saw me—or withered my heart when He began to line my face——"

Someone had said of Driver once that he was fully competent at any time to produce a handbook on feminine psychology, but it was pity, equally with science, that moved him just then.

"Do you know what I'm going to do with you to-morrow, Kate? I think I may call you 'Kate,' mayn't I? Do you know what I'm going to do with you to-morrow? We'll take a holiday, you and I—oh, the haymaking can just do without you one day—and we'll go into Salisbury, and I shall help you choose frocks. Not just coverings, but frocks. At least two! You shall be very extravagant." He loved dainty women. "I think one will be a white serge—a well tailored serge. And then—some dressmaker's thing, I think, soft and frilly and pink, to give you the shade of color you want." He might have been a connoiseur designing garb for Beauty. "Yes, certainly pink."

It was really delightful—glamor perhaps of that wicked white witch above—but delightful. She thrilled, as withered hearts do not.

"Oh pink! But I am too old for pink!" He scoffed softly.

"Too old! Why don't you add 'too plain,' Kate? I wonder if there ever was, or ever will be, a less vain woman."

And still God had not given her clearer sight.

Kate came down to supper in the dressmaker's thing, soft and frilly and pink. A white serge, well tailored, hung in her wardrobe. Her cheeks and eyes glowed with deeper color. It must have been one of her "very young" moments. They sat at supper together at the little round table, with the window opened wide to the soft night.

"Oh, to be young!" said Kate suddenly. "Oh, to be young!"

She was seeing the vanity of the moment, and the pink frock.

"You are the very youngest woman I know," he answered.

She laughed a little, with no bitterness.

"Not as men—or women—count age."

He moved closer, till their shoulders touched as they leaned out together. What a night! "In such a night——" many things. If she were only younger, or—less plain! Rose's stupid little fluffy head at his shoulder might have inspired a man—but——

"Kate," he said, "Kate, will you marry me?"

He had never been so inartistic, but somehow he could not make love to her.

After a very slight pause she answered:

"Yes."

Before they said good-night she went into the little sitting-room, and returned with Senhouse's photo, and most of the new color gone from her cheeks.

"You remember, I said I should tell you a story some day perhaps . . . It was about this photograph——"

"I was engaged to him," she said heroically.

Greve's and I immediately suspected that Robin had sent him to Harkings, particularly as . . ."

"As what? . . ."

"As he practically admitted to me that he had come for a letter written on slatey-blue official-looking paper."

The girl held up the letter from Rotterdam.

"All this," the girl continued, "made me think that this letter must have had something to do with Hartley's death. . . ."

"Surely an additional reason for giving it to the police!"

Mary Trevert set her mouth in an obstinate line.

"No!" she affirmed uncompromisingly. "The police believe that, as the result of a scene between Hartley and Robin, Hartley killed himself. Until I've found out for certain whether this letter implicates Robin or not I shan't give it to the police. . . ."

"But, if Greve really had nothing to do with this shocking tragedy, the police can very easily clear him. Surely they are the best judges of his guilt. . . ."

Again a touch of warm color suffused the girl's cheeks. Euan MacTavish remarked it and looked at her wistfully.

"Well, well," he observed gently, "perhaps they're not, after all!"

The girl looked up at him.

"Euan, dear," she said impulsively, "I knew you'd understand. Robin and Hartley may have had a row, but it was nothing worse. Robin is incapable of having threatened—blackmailed—Hartley, as the police seem to imagine. I am greatly upset by it all; I can't see things clear at all; but I'm determined not to give the police a weapon like this to use against Robin until I know whether it is sharp or blunt, until I have found out what bearing, if any, this letter had on Hartley's Parrish's death. . . ."

Euan MacTavish leaned back in his chair and said nothing. He finished his cigarette, pitched the butt into the fender, and turned to Mary. He asked her to let him see the letter again. Once more he read it over. Then, handing it back to her, he said:

"It's all so simple looking that there may well be something behind it. But, if you do go to Holland, how are you going to set about your inquiries?"

"That's where you can help me, Euan dear," answered the girl. "I want to find somebody at Rotterdam who will help me to make some confidential inquiries about this firm. Do you know any one? An Englishman would be best, of course. . . ."

But Euan MacTavish was halfway to the door.

"Wait there," he commanded, "till I telephone the one man in the world who can help us."

He vanished into the hall, where Mary heard him at the instrument.

"We are going round to the Albany," he said, "to see my friend, Ernest Dulkinghorn of the War Office. He can help us if any one can. But, Mary, you must promise me one thing before we go . . . you must agree to do what old Ernest tells you. You needn't be afraid. He is the most unconventional of men, capable of even approving this madcap scheme of yours!"

"I agree," said Mary, "but how you waste time, Euan! We could have been at the Albany by this time!"

In a first floor oak paneled suite at the Albany, overlooking the covered walk that runs from Piccadilly to Burlington Gardens, they found an excessively fair, loose-limbed man whose air of rather helpless timidity was heightened by a pair of large tortoise shell spectacles. He appeared excessively embarrassed at the sight of MacTavish's extremely good looking companion.

"You never told me you were bringing a lady, Euan," he said reproachfully, "or I should have attempted to make myself more presentable."

He looked down at his old flannel suit and made an apologetic gesture which took in the table littered with books and papers and the sofa on which lay a number of heavy tomes with marked slips sticking out between the pages.

"I am working at a code," he explained.

A DAY IN THE COUNTRY

"How well your children behave, Mrs. Smith!" said Mrs. Martin to Hattie when the day was nearing its close and all were preparing for the return trip. "All day long they have been little ladies and gentlemen! I don't believe one of them has cried once. Poor things! See how tired they are, too."

Hattie smiled and thanked Mrs. Martin. She turned toward Joe. He was conveniently looking in another direction.

"That's true; they are unusually well behaved children," Mrs. Benson agreed. "So often children are such a bore on parties. Crying, wanting things that are not available, or eating too much, getting sick, mussing up one's clothes—O, they surely do cause a lot of trouble sometimes. But today—well, I can almost believe they aren't such terrible nuisances after all. Still and yet—none of them for me, none of——" Drawing of a lipstick across her closed mouth broke off the sentence.

Joe glanced at Hattie. She was conveniently looking in another direction.

At last all was ready for the start homeward. Benson and his wife stood a little apart from the others and held a whispered conference.

Then Mrs. Benson stepped forward.

"You people don't mind, do you, if we run on into town without wasting any time? We have an engagement, and we will be late if—if——" She seemed quite undecided as to what would be a diplomatic usage in the circumstances. "I'm sure you don't mind."

"Why, no; go right ahead." Joe was among those who spoke.

The Bensons went and were whirling out of the woodland before the others were seated in their machines.

Joe's eyes fairly talked to Hattie then. They shot out their messages like wireless antennae. Hattie could not fail to grasp their meaning. Joe's countenance lighted a little.

"Well, are we ready?" he cried gayly. "Let's go, then."

But this change could not endure. Although the pace was not so fast, driving was more difficult as the night settled down. The glaring headlights of other machines—those fool farmers, would they never learn to use their dimmers?—were annoying to Joe. Rocks were not so easy to avoid; holes escaped notice in the dark. Hattie and the kids, under reduced speed, found comfortable positions, and the two little ones fell asleep. Joe sat stiffly behind the wheel, his legs just long enough to reach the brakes when he scooted forward. His back hurt, his jaws hurt from the tension, his eyes ached from the constant staring. Damn these Sunday auto trips when you drive three times as far as you should! Where was the sense in it? If women were not so foolish, so persistent, so crazy for what they termed a little pleasure—Joe wished there had never been such a thing as an auto invented. On the city streets you chug in and out of a line of cars, breathing a lot of gas saturated air, and cursing the guy ahead of you for not moving on; in the country the roads are not fit for anything. No use in it, no sense——

Joe's black revery was ended by a couple of sharp reports, one following the other in quick succession. He felt the left side of his car sag a little and the rims of the wheels come into disturbing contact with the ground. He gave the halt signal—three honks—and the other cars stopped. But they might as well have gone on for all they could do to remedy his trouble. His cheap tires were split for inches, and the inner tubes were beyond repair.

"What did I tell you!" he chirruped.

"Always told you you should buy some extras," Hattie came back.

"That so?"

"O well, if you think you are so——" Martin and Buddy were drawing nigh and she paused.

"Nothing to do, Joe," Martin advised, "but leave her here or drive into the next town on the rims. You couldn't fix those tires in a year."

"We'll drive her in," Joe said, "and leave her there!"

Of course, the emphasis was added for Hattie's benefit, and not without a note of triumph. But Hattie would not bicker, she simply would not, when there was any one around to hear.

Joe drove slowly into the town, only two miles away. But that was enough. The rims were so badly battered that they were out of commission. And the only garage in the town had none to replace them!

"These roads about here are awful, awful," condoned the garage man. "Too bad, too bad. Sorry I can't do anything for you. They'll put you up across the street."

Joe glanced, with the rest, at the hotel across the street. The sign indicated the same man was proprietor of both garage and hotel.

"Aw, come on. We can all go in together. We'll split up." Buddy's suggestion met with favor, and they departed after Joe's fliv had been stabled in the garage.

And Joe was actually whistling a little air when he climbed into Buddy's car with one of the children.

In due time the Smiths were set down at their own door.

Of course—you know—it was only natural—it just had to be—one couldn't expect a woman to stand for everything—there wasn't anything to do but to have it out.

But Joe simply would not quarrel. There was nothing to quarrel about. He knew all the time the car would not stand the gaff. In fact, he had said so. Furthermore, quarreling never got one anything.

"Let's sell the old thing and be done with it!" Hattie finally expostulated.

Joe only shook his head.

"It isn't worth anything. Then maybe you can act like a gentleman when we go out—walking!"

"It isn't such a bad car."

Hattie continued to expostulate. But Joe only shook his head.

And yet he lived—to make the rounds of the tire shops the next afternoon, after a hard day's work, his mind and body crying out for relaxation. He tramped and tramped, hunting a bargain. He would have tramped hours longer if necessary to find two tires and two rims he could purchase.

The car was his avocation, not to be given up, although at times he despaired of it. Like a lingering ambition, it had found an affectionate spot in his soul.

THE SOUL AND THE ALMANAC

Silence.

"He—he—jilted me."

The man was sincerely, completely, terribly sorry. Kate added:

"And—I—loved him——"

He remembered Rose's light voice running on: "She thought she must tell him, as he might wish to break it off." He looked at Kate, and at the photograph in her trembling hand. He took it away gently, and tore it roughly into little bits, that scattered the carpet.

"I wonder why you told me—dear," he said hesitatingly, put his arm around her, and for the first time kissed her.

That was the beginning of Kate's two completely halcyon weeks.

Some perverse imp of Satan prompted Driver to answer a recent foolish little letter from Rose Senhouse at Kate's writing table in the "parlor," and to do it thus:

"You Delightful Little Rose: How very dear of you to shed light upon my darkness, to stretch out your pretty hand from your civilization to me down here in the wilds! You are deliciously inquisitive. Yes, I am now engaged to the Wiltshire heiress. You ask in jest, and, alas! I answer in earnest. Pity me! For though I believe my heiress is the epitome of all the virtues, candor compels me to answer you that your imaginary picture of her tallies. Is she dowdy? you ask. Is she plain? Is she no longer young? Oh, you vicious little kitten, you! If you were as old as my heiress, and of like attractiveness, I should call you a ca——"

Here his pen-nib spluttered and crossed hopelessly, and, there being no other on the table, he cursed a little, softly, and hastened to his own room in search of one.

It was almost on the heels of his exit that Fate, that malicious old despoiler of content, sent Kate buoyantly into her parlor. She flung the door wide, and the draught rushed in to meet the breeze from the open window, and fluttered the letter from her writing desk to the floor. It caught her eye immediately. She was not usually careless over her correspondence. She moved to pick it up—glanced at it—

Truth—rampant, brutal.

She read it through . . . Truth. She read more lines between the lines . . . more Truth. Some seconds passed—some eternities. She read it through again, although she was an honorable woman, and the letter was not for her—only Martin writing to his delightful little Rose. The knives of pain darting into her heart twitched her gray face.

Then Fate, thrusting her tongue into her cheek, sent Driver back to look upon this woman humiliated to the dust. She stood near the window in the sunlight, swaying a little. She twisted something frantically in her two hands.

"You—you—you wrote this?"

She held out the mutilated thing. Her mouth worked. Her distorted cheek twitched fearfully. Her mad eyes accused, "Et tu . . . et tu."

He was stricken quite dumb.

"And—I—read it all through——"

"Kate! I—I—I—my God, Kate!"

She clutched suddenly with both hands at her side, swayed, toppled over, and dropped—an ungraceful heap—at his feet.

About two hours after, as twilight began to fall, and birds and beasts and creeping things without were homing, Driver was called upstairs from his frightful waiting below. Outside her door the old servant passed him in weeping, and he met the doctor. He asked a quite dumb question, and was answered.

"She wants you. You will go in—and be careful. Though nothing matters, you understand. Still, you will be careful——"

It was eventime—and she, too, was homing, then. . . .

The door was open. He went in, and some one closed it softly after him, and he went forward to the white bed in the corner. A white bed in a white room which a remote candle lit dimly. He fell down beside the bed on his knees, not daring to look, and hid his face. Her voice said from the shadows:

"Get up—where I can see you."

So he must get up, and sit on the bedside, and feel her eyes upon him, though he might still turn his face away.

"Yes," she said, almost in a whisper, "that's better. I had not—told you anything—about these heart attacks——"

No. Rose had told him about the "crocky heart."

"But what I want to say is—I made my will—the day after—we were engaged. And you will see—all yours."

O! then he cried out something—anything—nothing. It was all wildly inarticulate. After his own strange voice had died away there was only a loud silence for a few moments.

Presently she said failingly:

"I've been a fool again—forgotten—the almanac. I should—have known—I was too old—and too plain. Only God—counts by souls——"

Again he was dumb. Again, when her voice trembled away, the silence was too loud. He had not once looked at her. He was afraid.

She was near Heaven, but it was a very human jealousy that cried out suddenly:

"But—Rose—I can't let—her have you both——"

Then he found tongue to curse poor little stupid Rose Senhouse.

She turned her gray face slowly and stiffly to the wall, and lapsed into the state we call unconsciousness.

Rather, though, was it a superconsciousness. An exaltation from which no earthly curse or prayer could drag her back. It shall not be said that this is a sorrowful ending to her story. For the weather was past. It was the Voice of the Beloved which she heard, and He called her His love and His fair one, and led her up and away. He counts by souls, and her forty years were to Him but a watch in the night, for His Almanac is set not by times and seasons but by Eternity. He looks on souls, and this was one of His loveliest, which He had put into a very common prison. I know that He took her Himself out of Gethsemane. I know that she walked with Him through the dusky Valley unafraid, glimpsing the Sun beyond; a beautiful woman, and a loved one, come triumphantly into her own.

So she left Martin Driver with what he had come for, certain Dead Sea fruit—"her few potty acres, her pig, and her cow."

A DAY IN THE COUNTRY

By William Wallace Major

Being the Story of the Beloved Flivver That Became an Avocation

JOE was against it from the first. He did not want to go for several reasons. The chief one was that he did not have any extras. Moreover, there were bad hills en route to Bitter Lake, and his little car was in no condition to negotiate them.

Secondly, there were the children. Three youngsters ranging in age from eighteen months to four years would hardly be called a joy on an all day frolic, of which no small part was a hard drive over country roads.

Thirdly, there were the Bensons, neighbors of his brother, and for that reason quite often in the same parties. Those Bensons—they always got on Joe's nerves more or less. They were likeable enough, Joe had to admit, but—O, well, there is a difference between the hundred and fifty a week man and the fifty a week man. Joe never just warmed up to the Bensons.

However, Hattie would not surrender to his arguments.

"The weather is fine, the roads are good, and your tires are all right," she insisted at five o'clock the Saturday morning before as Joe was hustling about getting ready to go down to his six o'clock job. "Gee whiz, we've taken the kids everywhere else; I don't see why we can't take them tomorrow. As for the Bensons, it'd do you good if you would pick for your friends people who really look up in the world."

Joe sat glum as he munched a bit of toast and drank—gulped, rather—his coffee.

Hattie was waiting for him to answer, and it was not all wifely softness and kindness that was apparent in her eyes. There was a trace of determination in them not unmixed with a poutish tendency.

"What's the fun in living like we do, I want to know," she resumed. "What's the use in it? Gee whiz, Joe, we've got to have a little pleasure."

"Yes, but the tires are no good, Hattie. They simply won't last fifteen miles. Poor rubber. You know they are; you knew it when I bought them. Yet you had to have the money for new shoes or something. I'm not kicking, though. They won't stand the trip, that's all. When a fellow starts out on such a journey he ought to have at least two extras. At least two. But what's the chance of a fellow getting them?" He threw up his hands hopelessly.

"Well, it looks like we might. We're getting along well enough. I guess."

"Yes, if you mean we're taking care of our obligations. We're meeting the payments on the house regular enough. But what's the chance of—O, what's the use! Old Jacobson can't be pried loose from any more money, and that's all there is to it. I've got to impress upon you, Hattie, that under the circumstances we can't live ostentatiously."

"O, Joe, don't be blue," Hattie pleaded. "Let's take a chance and go anyhow. Won't you? Bud will bring us in if anything happens. Please, Joe. It would be a great outing for the kids. And you need to be out in the fresh air also. I've got to know, Joe, so I can make my plans."

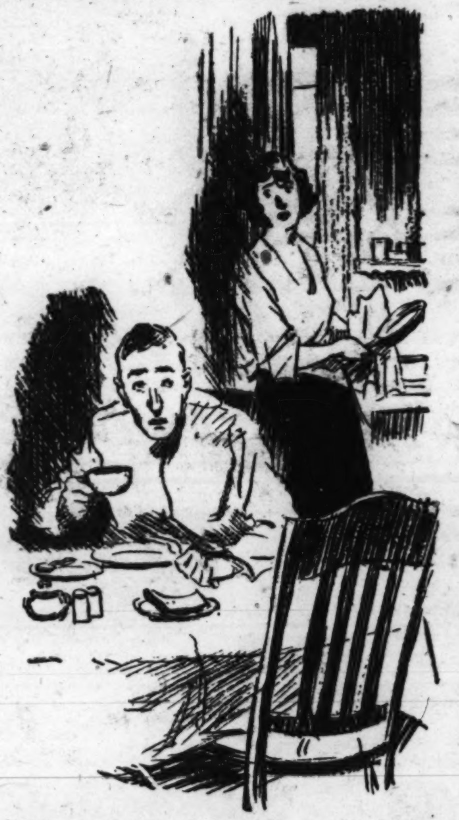
"O, well, Hattie, I suppose we can if you insist. But I'm afraid of what will happen. I'd be surprised if we got through O. K. Don't say I didn't warn you, didn't tell you the truth. That boat of mine won't last fifteen miles."

"That boat of mine." since it is an important part of the story, demands a little explanation. Without naming its manufacturer it can be said that it must have been among the earliest that came from the factory that made Henry Ford famous. The fact was, it had reposed in a shed on the rear end of Joe's lot for almost three years, and the man who had sold it to Joe would not say how long he had had it. And Joe had paid one hundred dollars for it. He had worked on it, fussed over it, cursed over it off and on since that day when, in a surge of happiness at the thought of having something to take Hattie and the babies around in, he had brought it home. There were times when, disgusted, he would run it into the shed and leave it alone for weeks. It was a sort of avocation—a treasured ambition that could not be forgotten, yet could not be allowed to take one's time away from the hard necessity of making a living.

It was kind of pathetic, the way he struggled along with "that boat of mine" to make it a locomoting piece of machinery.

"Tell Charley to come over tonight and look it over," was Joe's parting advice to Hattie as he hurried away to catch his elevated train. "It needs some touching up."

Charley bore the reputation of being the family mechanic and handy man. After three years, too, Joe was always ready to say that Charley knew more about machinery than any man he had ever met. Charley had tinkered much with the car. Maybe it was not his fault; maybe he was a good mechanic.



"What's the fun living like we do, I want to know. Gee whiz, Joe, we've got to have a little pleasure."

Charley came and he touched it up. He pronounced it to be in first class condition.

. . . .

At ten a. m. the next day the party assembled at the northwestern corner of the city. From there they would speed away on the sixty mile jaunt. Benson called it a jaunt—he had a low swung, vibrating, powerful roadster.

There were four machines altogether—Benson's, Joe's, Buddy's (a brother of Joe). and Fred Martin's.

It was decided that Benson should take the lead—also set the pace. The main reason for this was that he knew the way. All settled, he darted off in his twelve cylinder beauty, the others falling in behind. Joe was the last to start, for just at the last moment his engine died and he had to get out and crank it.

But it was all right. There were speed limits within the city that Benson could not disregard willfully, so he traveled at a decent pace. And Joe's car could do right merrily on the city streets. Anyhow, he kept up with the party.

But the pavement could not last always. Consequently it was only twenty minutes or so until they were sailing out on to country roads, some of which were not entirely healed of the rents made by vehicles and the winter weather.

As the last house of the city dropped away and the first stretch of gravel road appeared Joe hitched himself forward in his seat, gave a half startled look at Hattie and the two little ones in the rear seat as if he feared for their safety, warned the four year old at his side to hold tight, and took a firmer grip on the steering wheel. The car began to jolt, and Joe shoved his sailor hat farther down toward his ears.

Ahead a quarter of a mile or so streaked the low swung roadster, keeping close to the ground and paying no heed to holes or stones. Joe could see a little puff of smoke rise skyward now and then as Benson lighted a fresh cigaret. He could occasionally see him pointing out a spot of beauty to Mrs. Benson as he nonchalantly guided the purring monster.

Joe held on to his steering wheel grimly, kept feeding in a little more gas all the time, and wondered how long it would take them to make the trip. Sixty miles—two hours and a little more at the rate they were going. Well, there was solace in the knowledge that it would not be four.

The two small cars between him and the leader—Buddy's and Martin's—were heeling it sedately, though they were far from the class of Benson's. They heeled it so sedately that they aroused in Joe a lump of envy. If he only had a——

They reached a stretch where some malevolent citizen had evidently thought the bottom of the road would be saved from dropping to China by placing a sea of small cobblestones along it.

Joe's car bumped on to them.

Joe shut his jaws together tighter, took a still firmer grip on the wheel. and burst out: "If we ever get through here we'll be lucky! Wonder what that Benson thinks this is—a derby?"

Hattie did not answer from her post of observation in the rear seat, if she heard. Hattie was in no mood to bicker anyhow, for she had set her heart upon the trip and was rather enjoying it. Joe fell silent.

Hattie knew something of Joe's mental processes, and knew that when these silence spells attacked him there was not much use of talking.

"Don't like to speak my mind and then feel like a sneaking dog," Joe had often told her. "Always feel I should apologize, and I don't like to make apologies. Better to keep my tongue to myself and say nothing."

Probably if she had been an analyst of moods and complexes and such things Hattie would have encouraged Joe to become so angry that he would speak his mind audibly and have it over. Hattie herself did it—but, of course, she was a woman.

So as they clipped along the miles rolled by, pitching from one side of the road to the other, the engine chattering and taut muscles growing more taut every moment, Joe was piling up a huge gob of gloom inside of him.

A hill came in sight. Joe muttered incoherently. If it were possible his body became more tense, almost rigid, in anticipation of the great ordeal. He shifted his gears into low two hundred yards before it was necessary. He gave the engine so much gas that he nearly choked it. He kept one hand dangling in space, ready to clutch at the emergency brake. He took every precaution possible to insure that they would get up. And they did!

Regardless of how circumspect a mortal may be, there are some opportunities that cannot be ignored.

"Thought you said we couldn't climb them," Hattie chided.

A grunt was Joe's only reply.

The road was on a decline now for a considerable distance, and Joe did his best to make up for the time he had lost. Another hill loomed soon, however, in this instance a rise more gentle but of much greater length. Half of the ascent had been accomplished when the power of the engine began to wane. Joe attempted to shift the gears from high into low, but they caught. The car stopped; it started moving backward. Joe yanked on the steering wheel and sent it backing into a shallow ditch at the roadside. The children shrieked and Hattie gasped.

Joe did not say a word, but got out and cranked the engine, then drove out without further ado, and up the hill and away.

Hattie's poise was shaken. She said something about "a man who doesn't know anything about machinery is no man at all." The slits between Joe's eyelids narrowed. But he said nothing.

The others of the caravan were waiting when the Smiths rattled into Harrington. They had pulled up at a garage where a mechanic was fooling with the engine of the Benson car.

Benson himself was standing at the mechanic's elbow, his brows knit and his whole attitude one of annoyance.

"Rotten!" he exclaimed as Joe came within hearing distance. "Hasn't been hitting right all the way. No power at all."

Joe stared at him.

"Ought to be able to get ten miles more an hour out of her at least," Benson added to the mechanic. "Tune her up, will you? Be on the road all day at this rate."

"Will likes to have the car in tip-top shape," Mrs. Benson elaborated to the others standing about. "And he's right. There really isn't any fun motoring if you can't travel along. Now is there?"

"No," Joe answered very solemnly.

"The thrill of it—thats' what makes motoring worth while. Why, it's worth taking a chance to feel a sensation as you turn corners on two wheels, and just miss a hole here or a boulder there or a ditch or another car. . . . We don't like this car much. We're going to have a more powerful one next year."

The mechanic interrupted to say "she's tuned up."

"Well, let's go," Benson signaled, thrusting a bill into the mechanic's hand.

There was a mute appeal in the eyes of Joe to his brother.

"Don't worry; I'll bring up the rear," Buddy told him.

"Now you see," Joe stated rather victoriously when the flivver had settled down to its grind. "Now you see what she is, don't you?"

"O, well, what's the difference?"

Then silence deep and foreboding reigned again.

The tuning up of the Benson engine apparently had the desired effect. The rate of speed attained should have been enough to appease any hunger for thrills, Joe believed. For his car was veritably singing, stammering, stuttering, chortling as it strove its utmost to keep in line. The kids were pale faced from the speed of it and from clutching for safety holds. Hattie's lips were drawn tightly, and Joe's hat was now down upon his ears.

Joe muttered something that sounded to Hattie like: "O God, if I ever get out of this!" and then said no more. Maybe he said nothing at all; anyhow, Hattie was too busy minding the wilds and keeping herself straight in the seat to inquire.

Five miles from Bitter Lake the party ran into a patch of fresh macadam. The sharp little stones ripped a tire each for Benson and Martin. The four men sweated under the noonday sun, proved how little they knew about vulcanizing—and finally got the tires fixed. All drove through the danger zone without further trouble.

"Thought you said your tires were no good," Hattie reminded.

Joe smiled grimly, but he didn't reply. He did not want to challenge the god of chance that had carried him through safely. And yet if something did not happen Hattie could and would say he was as poor a prophet on automobiling as on the weather. She always insisted he could not tell when it was going to rain. She had had ample proof of it many a time, and unpleasant moments when she feared her best dress would be drenched.

Bitter Lake at last. A little cottage by the lake; supplies for luncheon in the cars; canoes, bathing suits, hammocks, porch chairs, cigarettes, bonbons. Hours of beautiful freedom in the sunshine and shade; contentment; supper; a ride home in the cool of the evening.

to start with, let me tell you that the case reeks of blackmail. . . ."

"Steady on," interposed the detective. "I thought so, too, at first. I've been into all that. Mr. Parrish made a clean break with the last of his lady friends about two months since; and, as far as our investigations go, there has been no blackmail in connection with any of his women pals. Vine Street know all about Master Parrish. There were complaints about some of his little parties up in town. But I don't believe there's a woman in this case. . . ."

"I didn't say there was," retorted Robin. "The blackmail is probably being levied from Holland. A threat of violence was finally carried into effect on Saturday evening between 5 and 5:15 o'clock by some one conversant with the lie of the land at Harkings. This individual, armed with an automatic Browning of the same caliber as Mr. Parrish's, shot at Parrish through the open window of the library and killed him—probably in self-defense, after Parrish had had a shot at him. . . ."

"Steady there, whoa!" said Mr. Manderton in a jocular way clearly expressive of his incredulity, "there was only one shot."

"There were two," was Robin's dispassionate reply. "Though maybe only one was heard. Parrish had a Maxim silencer on his pistol."

Mr. Manderton was now thoroughly alert.

"How did you find that out?" he asked.

"Jay, Parrish's man, came forward and volunteered this evidence. . . ."

"He said nothing about it when I questioned him," grumbled the detective.

Robin laughed.

"You're a terror to the confirmed criminal, they tell me, Manderton," he said, "but you obviously don't understand that complicated mechanism known as the domestic servant. No servant at Harkings will voluntarily tell you anything. . . ."

Mr. Manderton, who had stood up, shook his big frame impatiently.

"Explain the rest of your theories," he said harshly. "What's all this about blackmail being levied from Holland?"

Then Robin Greve told him of the letters written on the slatey-blue paper and of their effect upon Parrish, and of the letter headed "Elias van der Spyck & Co., General Importers, Rotterdam," which had lain on the desk in the library when Parrish's dead body had been found.

Manderton nodded gloomily.

"It was there right enough," he remarked. "I saw it. A letter about steel shipments and the dockers' strike, wasn't it? As there seemed nothing to it, I left it with the other papers for Jeekes, the secretary chap. But what evidence is there that this was blackmail?"

"This," said Robin, and showed the detective the sheet of blue paper with its series of slits. "Manderton," he said, "these letters written on this blue paper were in code, I feel sure. Why should not this be the key? You see it bears a date—Nov. 25. May it not refer to that letter? I found it by Parrish's body on the carpet in the library. I would have given it to you at Harkings, but I shoved it in my pocket and forgot all about it until I was in the train coming up to town this morning."

Mr. Manderton took the sheet of paper, turned it over, and held it up to the light. Then, without comment, he put it away in the pocket of his jacket.

"If Parrish killed himself," Robin went on earnestly, "that letter drove him to it. If, on the other hand, he was murdered, may not that letter have contained a warning?"

"I should prefer to suspend judgment until we've seen the letter, Mr. Greve," said the detective bluntly. "We must get it from Jeekes. In the meantime, what makes you think that the murderer (to follow up your theory) was conversant with the lay of the land at Harkings?"

"Because," answered Robin, "the murderer left no tracks on the grass or flower beds. He stuck to the hard gravel path throughout. That path, which runs from the drive through the rosary to the gravel path round the house just under the library window, is precious hard to find in the dark, especially where it leaves the drive, as at the outset it is a mere thread between the rhododendron bushes. And, as I know from experience, unless you are acquainted with the turns in the path, it is very easy to get off it in the dark, especially in the rosary, and go blundering on to the flower beds. And I'll tell you something else about the murderer. He—or she—was of small stature—not much above 5 foot 6 in height. The upward diagonal course of the bullet through Parrish's heart shows that. . . ."

Mr. Manderton shook his head dubiously.

"Very ingenious," he commented. "But you go rather fast, Mr. Greve. We must test your theory link by link. There may be an explanation for Jeekes' apparently inexplicable lie to the young lady. Let's see him and hear what he says. The grounds at Harkings must be searched for this second bullet if second bullet there is; the mark on the tree must be examined by an expert. And since two bullets argue two pistols in the case, let us see what results we get from our iuquiries as to where Mr. Parrish bought his pistol. He may have had two pistols. . . ."

"If Parrish used a silencer," remarked Robin, quite undisconcerted by the other's lack of enthusiasm, "and my theory that two shots were fired is correct, there must have been two reports, a loud one and a muffled one. Miss Trevert heard one report, as we know. Did she hear a second?"

"She said nothing about it," remarked the detective.

"She was probably asked nothing about it. But we can get this point cleared up at once. There's the telephone. Ring up Harkings and ask her now."

"Why not?" said Mr. Manderton and moved to the telephone.

There is little delay on the long distance lines on a Sunday evening and the call to Harkings came through almost at once. Bude answered the telephone at Harkings. Manderton asked for Miss Trevert. The butler replied that Miss Trevert was no longer at Harkings. She had gone to the continent for a few days.

This plain statement, retailed in the fortissimo voice which Bude reserved for use on the telephone, produced a remarkable effect on the detective. He grew red in the face.

"What's that?" he cried assertively. "Gone to the continent? I should have been told about this. Why wasn't I informed? What part of the continent has she gone to?"

Mr. Manderton's questions, rapped out with a rasping vigor that recalled a machine gun firing, brought Robin to his feet in an instant. He crossed over to the desk on which the telephone stood.

Manderton placed one big palm over the transmitter and turned to Robin.

"She's gone to the continent and left no address," he said quickly.

"Ask him if Lady Margaret is there," suggested Robin.

Mr. Manderton spoke into the telephone again. Lady Margaret had gone to bed, Bude answered, and her ladyship was much put out by Miss Trevert gallivanting off like that by herself with only a scribbled note left to say that she had gone.

Had Bude got the note?

No, Mr. Manderton, sir, he had not. But Lady Margaret had shown it to him. It had simply stated that Miss Trevert had gone off to the continent and would be back in a few days.

Again the detective turned to Robin at his elbow.

"These country bumpkins!" he said savagely. "I must go to the Yard and get Humphries on the phone. He may have telegraphed me about it. You stay here and I'll ring you later if there's any news. What do you make of it, Mr. Greve?"

"It beats me," was Robin's rueful comment. "And what about the inquest? It's for Tuesday, isn't it? Miss Trevert will have to give evidence, I take it?"

"O," said Mr. Manderton, picking up his hat and speaking in an offhand way, "I am getting that adjourned for a week!"

"The inquest adjourned! Why?"

There was a twinkle in the detective's eye as he replied.

"I thought maybe I might get further evidence. . . ."

Robin caught the expression and smiled.

"And when did you come to this decision, may I ask?"

"After our little experiment in the garden this morning," was the detective's prompt reply.

Robin looked at him fixedly.

"But, see here," he said, "apparently it was to the deductions you formed from the result of that experiment that I owe the attentions of your colleagues who have been hanging round the house all day. And yet you now come to me and invite my assistance. Mr. Manderton, I don't get it at all!"

"Mr. Greve," replied the detective, "Miss Trevert tried to shield you. That made me suspicious. You tried to force my investigations into an entirely new path. That deepened my suspicions. I believed it to be my duty to ascertain your movements after leaving Harkings. But then I heard Jeekes make an apparently gratuitously false statement to Miss Trevert with an implication against you. That, to some extent, cleared you in my eyes. I say 'to some extent' because I will not deny that I thought I might be taking a risk in coming to you like this. You see I am frank! . . ."

The smile had left Greve's face and he looked rather grim.

"You're pretty deep, aren't you?" was his brief comment.

Major Euan MacTavish was packing. A heavy and well worn leather portmanteau, much adorned with foreign luggage labels, stood in the center of the floor. From a litter of objects piled up on a side table the Major was transferring to it various brown paper packages which he checked by a list in his hand.

The Major always packed for himself. He packed with the neatness and rapidity derived from long experience of travel. As a matter of fact, he could not afford a man servant any more than he could allow himself quarters more luxurious than the rather grimy bedroom in Bury street which housed him during his transient appearances in town. The remuneration doled out by the Foreign Office to the quiet and unobtrusive gentlemen known as King's Messengers is, in point of fact, out of all proportion to the prestige and glamour surrounding the silver grayhound badge, an example of which was tucked away in a pocket of the Major's blue serge jacket hanging over the back of a chair.

"Let's see," said the Major, addressing a large brown paper covered package standing in the corner of the room, "you're the bird cage for Lady Sylvia at The Hague. Two pounds of candles for Mrs. Harry Deepdale at Berlin: the razor blades for Sir Archibald at Prague; the Teddy bear for Marjorie; polo balls for the Hussars at Constantinople—there! I think that's the lot! Hullo, hullo, who the devil's that?"

With a groaning of wires a jangling bell tinkled through the hall (the Major's bedroom was on the ground floor). Sims, the aged ex-butler, who, with his wife, "did for" his lodgers in more ways than one, was out and the single servant maid had her Sunday off. Euan MacTavish glanced at his wrist watch. It showed the hour to be ten minutes past nine. A flowered silk smoking coat over his evening clothes and a briar pipe in his mouth, he went out into the hall and opened the front door.

It was a drenching night. The lamps from a taxi which throbbed dully in the street outside the house threw a gleaming band of light on the shining pavement. At the door stood a taxi driver.

"There's a lady asking for Major MacTavish," he said, pointing at the cab. The Major stepped across to the cab and opened the door.

"O, Euan," said a girl's voice, "how lucky I am to catch you!"

"Why, Mary!" excliamed the Major, "what on earth brings you round to me on a night like this? I only came up from the country this afternoon and I'm off for Constantinople in the morning!"

"Euan," said Mary Trevert, "I want to talk to you. Where can we talk?"

The Major raised his eyebrows. He was a little man with grizzled hair and finely cut, rather sharp features.

"Well," he remarked, "there's not a soul in the house and I've only got a bedroom here. Though we're cousins, Mary, my dear, I don't know that you ought to. . . ."

"You're a silly old fashioned old dear," exclaimed the girl, "and I'm coming in. No, I'll keep the cab. We shall want it!"

"All right," said the Major, helping her to alight. "I tell you what. We'll go into Harry Prankhurst's sitting room. He's away for the week end anyway!"

He took Mary Trevert into a room off the hall and switched on the electric light. Then for the first time he saw how pale she looked.

"My dear," he said, "I know what an awful shock you've had. . . ."

"You've heard about it?"

"I saw it in the Sunday papers. I was going to write to you."

"Euan," the girl began in a nervous, hasty way, "I have to go to Holland at once. There is not a moment to lose. I want you to help me get my passport viséed."

"But my dear girl," exclaimed the Major aghast, "you can't go to Holland like this, alone. Does your mother know about it?"

The girl shook her head.

"It's no good trying to stop me, Euan," she declared. "I mean to go, anyway. As a matter of fact, mother doesn't know. I merely left word that I had gone to the continent for a few days. Nobody knows about Holland except you, and if you won't help me I suppose I shall have to go to Harry Tadworth at the Foreign Office. I came to you first because he's always so stuffy."

Euan MacTavish pushed the girl into a chair and gave her a cigarette. He lit it for her and took one himself. His pipe had vanished into his pocket.

"Of course, I'll help you," he said. "Now tell me all about it!"

"Before . . . this happened I'd promised Hartley Parrish to marry him," began the girl. "The doctors say his nerves were wrong. I don't believe a word of it. He was full of the joy of life. He was very fond of me. He was always talking of what we should do when we were married. He never would have killed himself without some tremendously powerful motive. Even then I can't believe it possible. . . ."

She made a little nervous gesture.

"After he . . . did it," she went on, "I found this letter on his desk. It came to him from Holland. I mean to see the people who wrote it and discover if they can throw any light on . . . on . . . the affair."

She had taken from her muff a letter folded in four, written on paper of a curious dark slatey-blue color.

"Won't you show me the letter?"

"You promise to say nothing about it to any one?"

He nodded. "Of course."

Without a word the girl gave him the letter. With slow deliberation he unfolded it.

The letter was typewritten and headed: "Elias van der Spyck & Co., General Importers, Rotterdam."

This was the letter:

"Elias van der Spyck & Co.
"General Importers.
"Rotterdam. Rotterdam, 25h Nov.
"Codes
"A. B. C.
"Liebler's.
"Personal.

"Dear Mr. Parrish: Your favour of even date to hand and contents noted. The last delivery of steel was to time but we have had warning from the railway authorities that labour troubles at the docks are likely to follow future consignments. If you don't mind we should prefer to settle the question of future delivery by Nov. 27, as we have a board meeting on the 30th inst. While we fully appreciate your own difficulties with labour at home, you will understand that this is a question which we cannot afford to adjourn sine die. Yours faithfully,

"pro Elias van der Spyck & Co."

The signature was illegible.

Euan MacTavish folded the letter again and handed it back to Mary.

"That doesn't take me any farther," he said. "What do the police think of it?"

"They haven't seen it," was the girl's reply. "I took it without them knowing. I mean to make my own investigations about this . . ."

"But my dear Mary," exclaimed the little Major in a shocked voice, "you can't do things that way. Don't you see you may be hindering the course of justice? The police may attach the greatest importance to this letter. . . ."

"You're quite right," retorted the girl, "they do!"

"Then why have you kept it from them?"

Mary Trevert dropped her eyes and a little band of crimson flushed into her cheeks.

"Because," she commenced, "because . . . well, because they are trying to implicate a friend of mine. . . ."

The Major took the girl's hand.

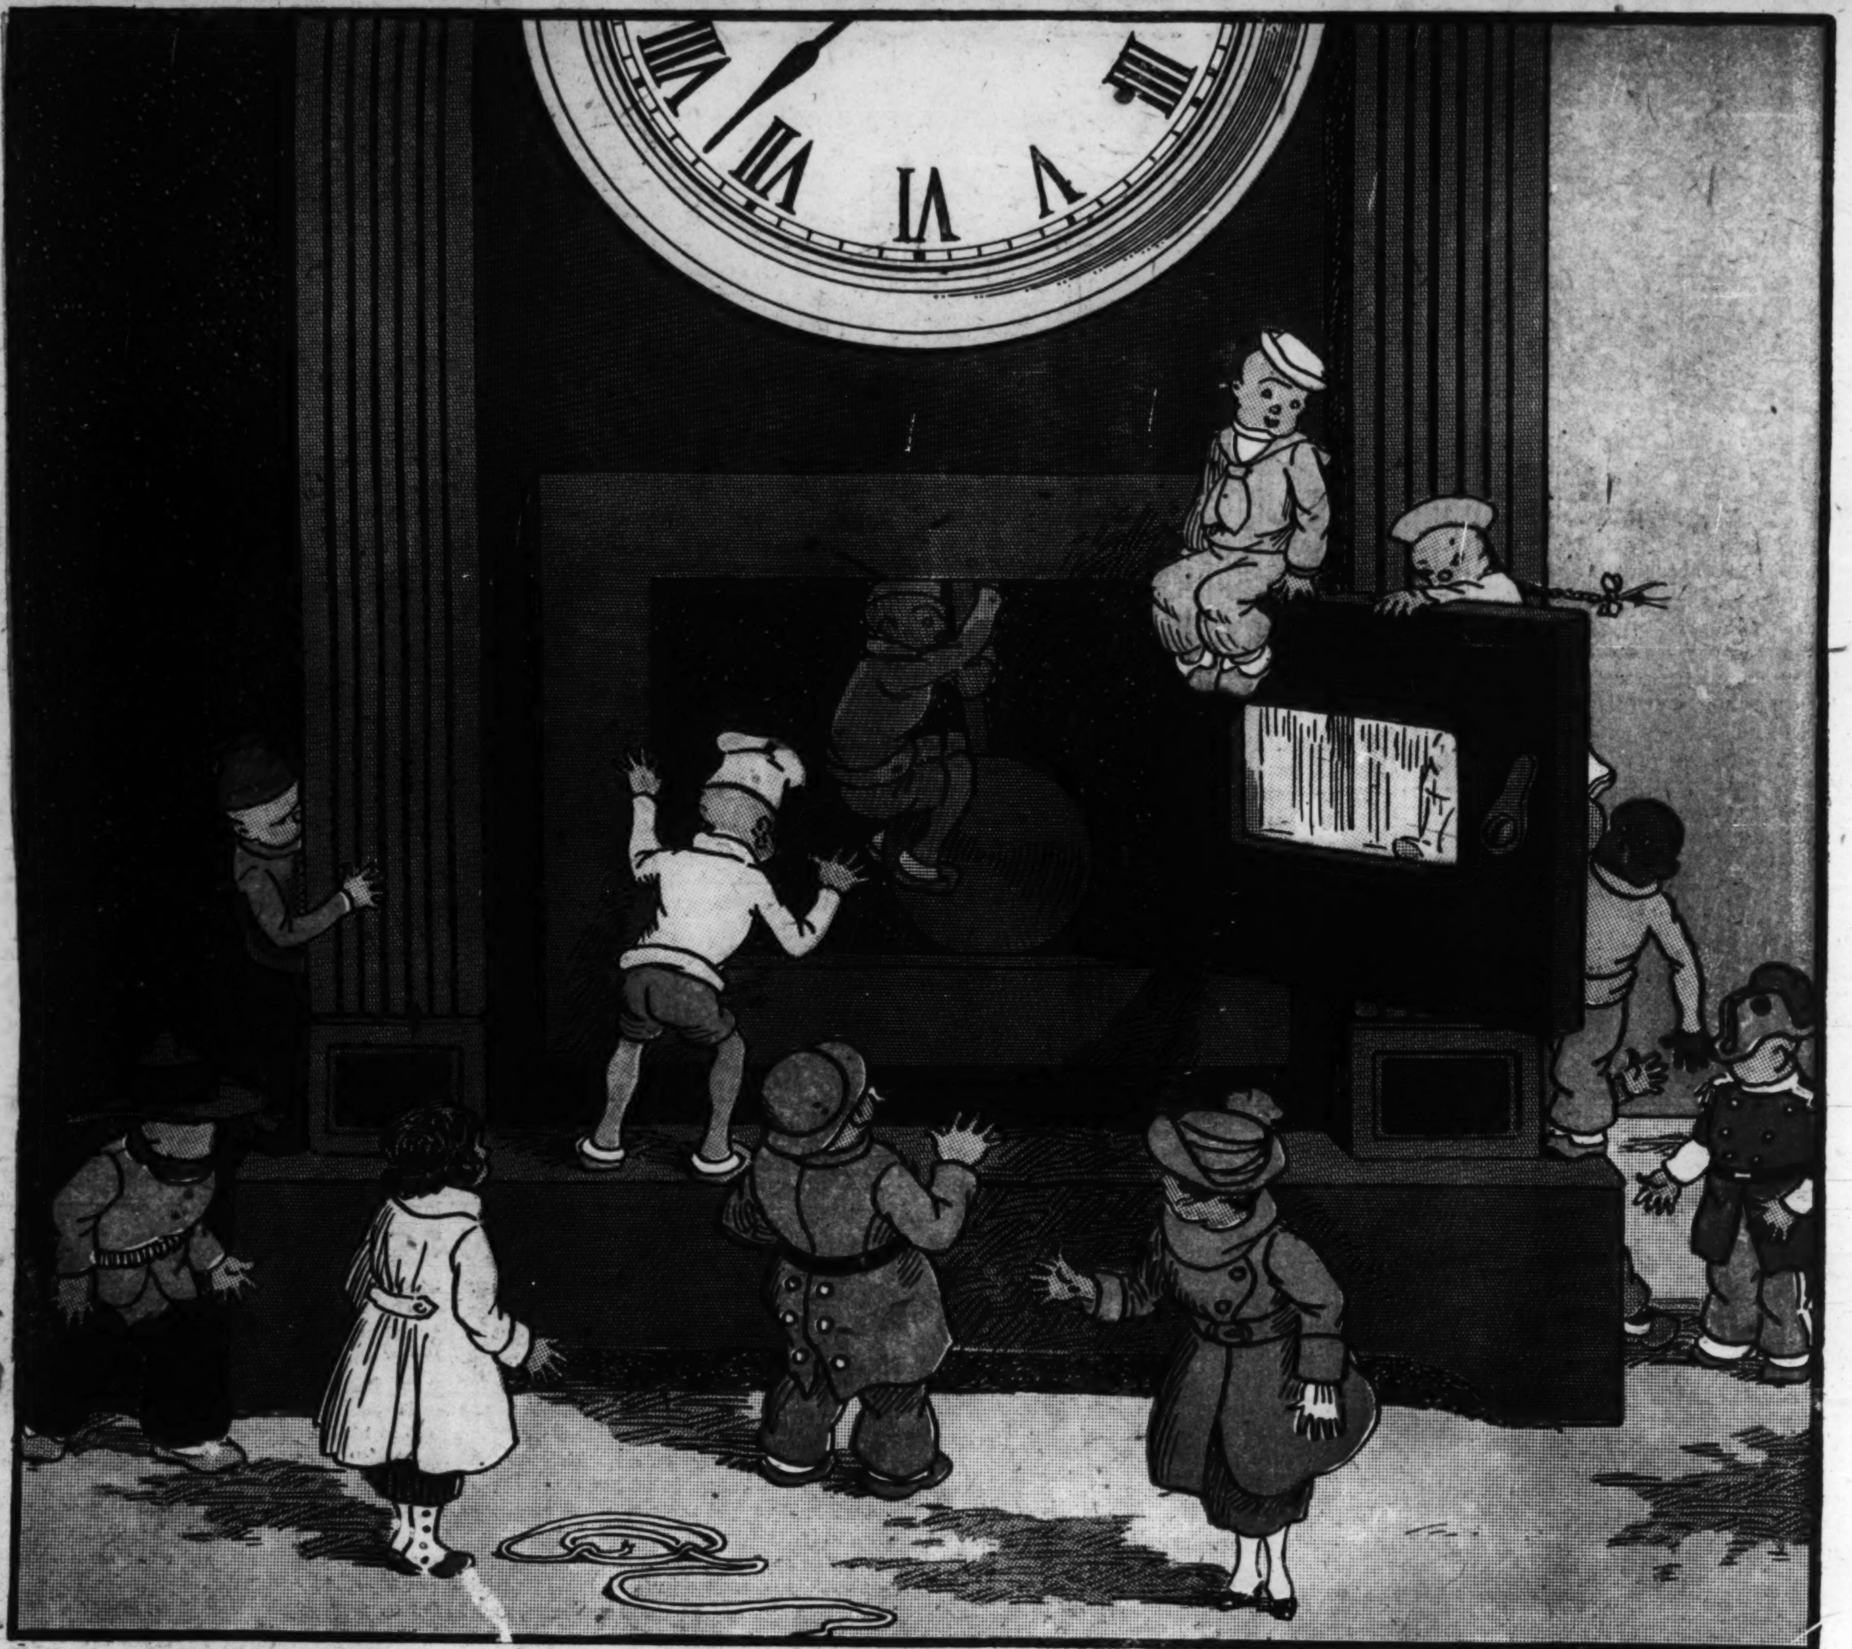
"Mary," he said, "I've known you all your life. I've knocked about a good bit and know something of the world, I believe. Suppose you tell me all about it. . . ."

Mary Trevert hesitated. Then she said, her hands nervously toying with her muff:

"We believe that Robin Greve—you know whom I mean—had a conversation with Hartley just before he . . . he shot himself. That very afternoon Robin had asked me to marry him, but I told him about my engagement. He said some awful things about Hartley and rushed away. Ten minutes later Hartley Parrish committed suicide. And there was some one talking to him in the library. Bude, the butler, heard the voices. This afternoon I went down to the library alone . . . to see if I could discover anything likely to throw any light on poor Hartley's death. This was the only letter I could find. It was tucked away between two letter trays. One tray fitted into the other and this letter had slipped between. It seems to have been overlooked both by Mr. Parrish's secretary and the police. . . ."

"But I confess," argued the Major, "that I don't see how this letter, which appears to be a very ordinary business communication, implicates anybody at all. Why shouldn't the police see it? . . ."

"Because," said Mary, "directly after discovering it I found Bruce Wright, who used to be one of Mr. Parrish's private secretaries, hiding behind the curtains in the library. Now Bruce Wrlyht is a friend of Robin



THE TEENIE WEENIES

THE DUNCE HAS A NARROW ESCAPE.

BY WM. DONAHEY + H.D.M.

THE TEENIE WEENIES knew about daylight saving time. In fact, they used it themselves, and when the day came to change back to the old time, their clock, which was no larger than a dime, was stopped for an hour.

"S-s-s-s-say!" exploded the Dunce as he watched the Turk turn back the tiny clock, "what's all this changin' of clocks for? What's daylight savin' time?"

"Well, it's this way," answered the General. "By putting the clock ahead an hour in the spring time, you gain an hour of daylight. The days are longer in the summer than in the winter, so during the summer the clock should be set ahead an hour and when the short days of fall come along the clock is set back an hour."

"O," said the Dunce, and he looked thoughtfully into the tiny fireplace for some time.

Suddenly he jumped out of his chair with such a loud shout he scared half of the sleepy Teenie Weenies nearly out of their senses.

"I've got an idea," he shouted. "You know that little girl who lives around the corner in the big brown house? Well, she and her father and mother are all away and there is nobody at home to change their clock. Why couldn't we go to her house and change back the clock for her. She has always been so nice to us we ought to do something for her."

"That's a kind thought, Dunce," cried the General; "we'll do it."

Most of the Teenie Weenies had gone to bed, but those who had been sitting around the fireplace all liked the Dunce's idea and in a few minutes they were on their way to the little girl's house.

It was a beautiful moonlight night and presently the little folks arrived at the house and crawled inside.

The clock stood on a low bookcase and, climbing up a lace curtain which hung beside the bookcase, the little folks soon scrambled on to the top.

The Teenie Weenies had brought a piece of rope with them and after some work the Cowboy finally lassoed the swinging pendulum, which was quickly brought to a stop.

"Now we'll have to wait an hour," said the General. "And when the time is up we must start the pendulum going again."

Most of the Teenie Weenies put in the time climbing about the big clock while the rest patiently waited for the hour to pass.

The Dunce climbed inside the clock and when he stepped on the pendulum, in order to get a better view of the works, he suddenly started the big pendulum swinging.

He clung tight to it and yelled for help at the top of his teenie weenie voice.

Every time the pendulum swung back and forth the poor Dunce received a bump on his teenie weenie back. He did not dare jump off, for the pendulum just had room to clear the bottom of the clock and had the silly fellow jumped he might have been badly hurt.

In a short time the Teenie Weenies managed to stop the clock and the Dunce quickly slid off.

"J-J-J-J-Jimminie f-f-fish h-h-hooks!" stuttered the frightened Dunce, "I s-s-s-sure thought I was a goner. I was pretty nearly as s-s-scared as the time I fell into a pitcher of milk."

When the hour was up the clock was started again and the Teenie Weenies hurried back to the shoe house, where they soon crawled into their teenie weenie beds, for—

The Man in the moon looked out of the moon,
Looked out of the moon and said,
"It's time that all Teenie Weenies on earth
Were thinking of getting to bed."

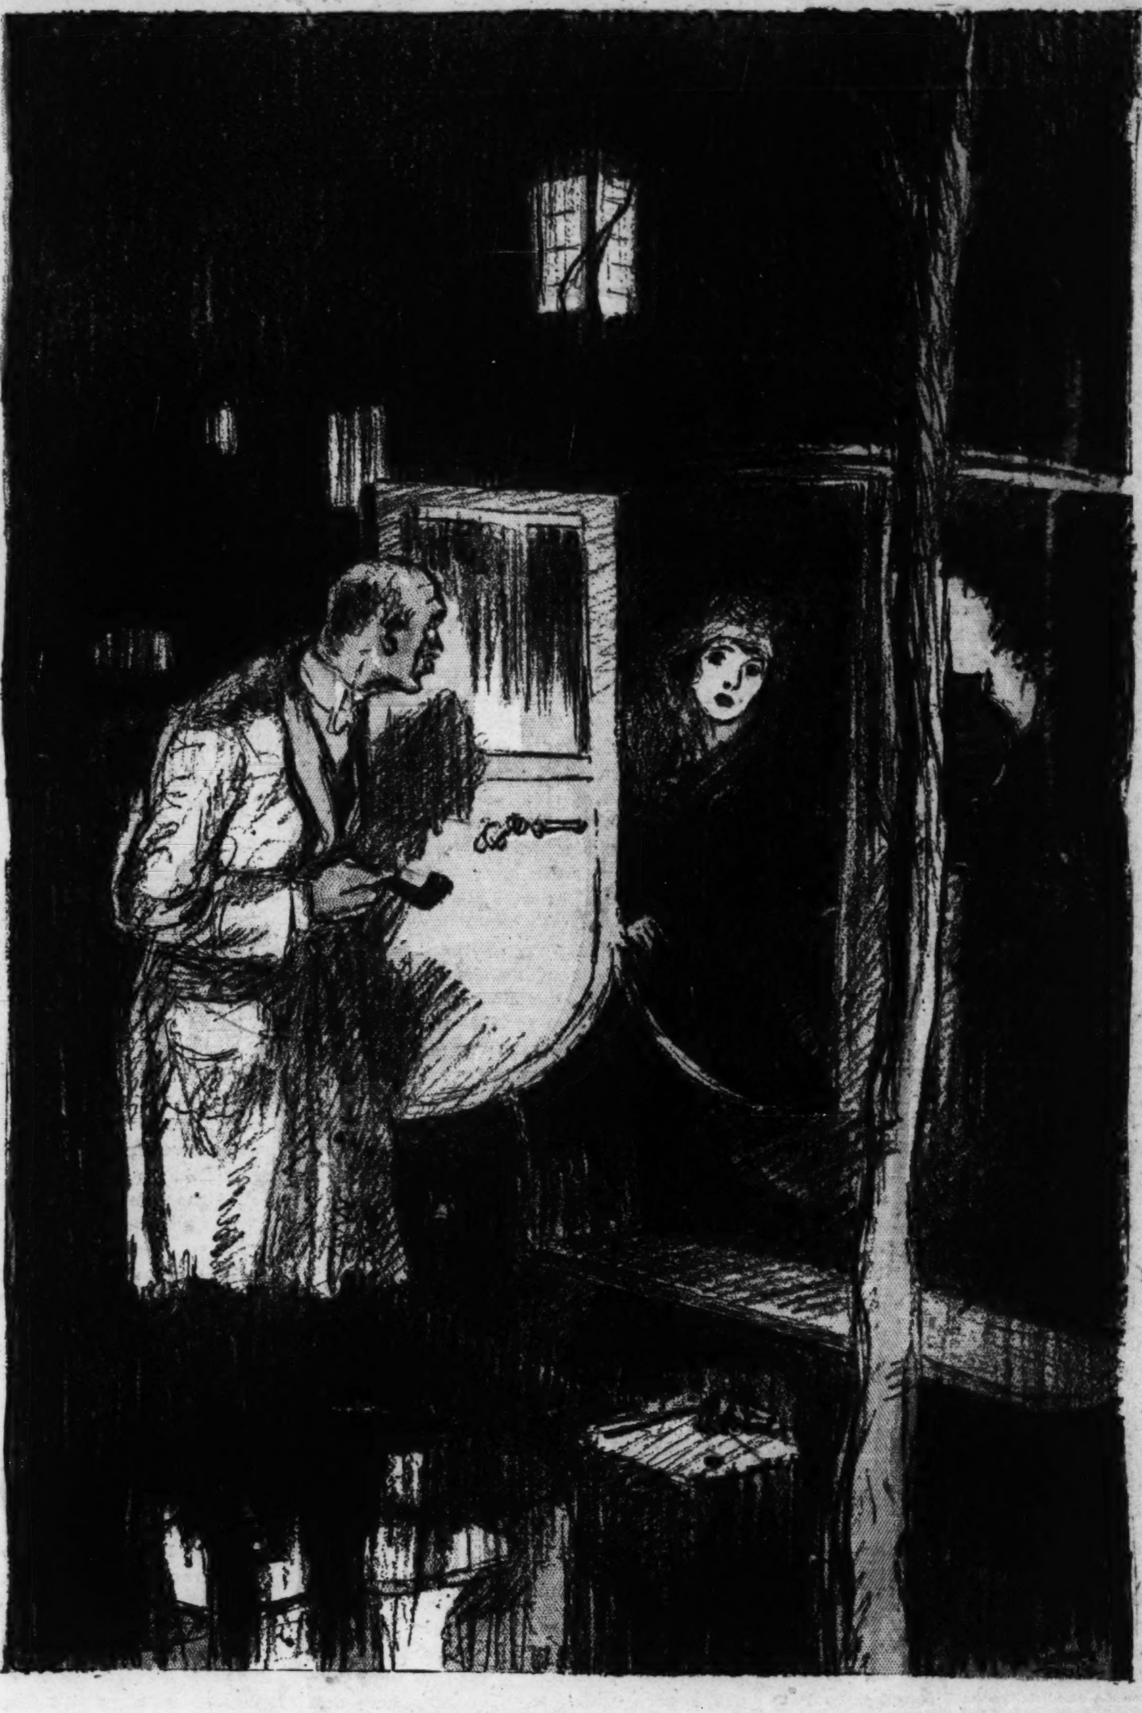
The YELLOW STREAK by Valentine Williams



"Why, Mary!" exclaimed the Major. "What on earth brings you round to see me on a night like this?"

SYNOPSIS.

Hartley Parrish has several guests at Harkings, his country home. They include Lady Margaret Trevert, her daughter Mary and son Horace, and Robin Greve. When Mary tells Greve she is engaged to Parrish and admits mercenary motives, he leaves in anger. Mary hears a shot, and Parrish is found dead in his library with his revolver in his hand. Suspicion is directed toward Greve as a factor in the apparent suicide when Bude, the butler, tells of hearing angry voices. Robin denies all and voices the belief Parrish was murdered. He finds a mysterious blue paper beside the body and later a bullet mark outside the library window. Detective Manderton tells Mary the verdict will be suicide, but she can see he is not convinced. Jeekes, Parrish's secretary, informs Mary of a French woman in Parrish's life. While they are talking a door is found ajar, as though there had been an eavesdropper. Robin is visited by Bruce Wright, formerly employed by Parrish, who tells of the latter's career in South Africa; of one Victor Marbran, an enemy, and of certain blue letters that roused Parrish's fears. Robin sends Wright to Harkings to get the blue letter that arrived just before Parrish's death. Wright is about to search Parrish's desk when some one enters and he hides. Peering out, he sees it is Mary Trevert. He confronts her. Her fright over, Mary aids Bruce in his search, but no blue letter is found. Mary asks Bruce to warn Greve to be on his guard against Manderton. Jay, Parrish's valet, reveals that a Maxim silencer had been on Parrish's automatic, but was not found at the time of the death. Bruce returns to London to find Greve watched by three of Manderton's agents. Greve, told of the missing silencer, reasons that Parrish fired a shot through the window at his assailant and was slain by the one shot that was heard. The riddle is to explain the fact that the bullet found in Parrish's body is of the same caliber as his automatic.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT.

Manderton Makes Peace.

"THERE'S only one possible explanation, I think," Robin went on, "and that is that Parrish was shot by a pistol of exactly the same caliber as his own. For the murderer to have killed Parrish with his own weapon would have been difficult without a struggle. But Miss Trevert heard no struggle. For the murderer and his victim to have pistols of the same caliber argues a rather remarkable coincidence, I grant you. But then life is full of coincidences! We meet them every day in the law. Though, I admit, this is a coincidence which requires some explaining. . . ."

He fell into a brown study which Bruce interrupted by suddenly announcing that he had had no lunch.

For answer, Robin pointed to the sideboard.

"There's a cloth in there," he said, "also the whisky, if my laundress has left any, and a siphon, and there should be some claret—Mrs. Bragg doesn't care about red wine. Set the table and I'll take a root 'round in the kitchen and dig up some tinned stuff."

They supped off a tinned tongue and some pâté de foie gras. Over their meal Bruce told Robin of his adventure in the library at Harkings.

"Jeekes must have collected the letter," Bruce said. "Before I came to you I went to Lincoln's Inn Fields to see if he was still at Bardy's—Parrish's solicitor, you know. But the office was closed and the place in darkness. I went on to the Junior Pantheon—that's Jeekes' club—but he wasn't in. He hadn't been there all day, the porter told me. So I left a note asking him to ring you up here. . . ."

"The case reeks of blackmail," said Robin, thoughtfully, "but I am wondering how much we shall glean from this precious letter when we do see it. I am glad you asked Jeekes to ring me up, though. He should be able to tell us something about these mysterious letters on the blue paper that used to put Parrish in such a stew. . . . Hullo, who can that be?"

An electric bell thrilled through the flat. It rang once . . . twice . . . and then a third time, a long, insistent peal.

"See who's there, will you, Bruce?" said Robin.

"Suppose it's the police?" began the boy.

Robin shrugged his shoulders.

"You can say I'm at home and ask them in," he said.

He heard the heavy oaken door swing open, a murmur of voices in the hall. The next moment Detective-Inspector Manderton entered the sitting room.

The detective's manner had undergone some subtle change which Robin, watching him closely as he came into the room, was quick to note. Mr. Manderton made an effort to retain his old air of rather patronizing swagger, but he seemed less sure of himself than was his wont. In fact, he appeared to be a little anxious.

He walked briskly into the sitting room and looked quickly from Bruce to Robin.

"Mr. Greve," he said, "you can help me if you will by answering a few questions."

With another glance at Bruce Wright he added:

". . . in private."

Bruce, obedient to a sign from Robin, said he would ring up in the morning and prepared to take his leave. Robin turned to the detective.

"There are some of your men, I believe," he said coldly, "watching this house. Would it be asking too much to request that my friend here might be permitted to return home unescorted?"

"He needn't worry," replied Manderton with a significant smile; "there's no one outside now!"

They watched Bruce Wright pass into the hall and collect his hat and coat. As the front door slammed behind him the detective added:

"I took 'em off myself soon after seven o'clock!"

"Why?" asked Robin bluntly.

Mr. Manderton dropped his heavy form into a chair.

"I'm a plain man, Mr. Greve," he said, "and I'm not above owning to it, I hope, when I'm wrong. For some little time now it has struck me that our lines of investigation run parallel. . . ."

"Instead of crossing!"

"Instead of crossing—exactly!"

"It's a pity you did not grasp that very obvious fact earlier," observed Robin pointedly.

Mr. Manderton crossed one leg over the other and, his finger tips pressed together, looked at Robin.

"Will you help me?" he asked simply.

"Do you want my help?"

Mr. Manderton nodded.

"Allies then?"

"Allies it is!"

Robin pointed to the table.

"It's dry work talking," he said. "Won't you take a drink?"

"Thanks, I don't drink. But I'll have a cigar, if I may. Thank you!"

The detective helped himself to a cheroot from a box on the table and lit up. Then, affecting to scan the end of his cigar with great attention, he asked abruptly:

"What do you know of the woman calling herself Madame de Malpas?"

Robin pursed up his lips rather disdainfully.

"One of the late Mr. Parrish's lady friends," he replied. "I expect you know that!"

"Do you know where she lives?" pursued the detective, ignoring the implied question.

"She's dead."

A flicker of interest appeared for an instant in Mr. Manderton's keen eyes.

"You're sure of that?"

"Certainly," answered Robin.

"Who told you?"

"Le Hagen—the solicitor, you know. He acted for this Malpas woman on one or two occasions."

"When did she die?"

"Six or seven months ago . . ."

"Did Jeekes know about it?"

"Jeekes? Do you mean Parrish's secretary? It's funny you're asking that. As a matter of fact it was through Jeekes that I heard the lady was dead. I was in Le Hagen's office one day when Jeekes came in and Le Hagen told me Jeekes had come to pay in a check for the cost of the funeral and the transport of the body to France."

"This was six or seven months ago, you say? I take it, then, that any allowance that Parrish was in the habit of making to this woman has ceased?"

"I tell you the lady is dead!"

"Then what would you say if I informed you that Mr. Jeekes had declared that these payments were still going on . . ."

Robin shrugged his shoulders.

"I should say he was lying."

"I agree. But why?"

"Whom did he tell this to?"

"Miss Trevert!"

"Miss Trevert?"

Robin repeated the name in amazement.

"I don't understand," he said. "Why on earth should Jeekes blacken his employer's character to Miss Trevert? What conceivable motive could he have had? Did she tell you this?"

"No," said Manderton. "I heard him tell her myself."

"Do you mean to tell me," persisted Robin, growing more and more puzzled, "that Jeekes told Miss Trevert this offensive and deliberate lie in your presence?"

"Well," remarked Mr. Manderton slowly, "I don't know about his saying this in my presence exactly. But I heard him tell her for all that. Walls have ears, you know—particularly if the door is ajar!"

He looked shrewdly at Robin, then dropped his eyes to the floor.

"He also told her that Le Hagen and you were in business relations . . ."

Robin sat up at this.

"Ah!" he said shortly. "I see what you're getting at now. Our friend has been trying to set Miss Trevert against me, eh? But why? I don't even know this man Jeekes except to have nodded 'good-morning' to him a few times. Why on earth should he of all men go out of his way to slander me to Miss Trevert, to throw suspicion."

He broke off short and looked at the detective.

Mr. Manderton caressed his big black mustache.

"Yes," he repeated suavely, "you were saying 'to cast suspicion' . . ."

The eyes of the two men met. Then the detective leaned back in his chair and, blowing a cloud of smoke from his lips, said:

"Mr. Greve, you've been thinking ahead of me on this case. What you've told me so far I've checked. And you're right. Dead right. And since you are in a manner of speaking, one of the parties interested in getting things cleared up, I'd like you to tell me just simply what idea you've formed about it. . . ."

"Gladly," answered the barrister. "And LITTLE MIRIAM BATISTA, though only seven years old, has had experience on both stage and screen. She was with Maude Adams in "A Kiss for Cinderella"; in Shubert's "Florodora," and several other stage productions. Her first screen appearance was with Madame Nazimova in "Eye for Eye." You will remember her best as the little crippled youngster in "Humoresque." Small Miss Batista was recently stopped by the Gerry society from appearing in the New York Winter Garden show, "The Whirl of New York." It is expected that she will return to the movies. Her grandfather, they tell me, is archbishop of Baglioni. —Mae Tinee.

EILEEN SEDGWICK was born in Galveston, Tex. From the time she was a little thing she was behind the footlights in dramatic stock, vaudeville and musical comedy. Her screen career started with Universal, where she played in "The Lure of the Circus" as leading woman with Eddie Polo. Since then she's been in "The Radium Mystery," "Dropped from the Clouds," "Putting It Over," and several other pictures, and usually manages to please a fair number of people. Miss Sedgwick is 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighs 120 pounds, and has blonde hair and dark blue eyes.

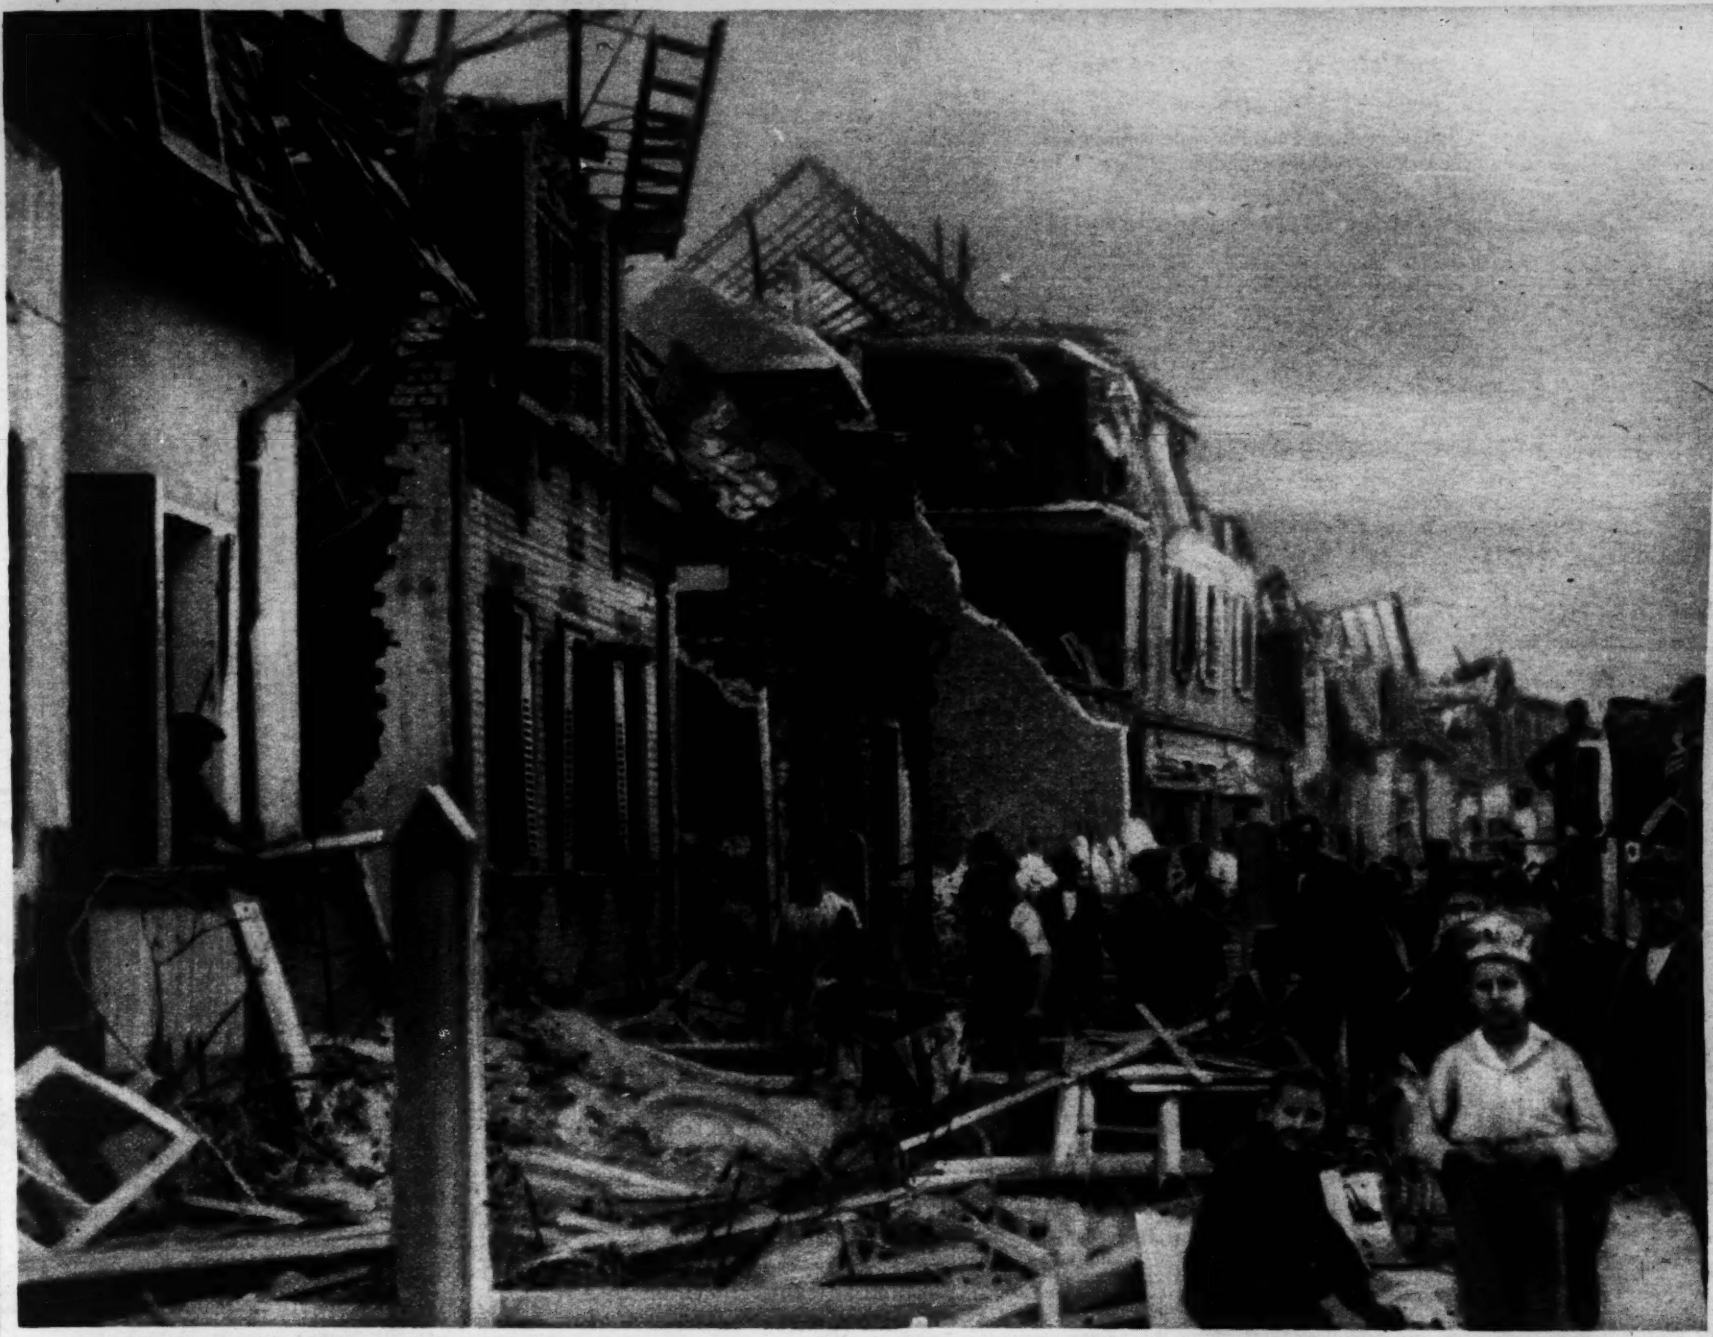
The WORLD'S GREATEST EXPLOSION

New Pictures from Oppau, Germany, Where Gas Blast Killed More Than 1,000 Persons and Laid Waste a Huge Area.



HOMELESS FAMILIES AMID THE RUINS of an entire street in Oppau that was wrecked by the disastrous explosion at the Baden Aniline Dye and Chemical works. It was this plant that produced Germany's poison gas during the world war, and the blast followed experiments with a new kind of gas.

(Photograph from The Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service; Tribune copyright.)

AN INJURED SURVIVOR TELLS HER STORY to a crowd gathered in one of the devastated streets. Several thousand persons were injured and the area laid waste extended for a radius of fifty miles from the chemical works. Nothing remained of the plant.

Conspicuous Nose pores—

How to reduce them

COMPLEXIONS otherwise flawless are often ruined by conspicuous nose pores.

The pores of the face are not as fine as on other parts of the body. On the nose especially, there are more fat glands than elsewhere and there is more activity of the pores.

These pores if not properly stimulated and kept free from dirt, clog up and become enlarged.

To reduce enlarged nose pores use this special treatment:

Wring a soft cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Then finish by rubbing the nose for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

Supplement this treatment with the steady general use of Woodbury's Facial Soap. Before long you will notice a marked improvement in your skin. But do not expect to change completely in a week a condition resulting from long continued exposure and neglect. Make this treatment a daily habit and before long you will see how it gradually reduces the enlarged pores until they are inconspicuous.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap today and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs. You will find Woodbury's on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25-cent cake will last a month or six weeks for any Woodbury treatment and also for general cleansing use. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York and Perth, Ontario.

A book of the most famous skin treatments ever formulated

Around each cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap is wrapped the famous booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch," giving scientific advice on the care of the skin and scalp, as well as complete treatments for the commoner skin troubles.

MAN IN WHOSE BED LINCOLN DIED NOW A PAUPER—After President Lincoln had been shot down by the assassin in Ford's theater, Washington, he was carried across the street to the room of Thomas Proctor, a war department clerk, where he died. Proctor, formerly a New York lawyer, is now an inmate of the city home, Blackwell's island, due to a breakdown of health and fortune. He is shown in his almshouse costume. CENTRAL AMERICA'S MOST BEAUTIFUL GIRL, selected from among 1,000 beauties by seventeen college men from the S. S. Ohio State, is Miss Ruth Agnes Brady, 17 years old, of Balboa, Panama Canal Zone—and she is not Castilian. Her father is a government employe. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)

RICHARD STRAUSS, the famous composer, says he didn't say the things the lady said he said in an interview cabled to America, and explains that it wouldn't be good business to talk that way when he's coming hither for money. He's bringing Elizabeth Schumann along to sing his lieder while he plays them in the Auditorium.

Are You Hitting the Sunset Trail?

You are, if you have passed your fortieth birthday, for that is the half-way mark in life's span of years. Now is the time for special vigilance in regard to your health. Pyorrhea, which afflicts four out of five people over forty, may have established itself in your mouth.

Pyorrhea is a disease of the gums, but medical science proves that its germs invade the body and cause many of the ills of middle age. These germs may deplete vitality, or impair the functions of the heart and other organs, and often result in such ailments as rheumatism and anaemia.

Pyorrhea begins with tender and bleeding gums, then the gums recede, the teeth decay, loosen and fall out, or must be extracted to rid the system of the infecting Pyorrhea germs which breed in little pockets about them.

To avoid Pyorrhea, visit your dentist regularly for teeth and gum inspection, and start using Forhan's For the Gums today.

Forhan's For the Gums will prevent Pyorrhea—or check its progress—if used in time and used consistently. Ordinary dentifrices will not do this. Forhan's keeps the gums firm and healthy, the teeth white and clean.

Brush Your Teeth With Forhan's—How to Use It

Use it twice daily, year in and year out. Wet your brush in cold water, place a half-inch of the refreshing, healing paste on it, then brush your teeth up and down. Use a rolling motion to clean the crevices. Brush the grinding and back surfaces of the teeth. Massage your gums with your Forhan-coated brush—gently at first until the gums harden, then more vigorously. If the gums are very tender, massage with the finger, instead of the brush. If gum-shrinkage has already set in, use Forhan's according to directions, and consult a dentist immediately for special treatment.

"MY experience was conclusive. I had taken along a new Stanley all-steel vacuum bottle which with my old style vacuum bottle gave us two for the trip. The second day out my father opened the door of the car unexpectedly. Both bottles tumbled bang upon a clump of rocks—

"Well I'm telling no tales about what we said but as for us grown folks our coffee was full of splintered glass. Fortunately for the youngster we had put her cold milk in the Stanley—that bottle was not even dented."

The Stanley Bottle will not break. It is made entirely of steel. Pint, quart and two-quart sizes—$7.50, $10.00 and $15.00 respectively. Ask to see the Stanley Lunch Kit and the Stanley Food Jar.

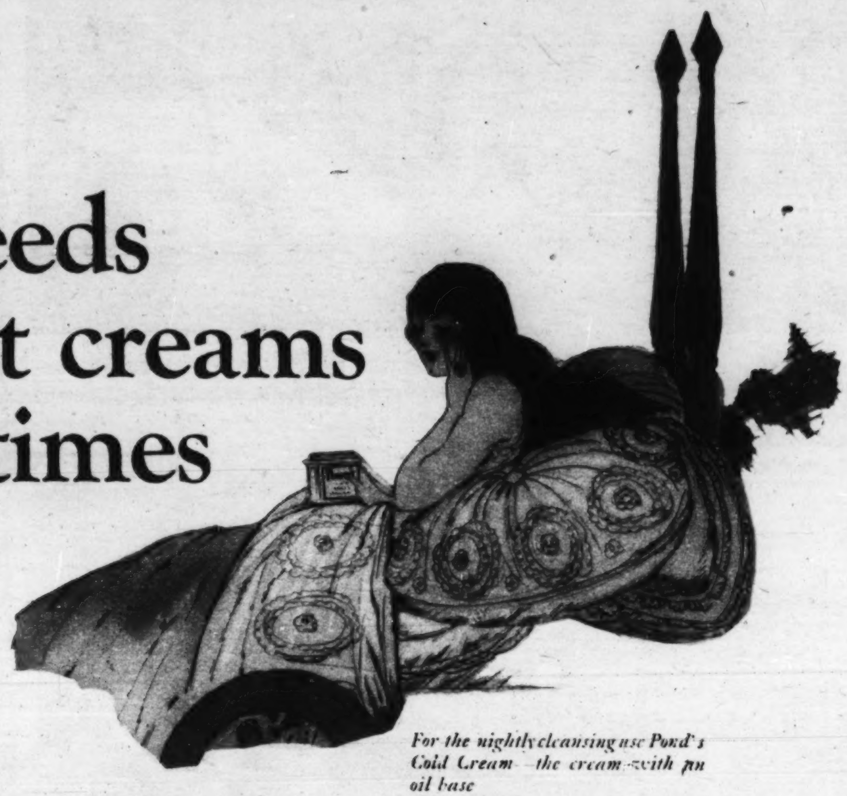
Your skin needs two different creams at different times



For the nightly cleansing use Pond's Cold Cream—the cream with an oil base

In the daytime, use Pond's Vanishing Cream to protect your skin against sun, wind and dust. It will not reappear in a shine

For daytime use—the cream that will not reappear in a shine

When you powder, do it to last. First smooth in a little Pond's Vanishing Cream, then powder. The powder will stay on two or three times as long as usual.

This cream is so delicate that it can be kept on all day without clogging the pores and there is not a drop of oil in it which could reappear and make your face shiny.

Furthermore, this protective cream, skin specialists tell us, prevents the tiny grains of powder from working their way into your pores and enlarging them.

At night—the cleansing cream made with oil

Cleanse your skin thoroughly every night if you wish it to retain its clearness and freshness. Only a cream made with oil can really cleanse the skin of the dust and dirt that bore too deep for ordinary washing to reach. At night, after washing your face, smooth Pond's Cold Cream into the pores. It contains just enough oil to work well into the pores and cleanse them thoroughly. When this dirt is allowed to remain in the pores, the skin becomes dull and blemishes and blackheads appear.

Start using these two creams today. They are both too delicate in texture to clog the pores and they will not encourage the growth of hair. In both jars and tubes at any drug or department store. The Pond's Extract Company, New York.

THE FRETFUL PORPENTINE, as Shakespeare calls him, is famed as an exemplar of preparedness. DO YOU REMEMBER WAY BACK WHEN this was Chicago's first stockyards? It was just before the civil war, and there was little evidence then of the mighty Packingtown industries of today.

HE MAKES THEM THIN TO MUSIC– This is a close-up of Wallace, Chicago's leading physical director. He is now nationally known for his discovery of an unfailing, scientific means of reducing weight. It is done to music, and his phonographic reduction records are sent all over the United States. Regardless of how heavy the man or woman, the weight comes down to normal in remarkably short time. (Photo by Keedy)

DO YOU WANT TO REDUCE to normal weight? Would you accept absolutely free proof that you can? In a few weeks. No matter how stout you now may be. And the way is NOT by starving.

FOOD DOES NOT CAUSE FAT or you would not see stout men and women who eat less than a child of ten. Excess flesh means your system is turning too much of what you DO eat into fat. Until such a condition is changed, you will stay stout!

GET THIN TO MUSIC and Nature will make your bodily proportions normal, and keep them so. My reduction course on phonograph records—set to music—brings instant and PERMANENT results. It causes your system to use every bit of nourishment for blood, bone and sinew. NOTHING IS LEFT from which to make fat. Thousands of people have reduced by this interesting method. A majority of them had tried other means of losing weight without success.

I'LL REDUCE YOU 5 LBS. FREE to convince you, and I'll do it in FIVE DAYS' TIME. Before you pay a penny. Without any agreement to take my course. I will send at once, postpaid, a full-sized, regular reducing record and instructions. Send no money for this lesson—all I ask is to TRY IT.

How can anybody who really wishes to get thin decline such an offer of proof! Clip or tear off the coupon below; fill it in now; mail it today.

WALLACE, 178 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago: Please send record for first reducing lesson, free and prepaid. I will either enroll or return your record at end of five-day trial. (30)

SPEAKING OF CHAMPION PARENTS, how about Mr. and Mrs. Silverio Riverio of New York and their record of sixteen husky children? SHOOTING DOLPHINS is rare sport, according to these farm boys and girls of Eastport, Maine. It also is lucrative, as the fish yield a valuable oil. Why The Tribune has the largest morning daily circulation in America

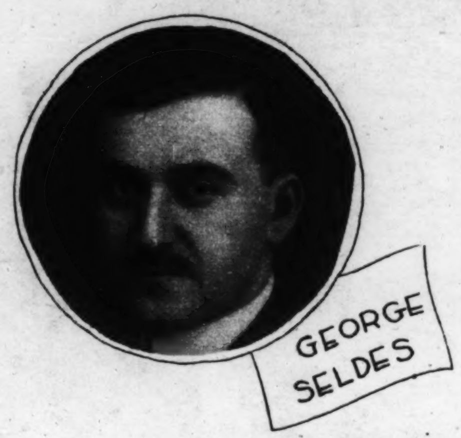
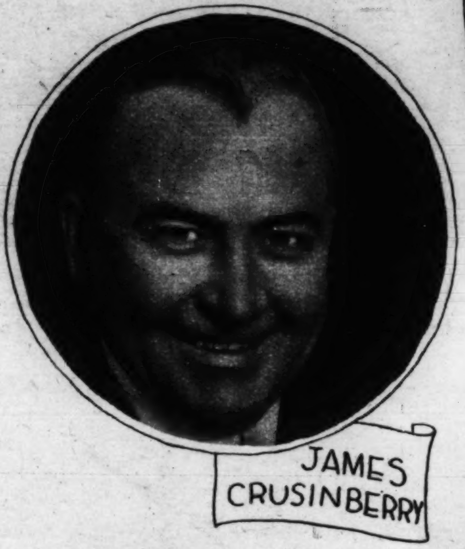
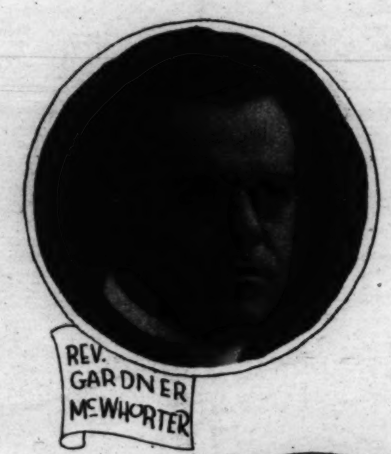
Read the Tribune Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday as well as Sunday!





MARGARET REIDY



MORROW KRUM

INDIA MOFFETT

JOSEPH G. DAVIS

GUY F. LEE

Guy F. Lee's verse is familiar to readers of The Sunday Tribune. He writes also two poems a week for The Wake of the News. His regular job is the "dog watch," which means that he goes to work at 1 o'clock in the morning and quits when other people start. The Tribune operates twenty-four hours a day, every day in the year. If any important news breaks after the regular editions are printed Guy Lee gets out a new edition which is on the street soon after the story reaches the office.

INDIA MOFFETT

Mrs. India Moffett, society editor of The Tribune, has followed Chicago's social affairs for years. Every morning her column on the woman's page is filled with interesting information about the movements, the plans and the ambitions of the people of the social register and the activities of Chicagoans in general who are interested in society. She can describe a gown so that any woman knows exactly how it looks and what it's made of. Mrs. Moffett's hobby is motoring.

JAMES CRUSINBERRY

James Crusinberry has been writing baseball on The Tribune for ten years. During the last few years he has helped immensely the movement to give more attention to amateur sports, visiting high schools and colleges for stories of their baseball and football teams. Not one of the well known baseball writers of the country has found the time that Mr. Crusinberry has to interest himself in the athletics of high school and college, and his wide knowledge of the two big games makes his stories of greater interest and of more value to the fans.

LARRY RUE

Larry Rue of the foreign news service lives in Constantinople when the news lets him. Some time ago he was in southern Russia for three weeks and turned in an expense account of 2,055,900 rubles. The startled auditor read the various items—210,000 rubles for room and tips, 315,000 rubles for carriage, 60,900 rubles for incidentals, etc. At the bottom Rue had reduced it to American money. It came to $82.23. Rue was born in Fosston, Minn., worked on several American newspapers, was an officer in the air service, and, after the armistice, got to Europe finally as an oiler on a steamer.

GEORGE SELDES

George Seldes, Berlin correspondent of The Tribune, joined the foreign news service soon after his discharge from the army, following the armistice. He had previously been with the Marshall News Syndicate in London. His work for the foreign news service took him first to Vienna and later to Italy, Paris, London and eventually Berlin. A recent assignment sent him to soviet Russia. Pittsburgh is Mr. Seldes' "home town."

MARGARET REIDY

Margaret Reidy directs one of the largest philanthropies in Chicago. She is Sally Joy Brown, whose "Friend in Need" column appears every morning on the woman's page. But the part that shows in print is only a small fraction of the job, as more than 1,000 letters come to her every month, either offering help or asking it. To get these two groups together is Miss Reidy's job. Her other pseudonym is Aunty Bee, and she picks the "bright sayings" that appear each morning from a pile of letters totaling nearly 3,000 in a month.

MORROW KRUM

Morrow Krum took a position which had no precedent when he became aviation editor of The Tribune. In addition to his section in The Sunday Tribune he covers the air news for the daily paper, often accompanying the flyers and keeping in the closest possible touch with the news of the flying world. He was a pilot in the army during the war.

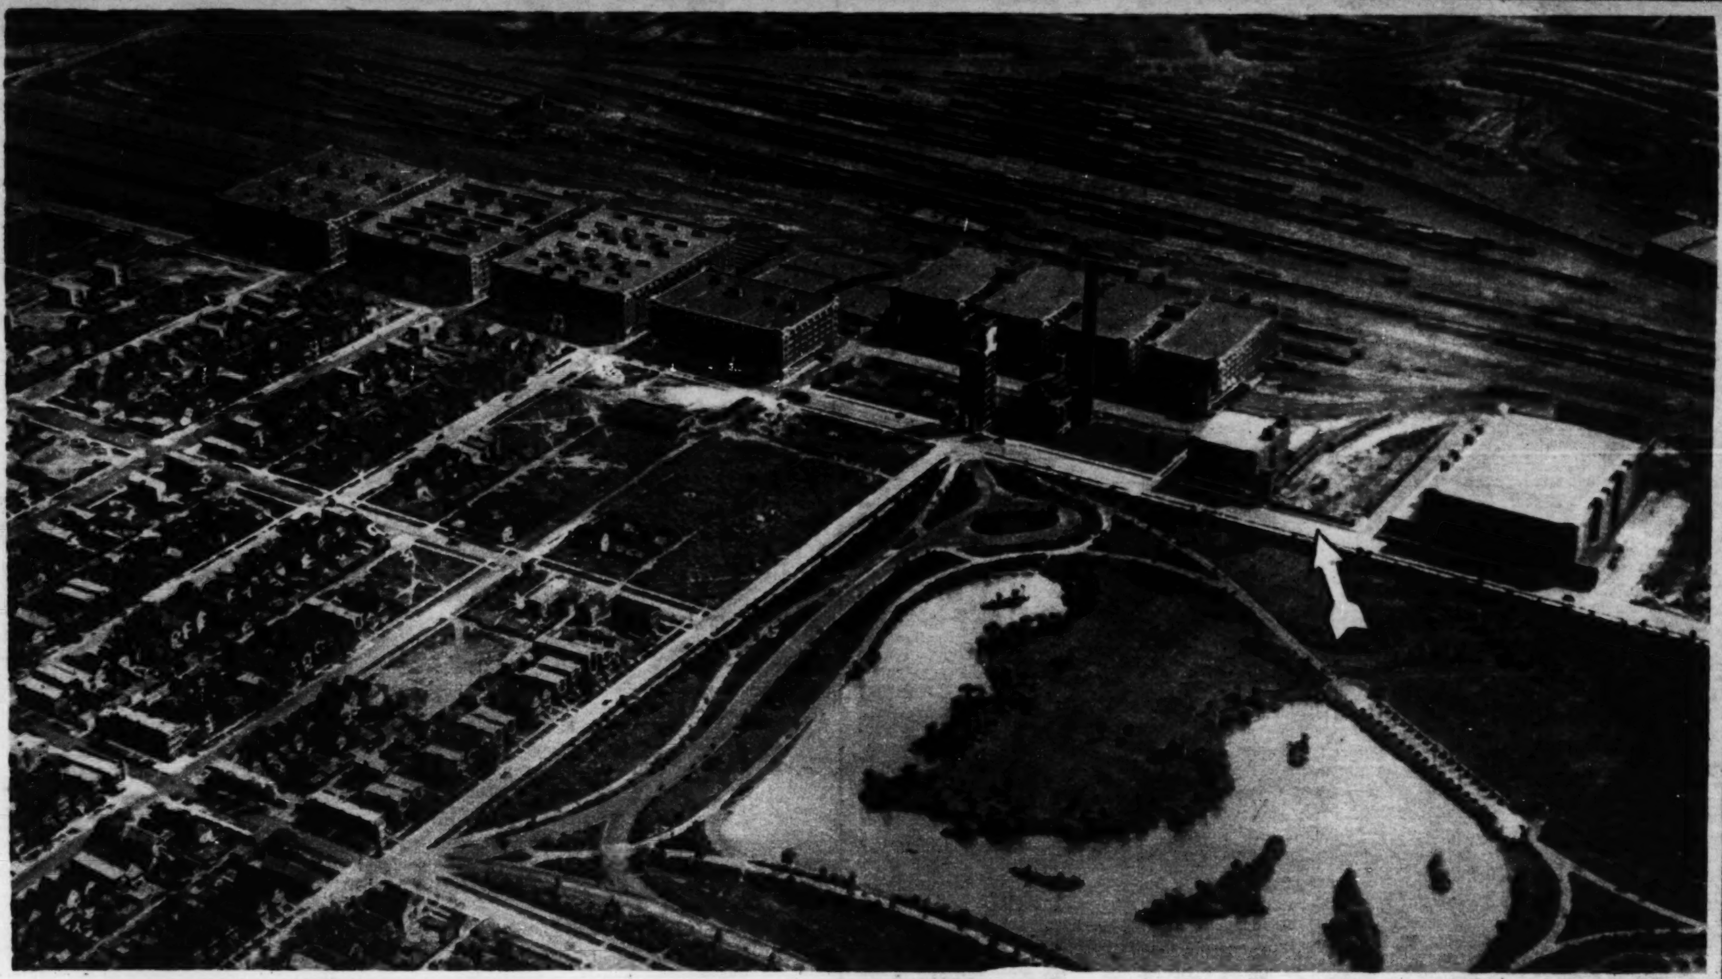
REV. GARDNER McWHORTER

Rev. Gardner MacWhorter handles the religious and charitable news for The Tribune. Besides covering the church news he writes the stories for the Christmas Good Fellow movement, the "Bank of Kindness" department, The Tribune hospital at Camp Algonquin, and The Tribune free ice fund, as well as reviewing books on religious and charitable subjects. He is a young Episcopal minister.

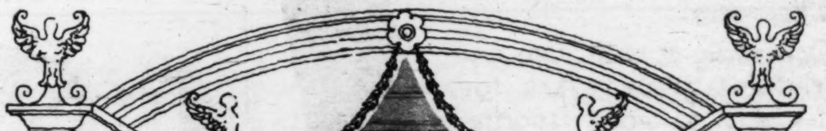
JOSEPH G. DAVIS

When Joe Davis came to The Tribune twenty-two years ago quite a few people had heard of his favorite game, golf, but nobody took it seriously. Now it is the most serious thing that a large part of the population encounters. Joe has been writing golf news for a long time and has seen his golf news stories grow from an inch to a couple of columns. Many of the young American golf experts were in their cradles when Joe wrote his first golf story for The Tribune.

YOU BIG STIF



CHICAGO'S GREAT "LAKE TO ZOO" THOROUGHFARE, Pershing road (formerly Thirty-ninth street), as seen from an airplane. This street, which is indicated in the picture by an arrow, eventually will be a broad boulevard extending from Lake Michigan to the new zoological gardens on the Des Plaines. The three great structures on the left are army supply depots. Next come the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company's warehouse; the tower and power station of the Central Manufacturing district, with four Chicago Junction railway buildings in the rear; the White City Cold Storage company's plant, and, on the extreme right, the U. S. Cold Storage company's plant, said to be the largest in the world. McKinley park and its lagoon are just across the street and in the background are the Ashland avenue yards of the Chicago Junction railway, while Packingtown is nearby.



FROCKS THAT ASPIRE TO SMARTNESS CHOOSE SILKS

BECAUSE "its fabric is its fortune," the aspiring new frock must choose with greatest deliberation. Fashion ordains that it be of silk, that its texture be not only beautiful to sight and touch, but that it possess a supple adaptability to interpret the lines of the mode. As to colour, it must be brilliantly clear, deeply vivid, or subtly tinted. Wherefore, the frock that attains success, whatever its mood, is the frock that makes its selection from the new Cheney Silks, offered in a richly varied collection of crêpes of novel weave, satins of dull lustre, deeply shimmering, or with exquisite crêpey finish, crisply chic taffetas and bewitchingly patterned lining silks.

Stores with a reputation for fine merchandise will be quite sure to sell Cheney Silks, either by the yard or in garments ready to wear.

CHENEY BROTHERS
4th Avenue at 18th Street, New York

CHENEY SILKS

The subdued brilliance of Mirrokrêpe and the sheer delicacy of soft lace prove excellent foils in this simple dinner frock. It flatters maid or matron and might very easily be made at home.

The richness of the cut velvet tapestry background for this charming gown emphasizes but one of the distinguished decorative and upholstery fabrics produced by Cheney Brothers.

FURS ADOPT IRREGULARITIES OF REGULAR CLOTHES

By CORINNE LOWE

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

EW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.] — The man who reads the fur meter this year has a big chore ahead of him. For many of the new fur creations have both latitude and longitude. These voluminous garments reflect, too, many of the moods of the fabric fashions. The bloused back, the one button side fastening, the uneven hem, the combination of cape and coat, the huge sleeves, the moody trimming, the combination of coat and cape—all these and many other details establish a close relation between the pelt and fabric worlds.

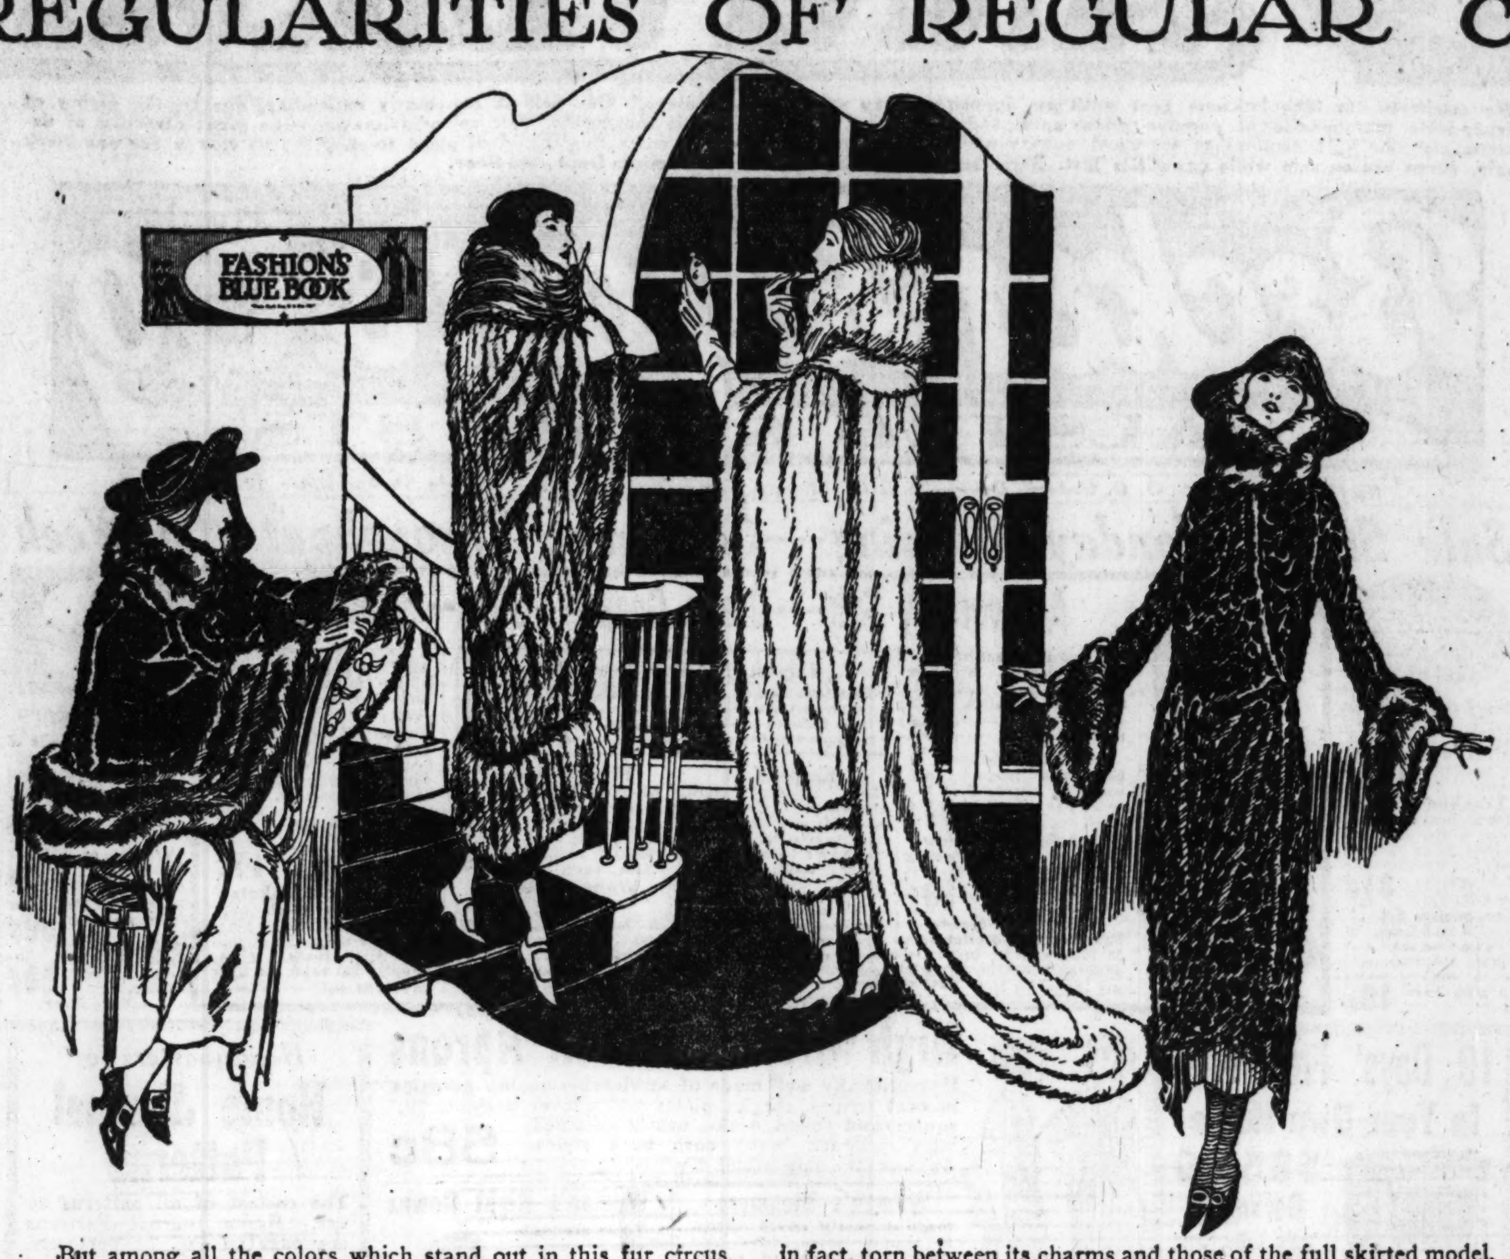
Among the outstanding features of the new fur modes is the use of the cape neckpiece. Do you remember the stingy little things of lynx and Persian lamb which they drew on over their basques and tight sleeves during the late '80s and early '90s? Shades of Howells' novels, of the dear old Smedley illustrations in the magazines of Bernhardt triumphs and hand painted placques—how you are recalled by these "new" neckpieces! For, after a long retirement, these prim little shoulder capes have set up in business again. They are being featured now all along 5th avenue. And it is predicted that during the winter months the throw and scarf will surrender much of their prestige to this revived type of neckwear.

Perhaps it may be protested here that this item contradicts what has already been said about the amplitude of the fur garment. But wait. Capes are not limited to shoulder longitude. By no means. They wander like Ulysses or Enoch Arden. They go to the waist and to the knees. Even the skirt hem has no terrors for these stout hearted adventurers. And such adventurings as they have on the way to their destination! To look over any exhibition of new fur models is to exclaim, "This is the day of the supercape."

The fact of it is that many of these new garments combine the comfort of a coat with the grace of a cape. Lanvin, for example, has sent a mole cape which has attracted much attention. It has slits at the sides through which the arms may be passed when you are in a coat mood. These slits are accompanied by flaps forming sketchy sleeves for the coat. When, however, you happen to be in a cape humor you ignore the slits. Then the flaps cover these incisions so neatly that nobody would ever dream of the garment's capacity for a double life.

Cheruit is another foreign designer who dwells on the advantages of a Jekyll and Hyde (no, we really can't forego our wit and omit saying "Hide") existence. Some of the wraps of this establishment are models, indeed, of how deftly a fur garment may steer the middle course between coat and cape. And, by the way, Cheruit has some bright new thoughts about trimming these wraps which are sure to interest the woman who is making over her furs. She puts cire braid in heavy applique upon the border of a chinchilla cape. The effect is really stunning. So, too, are some other fabric trimmings noted among the foreign models. For example, one lovely mole wrap has an inset of black velvet at the front, and the same fabric is repeated in the border of the throw back tie on the collar.

Among the long capes one notes a frequent impulse toward the three tier arrangement. A cape of gray caracul thus terraced has bands of mole to mark the various stages, and the collar, too, is of mole. Mention of this garment brings us to the importance of caracul in the winter fur show. Many of the smart houses stress this pelt in prejudice to the habitual Hudson seal. Black caracul, in particular, is entered in the lists against it; and, trimmed with mole, squirrel, or monkey, its advances are so persuasive that a faithful heart is needed to resist them.



THAT a fur coat is doomed to no more regularity of hem line than is a fabric garment is shown by the coat of American broadtail at the right. This is dyed the fashionable tint of elephant gray, and is trimmed with opossum. Next, an ermine evening wrap provides in its trailing back panel a suggestion for humbler garments. Another evening wrap beside it, of summer ermine, is collared in blue fox. At the left the fashionable cape is represented in Hudson seal banded with opossum.

But among all the colors which stand out in this fur circus elephant gray gets most attention from the populace. Caracul and baby lamb have both gone to Jumbo for instructions. So has broadtail—O, above all, the American broadtail! You can't look in a furrier's window nowadays without seeing at least one model of this kind. Still another fur which is often dyed elephant tone is goatskin. And all these pelts take just as kindly to that other new tint, platinum.

We are showing at the right of the page a broadtail model in elephant color trimmed with fox. This model illustrates the long, slim line which is found in so many of the new coats. It is carried out with the one button side fastening, to which I have already referred as basking in popular favor, and the draping effects a skirt hem longer at the sides than at front and back.

These slim, rather snug fitting garments are exceedingly good this season. But they do not represent a dictatorship. For, vying with them in distinction, are the models that add a flaring skirt to a long bodice. The day I saw the model just described I was, in fact, torn between its charms and those of the full skirted model. One of the latter occurred in elephant colored broadtail, with a high collar of black monkey fur, and another of mole permitted a choker of squirrel as its only digression.

And how about the fur wrap of last winter—the one which, widening at the hips, tapered down to the ankles? Will it be possible to wear this model and still retain our self-respect? Well, the question is open to controversy. Dismissing as a personal prejudice my attitude toward these wraps, which, either in cloth or in fur, gave a woman what I used to call the skewer fowl silhouette, I am bound to admit that some of the latest Paris wraps have made little change in the map. What does Jenny do, for example, but make up a long coat of natural squirrel that draws in at the ankles in the same old way? The word of such an authority cannot be overlooked in answering this vital query. It prompts one to say guardedly that if you are really fond of the system the ingrowing wrap may be worn without trembling.

The one detail which urges a woman toward revamping her old fur coat is the sleeve. Here all the modern theories about this item rage as furiously as they do in the fabric world. Sleeves of the new coats are variously mandarin, Jenny, or the kind that widen gradually from a rather compressed top. In all cases they are draughty. The one exception is the bishop sleeve seen on some smart models. This is often carried out with a bell cuff.

As to collars, these are often choker in effect. Thus, the cape neckpieces nearly all finish in this manner. Another favored collar is the shawl one, seen to particular advantage on some of the smart little box coats. Thus a shawl finish of seal is used on a flaring hip length jacket of elephant gray American broadtail with one button closing. And, by the way, these jackets remain the backbone of fur fashion. Equip your old garment with new sleeves, snip it up a little higher in front than in back, and decide upon a shawl collar. If you do this you couldn't be eccentric in appearance if you tried.

The old German tribes started the book of fur fashions. They conquered Rome with their shaggy tunics as forcibly as they did with their swords. After their invasion all the fops and belles took to the barbarian furs to set off tunics of bright Tyrian dyes. But even one of those old fur-rug-ged folks would get a thrill out of some of the new models.

What, for example, would our old friend Vercingetorix have thought if he could have seen a woman entering one of the theaters the other night in the ermine evening wrap second from the right? She did do that very thing, and when you saw her flapping the princely fur on the ground you understood the hardships of that person who undertakes to read the fur meter.

Of course, only a few of us can afford to wear ermine, and this wrap is shown, therefore, merely with an idea of application to less costly furs and to fabrics. The trailing back panel is often encountered in new evening wraps, and the thought is carried out in velvet or brocade wraps with fur panel.

One of such garments which I saw recently was a lovely cape of fuchsia velvet with the panel in chinchilla. (A lovely combination of color, incidentally.) Here the panel, when not worn on the floor, could be adjusted to the waist in such manner as to provide the fashionable bloused back.

Do not forget that the long bloused back is good and that it is often developed by means of a short top cape. Jenny reminds you of the latter clause in a long fur coat with a cape reaching to the waistline. In the back the upper garment is tucked under, while in the front it is accorded full honors of a cape.

As a last word may be mentioned the popularity of goatskin, both as a trimming for other fur garments and as a leading element. This popularity, borrowed from Paris, is pointed to in one 5th avenue shop by a hip length cape of platinum goatskin and by a beaver sports coat from Paquin trimmed lavishly with the exalted pelt.

FAT NEW YORKERS IN RACE TO REDUCE

Antoinette Donnelly registering recruits for the reducing contest between fifty fat men and fifty fat women.

by Antoinette Donnelly

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—What is the most universally popular topic of conversation today? Baseball? Railroad strikes? The weather? None of these, no matter how vitally they affect the individual. No. It's reducing. Take any gathering of women, some of them either have reduced, are doing it now, or are going to in the near future (which day may arrive and may not). At male gatherings, too, physical fitness is a large part of their main interest in life.

Therefore, knowing that no one wants to be fat who is fat, and no other wants to be fat who is leaning in that direction, and knowing further that outside of a small minority with whom fat is an actual disease, usually an affliction of the thyroid glands, there is no need of people of either sex carrying about extra weight which does nothing to improve their health and looks and much to dispel both, Dr. Royal S. Copeland, health commissioner of New York, and I have staged a war on the obese goblin.

First Contest in Chicago.

It came about this way: A year ago last spring Health Commissioner Dr. John Dill Robertson and I staged such a war in Chicago. He took twenty-five women and I took twenty-five men and for a month we carried on a contest the result of which proved that even in one month's time many, many pounds may be removed from the person of a number of people with comparative ease and extreme comfort and joy to the reduced one.

In case any doubting Thomas who reads this about the men being as interested as women in the absorbing work of remodeling overweighted frames, let me say in that contest the men came off victorious with a total male loss of flesh of 268½ pounds, as against 127½ pounds loss among the women, or an average loss per male of 13 and a fraction, as against 10 and a fraction pounds per woman.

Since that contest requests have come to me from all over for the staging of another battle. Which brought me to New York, where the health commissioner has entered fifty women against fifty men under my direction and an extremely lively race for honors and weight loss is promised. I wanted to see if people in the east were not as vitally interested in this absorbing subject as those in the west. I find they are, indeed.

Recruits Storm Office.

Following the announcement with request for recruits on both sides in the Daily News of New York, the offices set aside for registration were mobbed with heavyweights registering around, over, and above the 200 mark.

Policemen had to be called in to quell what looked like a riot. It was heartbreaking not to be able to take every applicant. They begged and pleaded to enter, but even though we had secured Philadelphia Jack O'Brien's institute in the Madison Square Garden, a huge place of its kind, we could not accommodate properly nor give personal attention to more than the fifty applicants on each side.

"I've simply got to get into this class," pleaded a girl who would have been a beauty but for her excess forty pounds. "I can't get a job as a model any more."

Love Is Fading.

"I've got to get in," said another. "My husband is kicking all the time about how fat I'm getting. I weighed only 122 when I was married, and he doesn't love me like he used to."

"A heavy fellow doesn't stand a good chance at a job these days," a 247 pound male urged in his own cause. "I go looking and employers tell me I can't work as well as a fellow who is lighter. It's serious business with me."

Another man who tipped the beam at 297 confided that his wife wasn't the same old girl to him since he took on all this weight.

And so it went, running the gamut of reasons, some humorous, some tragic, and all reasonable enough. For after all you cannot plead much in favor of obesity, can you?

Good Stunt Anywhere.

Now, if it is popular in New York and Chicago, it is going to be equally so in your city. So, why not get in the game with us. Why don't you start a reducing contest of your own? You can get a gym to work in. Or, if you can't, have some meeting place and get an army man to put you through drills daily—say a twenty minute workout. Have a leader on both sides, one who is interested in seeing the thing go through and who will carry it through to a victorious finish. You haven't any idea the fun it is. Everybody who is plump is good natured enough to enter into the spirit of it. And the good comes not only from the actual daily exercise and diet, but it lasts longer. You get into the exercising habit, and consequently you are pioneering an excellent health movement. The contest idea is best, for any rivalry heightens interest in a thing, as you know. If you can't get twenty-five women pitted against as many men—take fifteen or ten.

Then for the next four weeks I will give you the diets. I'll start right in now, so you will not lose any time, because if you are in earnest, you can get your physical director right away, or if you cannot get one, then you can do a certain amount of exercising yourself daily—say ten minutes morning and night. Beginning next week I will print the week's loss in weight of my class and that of Dr. Copeland, so you can compare results at the end of your first. Each week thereafter I shall repeat these weight tables for your comparison.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Asks for Patches.

"I am a woman 75 years old and I try to make quilt covers. I wonder if some of your numerous friends could help me with patches of any kind for which I should be so grateful.

"MRS. M. J."

I hope there may be some rag bag found which will yield you a rich harvest of pieces for your quilt covers.

They Have No Income.

"I am the mother of six children, ranging in age from 7 months to 9 years. They all need clothing, especially the ones going to school. Their father has been sick for almost a year, and has just been taken out of a plaster cast. I didn't ask for any charity from the county, but I did all I could—addressed envelopes, rented the three front rooms of my house furnished. One girl has no winter coat. I would be glad to get a warm coat for her.

"MRS. J. W. C."

I trust this plea will be heard and answered. A sick husband and no income make a bad combination with which to keep the wolf from the door.

Request for a Tent.

"Has any one a tent—large and warm enough to live in—to give or loan for the use of a young woman alone, in bad health? She is unable to pay the present rents.

"GRACE."

Can any one respond to this appeal? The address will be sent upon request.

"Have any of your readers any second and third grade piano music to give away? Same would be greatly appreciated by a young man patient who is unable to work.

"R. B."

For One Interested in Telegraphy.

"I have a set of records on wireless telegraphy which I would like to give to some boy who would be interested in learning the system.

"MRS. M. S. W."

SYRUP PEPSIN IN OLD AGE

Much used by elderly people for constipation, biliousness, headaches, etc.

MANY men and women, as they grow older, suffer constantly from little ills. The cause is the poisons produced by chronic constipation, resulting in headaches, depression, bloating, sour stomach, bad breath, etc. A single bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will prove to you that you can so regulate yourself that elimination will occur promptly every day. Increased doses are not necessary. It is a combination of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin. The cost is only about a cent a dose.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has been on the market 30 years and is today the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, the formula has never been improved upon. It is safer and better for you than salts, minerals, calomel, coal tar and such drastic purgatives.

Half-Ounce Bottle Free

Few escape constipation, so even if you do not require a laxative at this moment let me send you a Half-ounce Trial Bottle of my Syrup Pepsin FREE OF CHARGE so that you will have it handy when needed. Simply send your name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 514 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Write me today.

Reading Character by the Hands - by - DORIS BLAKE

IF your fiancé has square fingers you may count on his being firm in his opinions, reasonable, and quite an orderly person.

If his fingers are fat, he's lazy. The same applies to his fiancée.

The ambitious person has long fingers.

The amiable, easy going person has short fingers.

Large fingers mean slow intellectuality and common tastes.

Small, thin fingers bespeak a clever, acute mind, somewhat given to deceit.

Lean fingers indicate simple tastes, perhaps leaning too much toward penuriousness.

Markedly pointed fingers indicate religious fervor and imagination.

A coarse, brutal nature is disclosed by fingers as large at the tips as at the roots.

The strength of your will power is measured by the length of the upper joint of the thumb.

Thumbs that curve downward show shrewdness and miserliness.

Thumbs that are coarse, heavy, and undeveloped belong to rude and ignorant persons.

In the old days in Scotland, licking thumbs was the recognized sign among the lower classes that a sale had been agreed upon and was satisfactory and lucky.

Never trust a woman who hides her thumbs in the palms of her hands.

If the thumb turns back, it is a sign that you love to spend money.

A short thumb is a sign of humble origin.

The second division of the thumb shows how much determination you have.

It is a sign of a weak mind to sit with the thumbs turned in and held by the fingers.

Thumbs that bend up indicate a curious disposition.

A small, narrow thumb denotes a weak character.

If the first finger leans toward the second, power is shown weakened by melancholy.

If the second finger leans toward the first, it is indicative of the energy that will conquer every obstacle.

The second finger leaning toward the third indicates good fortune and large gains.

It is a bad sign for all fingers to be of the same length—sign of a timer.

The third leaning toward the fourth denotes celebrity and fame.

If the fingers curve upwards it is a sign of generosity.

If the fingers curve downward the person is niggardly.

If your middle finger is much longer than the palm of your hand you have a keen, active mind.

If the end of the little finger reaches higher than the last joint of the ring finger he or she will rule the house with ease and the other will be easily obedient.

You can attain any object you desire if you can make the tips of the first and fourth fingers meet over the back of your hand.

If you curl your little finger you are blueblooded.

When your fingers are slippery and everything drops out of them, it is a sure sign of a visitor.

If you clasp your hands together, interlacing the fingers, and the right thumb unconsciously comes on top, you will rule the home; if the left, you will be ruled.

Do you know the origin of the expression "thumbs down"? In the old Roman days, when at the gladiatorial exhibitions the fight between man and man, or between man and beast, had reached the point where one was at the mercy of the other, it was put to vote whether the conquered should be put to death or not. The people signified their pleasure by their thumbs. If they were in a merciful mood or the man was a favorite, they turned their thumbs up, which meant he should be allowed to live; but if they were fierce for blood they turned their thumbs down, and the victim was dispatched before their eyes.

Beauty Answers

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

GRAY HAIR: I SUPPOSE IF you've made up your mind that it is going to be dyed, dyed it will be. But, remember to keep up the subterfuge you are going to spend considerable money and time. The initial fee is quite high; it needs to be touched up every few months, and every nine months a complete immersion is necessary. All I can advise you is to go to the best person in the business, to be sure of a job that will look well.

PEARLINE: WANT SOME EXERcises to straighten and plump your shoulders? First, you have to learn to stand correctly, walk correctly, and sit correctly; and then, if you have access to a gym pool, go to it twice or three times a week. Swimming is the finest kind of chest developer. Also, I have some exercises you would better send for. They're good and are easy to execute morning and night.

WORRIED: DEAR, DEAR! LIFE am jes' full o' complications for us ladies who would be beautiful! You get your skin back to its schoolgirl blush, and your hair begins to raise a rumpus. But then, as our Sunday school friend, Pollyanner, would say, "S'pose you had none to raise a rumpus with?" I guess you're exaggerating a bit, too, Worried. When hair begins to come out our troubles are exaggerated awfully. I think, though, a little tonic and some good healthy morning and evening applications of a firm bristled brush will make a lot of difference to you. Send along the s. a. e. for the tonic formula and for some good advice, done up concisely in a neat little pamphlet, easy to follow and worth following.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 15c and 30c.

On Children's Clothes, Too, The Deltor Means Money Saved!

LITTLE frilly, flowery things—sturdy suits with a decidedly bachelor air—diminutive thistledown bits of clothing that add much pleasure to the first few years of life!

Now you can have the fun of making them yourself and making them for less money than such tiny things could possibly cost hitherto!

Because of a wonderful invention, accompanying every Butterick pattern—the Deltor—any woman, no matter what her sewing experience, can easily make her children's clothes; she can create with her own fingers the dainty little things she has always desired for her family; and—with the Deltor—she can actually save money even on these clothes!

Butterick Design 3239
Butterick Design 2770

The DELTOR

Saves 50c to $10 On a Gown for Yourself

First, the Deltor gives you an individual layout chart (yes, individual—not just a general chart, but one for your exact size and for each suitable width of material.) You buy ¼ to 1⅜ yards less material on every garment, a saving that amounts to 50c to $10 on materials alone on every gown for yourself!

Second, you follow simple picture-and-word illustrations of just how to put together the little garment you are making. Your needle fairly flies, saving hours of time, and you achieve the professional's own delightful results!

Third, vastly important and infinitely small details of finish are revealed to you. Any little whim which the bloomers, blouse or frock you are making, embodies, is clearly explained. Your finished garment, as smart as those in exclusive children's shops, is as sweet as youth itself!

GO to the Butterick pattern counter. And whether you select a child's style or one for yourself, remember that the Deltor specifies ¼ to 1⅜ yards less than would otherwise be possible—a saving of 50c to $10 on every frock for yourself.

For That French Touch

you can give the children clothes—with the Deltor.

Advice on the upbringing of children, how to run your house and keep within your income. Brilliant fiction.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

How to Use the Patterns

AN apron that practically covers one's dress, like pattern No. 1161, is a most useful thing to have, and every housewife should own at least two. Nothing will take the place of one of these large aprons to slip on when going into the kitchen after one is dressed for the afternoon or evening.

This is a good pattern, the skirt part almost meeting in the back and being kept in place by being buttoned to the fitted straps which are seamed to the apron at the shoulders. Two small lengths of linen tape should have both edges turned in and hemmed to the under side of the apron at each side of the back to sew the button to. It will serve for greater strength, and if one catches the apron in moving about it will be much less apt to tear there.

Ricrac braid makes a strong and attractive finish for all edges. Baste it to the under side so that one of the pointed edges extends, showing well from the right side. Two stitchings will be necessary to hold it in place—one close to the apron edge and the second about one-quarter inch in, so the opposite edge of the braid will be caught.

Unusually large pockets go with the pattern, and they will surely hold all that one will ever need to put in them.

No. 1160 is a cunning design for a little girl. It is shown made of two materials, something plain being used for the waist and a checked material for the skirt and trimmings.

There is a kimono waist with long or short sleeves, and a one piece straight gathered skirt, cut with a tab in the center front that extends above the waist line. The dress opens down the back. Plain and checked gingham or a fine French serge in navy blue, made up with a plaid or checked woolen material, would look well. The collar and cuffs should be lined and the skirt should be finished with a deep hem.

The back opening will have to be finished with care. The material is cut down the middle for the opening and the right side of the opening is finished with a facing, the left side with an extension hem. The seams towards the bottom must be made as narrow as can be to hold. Let the extension piece be about one inch longer than the opening requires, and after both sides are finished baste the opening together for a little ways and stitch twice across just at the bottom for the width of the extension piece. It is necessary to see that you have basted the opening so it exactly meets and doesn't pucker.

No. 1087, while it is a simple design, will nevertheless be appropriate and attractive for a rather dressy dress. While the sleeves are cut kimono fashion, they are seamed their length on the shoulders, which will make for a closer fit there, and buttoning them up as the drawing shows makes a decorative touch that will be quite an addition to the dress.

The dress is a one piece design, being in two pieces—front and back; and the skirt part on each piece extends straight out beyond the waist line; when gathered and brought back there is a becoming fullness over the hips. For size 36 the skirt measures 1⅛ yards at the bottom.

The skirt may be made an even length all around or the side tunic may extend below the dress proper. The latter way gives an impression of being more dressy. If becoming, a brown or taupe shade in one of the lovely crêpes would make up beautifully. The neck and armholes could be finished with a narrow binding of the same or some contrasting shade, and the ends of the tunic and the front of the waist may be embroidered. The dress is left open at the neck end of each shoulder for a short ways and fastened with small snaps, and a narrow sash of ribbon or the dress material is used, having the tying come to the left side of the front.

Sulphur Is Best to Clear Up Ugly, Broken Out Skin

Any breaking out or skin irritation on face, neck or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation that instantly brings ease from the itching, burning and irritation.

Mentho-Sulphur heals eczema right up, leaving the skin clear and smooth. It seldom fails to relieve the torment or disfigurement. A little jar of Mentho-Sulphur may be obtained at any drug store. It is used like cold cream.

Dry Cleaning at Home

By Alma Harding.

This is the twenty-sixth article of a series giving instructions in dry cleaning, fine laundry work, bleaching, and dyeing.

NEW COLORS FOR OLD.

TODAY there are twenty different kinds of powder or soap dyes on the market which go into the clothes to be washed out again the next wash day. They make a fortune for their inventors and, under the guise of ease, a great deal of extra trouble for their users.

The soap and powder dyes are quite all right if you want to tint an article which will not be subjected either to heavy wear, to much exposure, to sunlight, or to the necessity for washing. For coloring chiffon blouses, for dipping feathers or ostrich fans, for tinting corsets, for painting satin slippers, or for many other cases where boiling is difficult or impossible, use boiling dyes.

In the old days dyeing was an undertaking. There had to be huge boilers, which were of little use afterward because they were so marked and stained. The clothes had to boil an hour and the house was permeated with the odor of vinegar and salt and dye boiling. There are on the market now several good dyes which will color cotton goods with five minutes' boiling and silk or wool with fifteen minutes'. They do not stain the hands or the vessel in which the dyes are placed, and, although none of them is absolutely impervious to the fading action of the sun, they give good, reliable colors which usually last as long as the material.

A Dip Makes a New Dress.

In the majority of cases the articles to be dyed are old garments which have lost their color or their freshness, and the thrifty housewife, instead of throwing them away, seeks to make them wearable and attractive. Too, there are often dresses, the fabric of which is excellent, but which have been so long in the closet and so often seen among friends that one feels a certain shame at wearing them again. A dip in a new color makes a new dress and saves you the bill at a professional cleaner's.

Don't be afraid to undertake the work. Follow the directions given on the package faithfully and you will have success.

You probably have in your piece bag remnants of many dresses or the linings of garments which have long been discarded. When you want a lining for a new gown or a sash of a certain color or colored satin collars and cuffs to brighten up a new dress, dye these old materials the required shade and save buying silks and satins at the present high rate.

No matter how small the ribbon to be dyed, or the baby's blanket to be tinted, go at it in the same spirit you do window curtains and faded portieres. In fifteen minutes the kitchen is clear and the material on the clothesline.

Guard Against Shrinkage.

In buying dyes to color already made up garments, it is better to get the type of dye which colors all fabrics; then you do not have to bother about the cotton threads used in the sewing of woolen clothes, etc.

Guarding against shrinkage is somewhat aided by paying close attention to dipping the material in the dissolved dye at as low a temperature as is possible after the thorough dissolving of the dye. This not only does not contract the fibers so sharply as putting them into boiling water, but also makes a more even coloring. If the water is boiling, the color sets in the fibers almost immediately—too soon to avoid spotting and streaking, as it is the constant stirring and lifting of the goods which gives them their best appearance.

On the envelope of the dye you will find directions as to the use of salt and vinegar and rinsing. The latter should always be continued until the water is almost clear.

Process Before Dyeing.

Reference has been made to the bleaching and stripping process which is often necessary before dyeing. Professional cleaners, when they have orders for the light shades, usually find it best to bleach the original color out entirely before attempting the new coloring. This is particularly true of materials which have faded in sun streaks.

It is the one way of being absolutely sure of the results, though dyeing over old colors, even when the result desired is light, may be accomplished. But it is never possible to dye a material lighter than it already is.

In creaming or ecruing window curtains, it is better to boil them first in a caustic solution to make them a pure white, then proceed to their coloring. The result is more satisfactory than adding a cream or saffron to the color when it has become dingy or gray from dust.

Be careful to dye at the same time all the material you wish to match, as it is difficult to get exactly the same mixture twice. Keep the goods well afloat in the water, stirring continually. Do not put a cover on and leave it to boil, as the part of the goods which is above the surface and is affected by the steam will almost surely be streaky.

Press While Damp.

Iron the goods before they are dry. It is well to put an old cover on the ironing board, as the fresh moist dyed cloth is apt to leave a faint stain, no matter how thorough the washing and rinsing.

Velvets should not be put through a wringer nor twisted in the hands. Press as well as you can, and hang perfectly straight until the water has all dripped out. Then steam.

To dye straw hats, make up a mixture of oil paints and gasoline, or dissolve sealing wax in alcohol and paint it on with a small brush. The latter way gives the stiffness which many straw hats need.

To color carpets which have faded, dissolve a package of the color you wish to use in a gallon of boiling water, add a handful of salt and a little vinegar, and keep the water as nearly boiling as possible. Take a flat soft calcimining brush, and paint the liquid on the carpet. The same method may be applied to upholstery, faded chair seats, and sofas.

To dye shoes, satin slippers, feathers; to brighten up fancy ribbon and flower covered boxes; recolor artificial flowers, etc., it is better to use gasoline than water. Buy the ordinary tubes of oil paint in the color you desire, and dissolve in a little gasoline. The slippers and the boxes must not be dipped in the gasoline, but the dye applied with a brush.

Is Marriage a Failure?

Why do so many marriages go wrong? What are the underlying causes of happy marriages? Are there any happy marriages? What is the matter, if anything, with marriage, the institution?

W. L. George, the English novelist, investigated one hundred and fifty marriages. One hundred and sixteen cases he eliminated as unsuccessful; in five cases the husband was unfaithful; in ten it was the wife; the husband disliked the wife in three cases and in seven it was the wife who did the disliking. Only nine marriages, Mr. George says, were "apparently successful." "Marriage," he adds, "is on its trial before a hesitating jury."

Look over the marriages you know yourself. How many are successes; how many are failures? And why?

The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published on the question: Marriage—what do you think of it? Address Marriage Editor, The Sunday Tribune.

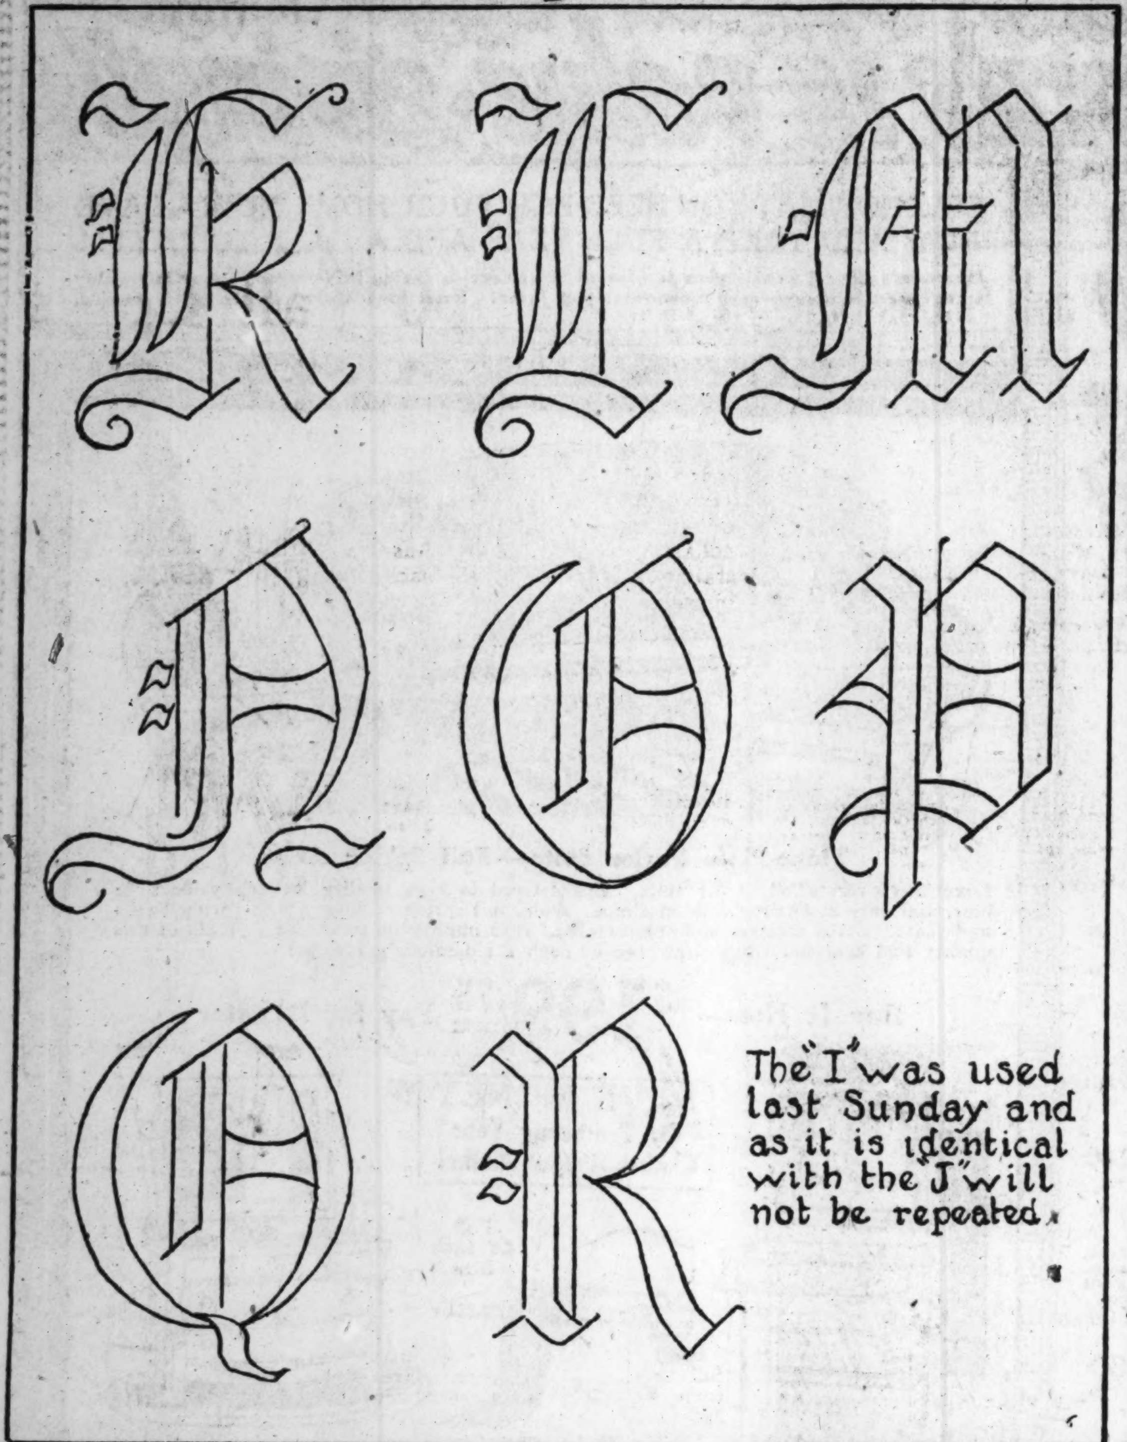
Practical and Fancy Needlework

BY CLOTILDE



The "I" was used last Sunday and as it is identical with the "J" will not be repeated.

OLD ENGLISH INITIALS.

THE Old English is probably the most popular of all letters shown, judging by the frequent requests for it.

An initial, beautifully embroidered, will give an air of distinction to any article. It is work that needs to be perfectly done to look well, and this perfection will only come with practice.

Initial letters should be first outlined in a close running stitch, then the spaces filled in with a chain or other padding stitch. Where a running stitch is used it should be longer on the upper side, and it should always be more heavily padded in the center than towards the edges—thus giving a curved or rounded surface when finished. The padding stitches must all be on the right side, having the stitches that come to the wrong side as small as possible so as to keep the wrong side flat.

The embroidering should be done in a frame, and the stitch is a simple over and over, taken evenly and close together—always running at right angles to the padding and taken as close together as is possible without lapping.

Letters are sometimes outlined with the over and over stitch, and the inclosed spaces filled with the seed stitch, but there is nothing more beautiful than the plain laid embroidery if well done.

The last installment will appear next Sunday.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair of which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Don't Do It.

"Dear Miss Blake: There's a fellow I know for the last four months. We have been going out steady and I care for him very much, but he does not know it. His birthday is coming off in another few weeks. Do you think it proper for me to give him a present? PUZZLED."

Don't spoil your chances with him by making him a present. The right kind of boy would rather a girl of short acquaintance would do anything rather than embarrass him with a gift. Don't do it, Puzzled.

Cool in a Crowd.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am in love with a young man three years my senior. We see a great deal of each other and when alone he is real nice toward me, but when in a crowd he acts kind of cool toward me. He never mentions love to me. What can I do to find out if he loves me? E. A."

That might be self consciousness, you know, E. A. And it may be pure unselfishness. He does not want to give the impression of a monopoly on your affections and thereby spoil other chances for you. And, again, he may feel friendly toward you and still not be in love with you.

Why Bother with Him?

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl 19 years old. I am engaged to a man 29. I am in love with him and I think he loves me, but I am jealous, which causes many unpleasant feelings. He shows his love toward me whenever we are alone, but at dances or in a crowd he acts as though he is afraid friends and other people will think that he really cares. I have been tempted to quit him several times because I don't think he really likes me. He comes to my house every night, but doesn't stay long. I imagine that he goes some place else later. "BETTY."

O, Betty, why bother with him when you feel he does not care for you, and his actions would indicate his interest is not with you. Why not just eliminate him from your life now before he makes you more unhappy?

Mary and Jean were playmates. One day I saw Mary sitting on her front steps and I asked her how she and Jean got along when they played together.

"I can get along with Jean all right, but she can't get along with me," said she.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By Mary Brush Williams.

BELTS MEET THE KNEES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—I have been thinking that perhaps all of us Americans would better hustle round and buy up our French clothes for the next five years to come, because—I have al—the present style could not, by the law of the survival of the most appropriate, "stay in" long with this nation.

Like most all other style prognostications, this theory would appear to be wrong. For whether the French girls look nice in long waisted gowns or not, they are getting the belts still lower.

At a fashion show the other day a French acquaintance interrupted herself to say to me, "There's a belt almost low enough to be becoming to you."

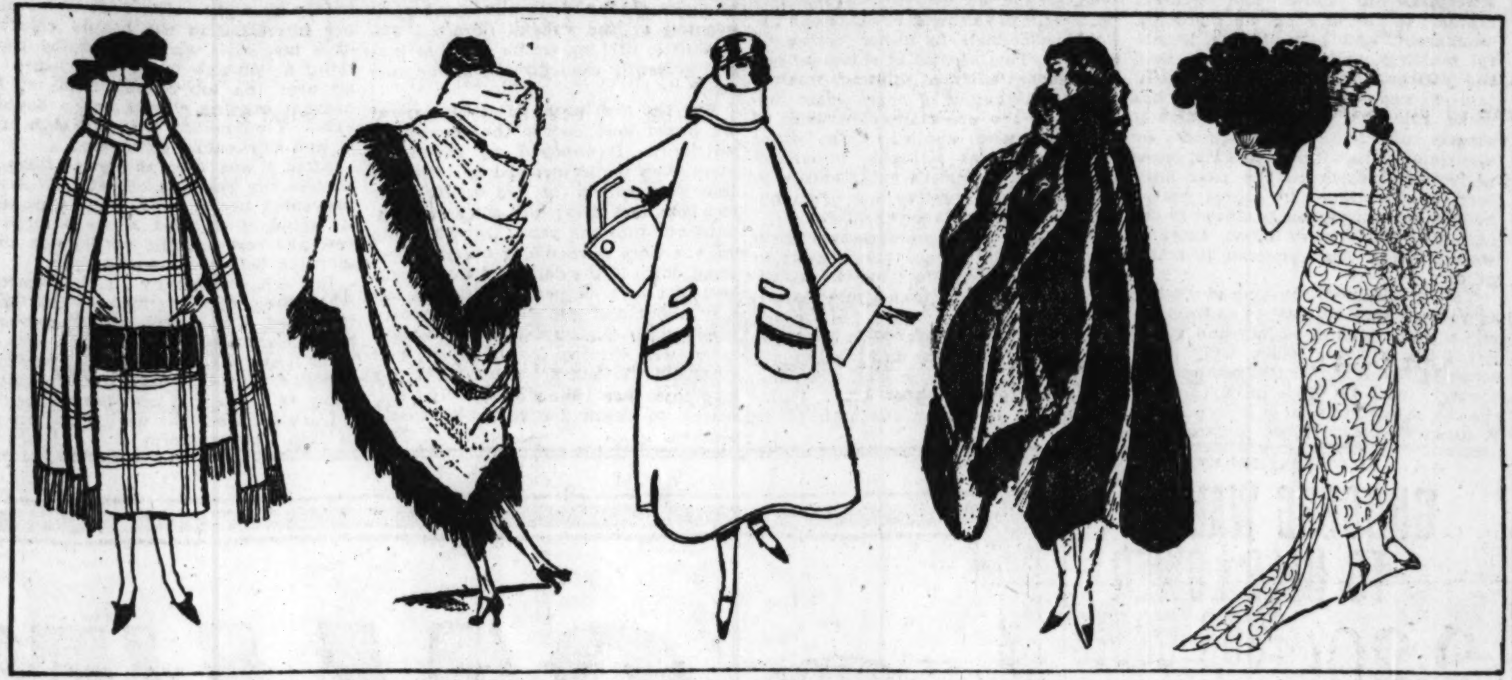
I do not know whether there was any animosity in the remark or not, for the Frenchmen are more or less accredited to like the long lankiness of the Anglo-Saxon silhouette.

Anyway, if it is any comfort to her and her little French sisters, the belt was altogether too low for me. Ceintures are getting pretty well on toward the knees, and I believe they will go lower before they come higher. So don't buy up the present output in the fear of the apron string coming back at present.

The model illustrating this thesis is a complete costume consisting of two pieces, a dress and a cape, made in the popular shawling material, in plaids calculated to attract the eye. The coloring of these is that modest combination of blue and red.

At first it seemed to me that about two-thirds of all present day collections were designed for the country. "Haven't you got anything that could be worn this side Fointainbleau and if possible within the city limits?" I asked of my Callot vendeuse.

"O, madame, they are wearing country things in town now. Didn't you know?"



Illustrating the pillow slip line; dress and cape done in red and blue shawling. | Poiret made this ermine wrap. Monkey fur gives the fringe effect. | This beige wool motor coat fastens in the back. It was designed in Decuilet. | Sealskin striped with kolinsky achieves this circular cape. | A Callot costume of white brocade. Note the cape effect on the shoulders only.

No, I didn't, and I doubt if you did, either. So put on your modest little henna colored Lake Forest outing coat lined with spring green, and come on in to the Blackstone to lunch. You will have the present illustration to support and justify you.

The dress, as you can see, is made in the long pillow slip line dear to all of us—its only departure from that form consisting in the wide patent leather belt circling the area just about the knees. The cape is the fringe bordered circular affair with the high turn over collar, so popular today. A black felt hat accompanies the costume. It is trimmed with a black satin cire bow. The costume is of soft woolen material.

You mustn't get the second offering unless you can always be nonchalant. You must always keep your weight on one foot or the other and have the opposite arm thrust on your hip. If you can observe a few simple rules of this kind, you may with impunity order from this model and whip up what will be a distinctive and practical wrap.

The model is made in ermine, which isn't so useful for everyday wear, but the artist and I were saying what a pretty cape it would make in wool. And if you selected your material with care it would turn out to be one of those useful wraps for everything from semi-evening wear to traveling. You can see that the Spanish shawl effect is prevailing even here, and the high, mufflike collar, that I have spoken of often.

Never before have I seen a combination of ermine and monkey, but it is shown here, the monkey more successfully than any other fur giving the effect of fringe, which is needed to carry out the idea of the shawl. The material, apart from the collar, is in the form of a huge square. Poiret made this wrap.

It's the style to have your clothes fastened on with as little security as possible. I often think of those old contraptions with their linings and their counter linings and their million hooks securing everything. I have a dress that has two pressions, one on either shoulder, and nothing else until you reach the waistline, and those two pressions are not constructionally perfect. Under excitement they burst open—and usually friends and onlookers are kind enough to take the situation as a joke.

The accompanying coat cannot expose you to such danger as this dress, but it fastens with exactly one button, which is at the nape of the neck in the back. In other respects, the front is more interesting, and for that reason I had it drawn. The pockets are the other feature. There are four of them—two small, like waistcoat change pockets, and two large, for thrusting your hands into. The other garnishment is in the sleeves and consists of wide cuffs with one button at the edge as trimming. It is a motor coat in beige wool by Doeuillet.

You have heard about skirts getting longer in Paris. Coats do not seem to be subject to the same law. Of course, when the manikins present them, they wear nought save a silk slip underneath. They, therefore, do not meet the problem of how it looks to see a skirt extending a mile or so below the hem of the coat. The vendeuses assure me, however, that this will be accepted as a good line, although I do not think art would ever justify it. But our concern is with fashion, which is something quite apart from art, and it more than sanctions—it urges that coats be short.

The model shows the correct length, and it also shows the fashionable irregular line round what used to be called the hem of the garment. And at the same time it is in the circular, full sweeping outline of the day. The material is loutre, or what we all call sealskin, although it isn't, and it is striped longitudinally with kolinsky, dyed dark brown—almost black.

The last model shows a line of Callot and Callot alone, although I think Madeleine & Madeleine have gone in for it somewhat this season. A bodice on the slant and without a waistline—indeed, the material of it ending in a train—is very much an inspiration of the moment and the story of this frock. It also carries with it the popular cape effect of the day.

In the model it goes only over one shoulder, and this is but a single instance of the present vagaries in capes. It is of silk lace, and looks like a finely knitted shawl. The bodies on the other side is held on by a band of rhinestones, and to it the train is attached. The costume is of white brocade.

Escort to a Broom.

I work in a bank and live with my sister. One of the janitors at the bank has a reputation for buying fine brooms, and when the employés need an article of that kind they get it through him. One day I recalled that we needed a new broom at home, and had the janitor get me one. When I started home with it that evening I didn't give it much thought until I got a block or two from the bank. Then it seemed to me every person on the street was looking at me and the broom. I realized then that even the wrapping paper didn't disguise the article. It seemed as if I met every friend and acquaintance I have in Chicago. My real troubles began when I got aboard the train and the wrapping on the broom came loose. Of course, I was blushing, and every one in the car seemed to be smiling. I would have tossed the broom out of the window, but that only would have made matters worse, so I stuck it out. When I reached my station I registered a solemn pledge, "never again!"

Lost and Found.

I am a cashier in a large store. All packages found are brought to my desk. One day recently a nice box of candy was found. I put it aside for a time, but later, growing hungry, I thought I'd have a bit of candy; it looked so tempting, and I began to think no one was going to call for it. I was just helping myself to a piece when I glanced up and saw a woman watching me.

She smiled, and said: "Was there a box left here about an hour ago?"

I blushed and said: "Here it is. I guess it's candy."

She took it, and went out without another word.

Penniless.

In the good old days when $1 would purchase the best matinee seat and five cents would pay carfare, I hurried off to the matinee one Wednesday and found I had only $1.10 in my bag.

After paying carfare and buying my ticket, it left me 5 cents to get home.

Imagine my horror when that precious nickel rolled down under the seat and I could not find it. I looked in vain. I was forced to ask the man at the ticket office for carfare home. I know you will smile. So did he.

Trials of the Stout.

I am stout, and anxious to reduce. My boss was out one afternoon and I decided to take advantage of his absence and take some needed exercise.

Well, I hopped on one foot, then on the other; touched the floor without bending my knees; turned—to find two dignified men watching me.

They were kind enough to act as though it was all quite matter of fact. I could scarcely speak, I was so embarrassed.

I made a firm resolve to do my reducing at home hereafter.

Even Hubby Laughed.

My husband and I were out for a drive. I saw a big black leather purse right in the middle of the street. It so happened no cars were behind us for about twenty yards, and I cried: "Stop and let me get that purse."

Well, I got out and started to run back. Five or six cars came by me and I dodged through. I was running, so I'd get there before any one beat me. Just as I stooped to pick up the purse it slowly, gently moved from just under my hands. I stood rooted to the spot. Hearing laughing and shouting, I turned to go back to the car. It seemed I'd never make it, and I never saw so many folks around. They all laughed, while the boys who had the purse on a string jumped up and laughed and shouted at me.

That was the longest twenty yards I ever walked—back to where the machine stood with my husband—laughing just like the others.

Tactful.

I was thoroughly absorbed in teaching an English class when a devoted little girl in the front seat scribbled a note and handed it to me. It read: "Miss H: The end of your switch is sticking straight up."

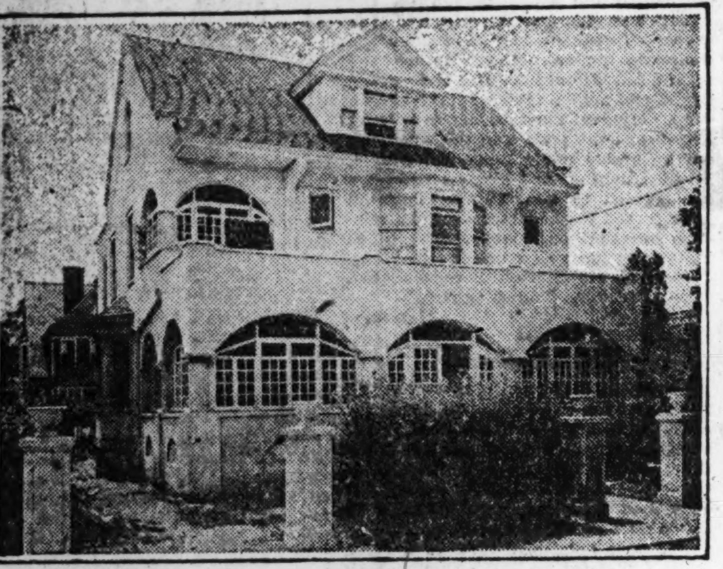
Old Homes for New by the Application of Stucco



Courtesy of U. S. Materials Co.

By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

THERE'S a bit of sorcery, reminiscent of the fantastic fairy tale, in the results achieved nowadays in house rejuvenation. The spectacle of the fairy godmother transforming Cinderella's pumpkin into a gorgeous coach through the magic of a bewitching wand loses something back into the realm of the commonplace—after we have witnessed the amazing metamorphosis that takes place in dilapidated buildings when the up-to-date modernizer of homes wields his enchanted trowel.

Homes which have long outgrown their attractiveness, buildings rapidly deteriorating into the class of hasbeens—unkempt, weather worn relics of better days—blossom forth, almost overnight, from an existence of drab uncouthness, not unlike the varicolored butterfly emerging from its ugly cocoon.

This practice of exchanging old homes for new has been made possible largely through the perfecting of the exterior wall covering. From an inferior, commonplace product, prone to crumble and crack, and notoriously susceptible to stains and weather marks, to a finished waterproofed, crackproof, and permanently beautiful building material—such has been the progress of the exterior wall coating. Stucco—high class stucco— has come into its own. The unsightly streaks and discolorations caused by absorption from window sills and other projections, which in the past have been so prevalent in stucco coated houses, are conspicuously absent in the high grade material of today. Integral waterproofing has rendered it stainproof.

The exterior wall covering of quality is in every way as durable as brick or stone; offers greater beauty and variety to its finishes, tones, and color schemes, and is by far less costly. Old property may be modernized through the use of this material at a surprisingly moderate cost. House rejuvenation now may be effected for an amount not in excess of two seasons' paint bills.

It was only recently that one of the greatest difficulties in the use of exterior wall coatings was overcome. Until 1921 it had been necessary that all magnesite wall coverings be delivered to the builder in two separate parts—the dry cement in sacks and the liquid chemicals in either drums or barrels. This method of shipment left the responsibility of diluting, mixing, and proportioning of complicated materials to the uncertain experience of the men who applied it—in other words, intrusted a highly important part of the material's manufacture to the sometimes careless and often unfamiliar hands of labor chemists.

According to an announcement given out a few months ago, this difficulty in marketing the product has been definitely overcome. Magnesite stucco is now being shipped to the builder dry and complete in a sack. This improved method of shipment is said to eliminate the element of chance and to insure the absolute success of every building project on which the material is used.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE.

This letter was sent to me in fun and to see if I would "fall for it" by a member of the A. E. F. who did find the letters and photo belonging to my friend. I didn't "fall for it"—it's a bit too romantic to be true—but I replied—the humor of the thing pleased me enough to warrant a reply—and the letters that followed were addressed to "our dear friend" and signed by fourteen sergeants. It was during that dull period after the armistice was signed when all our boys found time their worst enemy, inasmuch as they had nothing to do, and this unusual correspondence between the fourteen sergeants and me, I believe, helped alleviate their feeling of unrest. They pleaded guilty to having concocted a "mess of slash and mush," and added "we wish to throw ourselves on the leniencey of the court (or into her arms) and hope that our sentence will not be more than a week's K. P."

DEAREST HESTER: When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one man to correspond with the idol of another man's dreams, then it behooves him to take advantage of the opportunity offered him by kind fortune.

The fact that Corporal North is now on furlough gives me this opportunity to make an attempt to steal from him the original of the photo which I have ofen seen in his possession.

It was early in the campaign of the seige of Durnes that I first caught a stolen glimpse of his much coveted picture. I was immediately attracted by those beautiful brown eyes which shown out from the picture like pools of liquid fire; they seemed to have a message for me which I could not then interpret. Time passed, and during the long weary night watches those eyes seemed to haunt me. I tried hard to forget them. Even as the raging lion paces his cage, striving to break the bars which hold him from the freedom of his natural haunts, so have I, during the solitude of those lonely nights with nothing but the twinkling stars, blinking solemnly above me, and the wind sighing mournfully through the pine trees, striven to escape from the ever tightening tentacles of that great octopus—love.

During this time North was sent on a mission which took him away from the battery, and he left some of his personal effects with me for safekeeping. During his absence we were forced to change our position under a heavy enemy bombardment, and in the rushing excitement of moving I managed to preserve a portion of his belongings, and upon looking them over I discovered your photograph to be among some correspondence. I could not resist the temptation; my great opportunity had come. I now came into possession of the photo which had so long haunted me. How my eyes feasted upon it!

Upon North's return he found that apparently all his belongings had been lost in the move, ant thus I, like a villain, retained your photo. Alas, I could not keep the picture, for each time I gaved upon those sparkling orbs of innocence they seemed to pierce my soul and say: "Be your own true self, and follow the dictates of your conscience"—and consicence drummed into my mind, "Be square with your buddie." I was. I returned the picture.

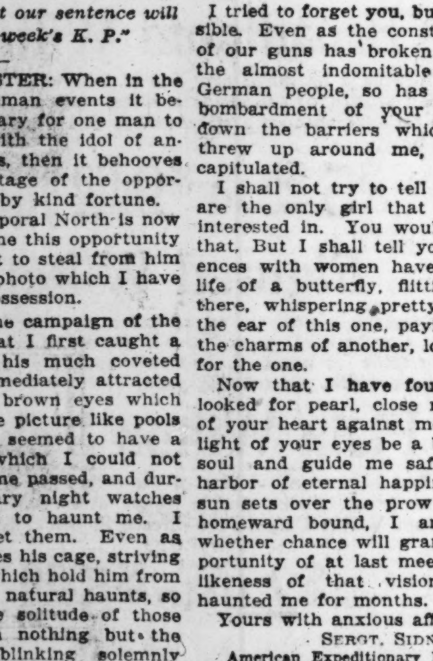
I tried to forget you, but it is impossible. Even as the constant pounding of our guns has broken the spirit of the almost indomitable will of the German people, so has the constant bombardment of your eyes broken down the barriers which conscience threw up around me, and he has capitulated.

I shall not try to tell you that you are the only girl that I have been interested in. You would not believe that, But I shall tell you my experiences with women have been as the life of a butterfly, flitting here and there, whispering pretty nothings in the ear of this one, paying tribute to the charms of another, looking always for the one.

Now that I have found you, long looked for pearl, close not the doors of your heart against me, but let the light of your eyes be a beacon to my soul and guide me safely into that harbor of eternal happiness. As the sun sets over the prow of our ship, homeward bound, I am wondering whether chance will grant me the opportunity of at last meeting the true likeness of that vision which has haunted me for months.

Yours with anxious affection,

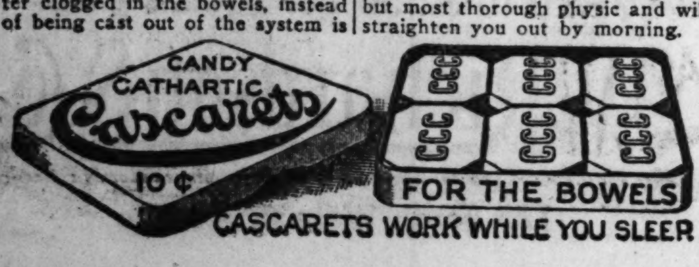
SERGT. SIDNEY KIRK,
American Expeditionary Force, France.



You're Bilious, Headachy, Constipated!

Clean your liver and bowels!

Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, or sour, gassy stomach—always trace this to torpid liver and constipation. Poisonous matter clogged in the bowels, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, dizzy, sickening headache. A Cascaret tonight will give your liver and bowels a gentle but most thorough physic and will straighten you out by morning.



CASCARETS WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

Does He / Does She SNORE?

What the Moon Revealed.

A friend and I roomed in a private home while in college, and one night the landlady told us she was taking in another student. He was a very studious chap and usually spent each evening at the college library. We saw little of him, as he came in late and evidently went directly to his own room.

But the first night after his arrical we heard loud snores that continued all night. It annoyed my roommate more than it did me, and he proposed that we go down the hall to the other bedroom and carry the cot and occupant out into the yard. So when the sounds were particularly annoying we crept down in the dark and carried out both cot and sleeper. We knew our way about and got out into the yard nicely with our burden, but a bright moon was shining out of doors, and what did we look down upon but our landlady's face! We stole quietly back, scared to death for fear she would awaken.

M. C. R.

She Tried Tact.

A rich aunt, whom I did not wish to offend, was visiting me at a time when I was crowded for sleeping space, so we were obliged to sleep together. She snored so that she kept me awake nearly all night. The next day I got her interested in the beauty column of a magazine which suggested that tying a bandage under the chin and up over the top of the head would prevent sagging cheeks and a double chin. I suggested that we both try it, and she readily acquiesced.

After I was sure she was asleep I slipped the bandage off, and as hers prevented her snoring, as I expected it would, I enjoyed a good night's rest and resumed the bandage in the morning before she was awake.

But what was my astonishment when she coolly informed me that she had read the device would prevent snoring and tried it, thinking to get a little sleep. She added that it was ineffective, as I had snored as continuously as before and kept her awake.

I arranged so that we did not have to sleep together again.

GROCERS WANT TO HELP LOWER FOOD COSTS

Not to Blame for H.C.L.

The idea that the rank and file of grocers throughout the country are boosting prices for the sake of realizing exorbitant profits is absolutely false.

Retail prices have gone up because the retailer has been compelled to put them up. The grocer has to pay more for his goods, more for rent, more for clerks' salaries; consequently, must charge more.

Shortage of raw materials, of productive labor and a demand that has far outstripped production are the direct causes of present-day prices. As a rule, the grocer is transacting business on the same percentage of profit as in the days of low selling prices.

Grocers depend upon you for a livelihood. They know just as you know that to cheat in any way, shape or form, would kill their trade outright. Common sense says that no intelligent grocer will attempt to "kite" prices beyond legitimate profits. He can't afford to.

BUSINESS NOT A BED OF ROSES

For Man Behind Counter

Because of a scant supply the grocer often has serious trouble in procuring merchandise. He has to stand the sharp cut of complaints from buyers because of high costs. He all too frequently is blamed, when absolutely blameless. And is not, on a whole, making a wider margin of net profit than he did when conditions were normal, trade better satisfied and business transactions decidedly more pleasant.

The grocer is your servant. He is in business to serve your requirements. He doesn't make you a slave to high costs. He is in exactly the same boat you are in. He sells goods you want and ask for. He must meet your demands or get out of business. He has no choice in the matter. He can't go contrary to your wishes.

The consumer can do more towards restoring prices to normal levels than the grocer can. This can be accomplished with positive certainty by buying only food products of sound value and proven economy. Careless buying and rank extravagance are unquestionably vital factors in maintenance of high costs.

When a consumer forces a grocer to sell a sixty-five-cent article where a thirty-five-cent article would answer the purpose equally well he is encouraging production of high priced goods of short value and hampering the manufacture of food products of sound value and fair prices. On the other hand, when the consumer insists on goods of inferior worth he is inviting inevitable waste that stands for loss rather than economy. In such occurrences the consumer, not the grocer, is at fault. For, remember, the grocer must give you what you want despite the fact that he would rather supply your requirements with goods of sterling value at a minimum cost.

FOOD PRODUCTS

Of Utmost Purity and Food Value

If you will but consult your grocer regarding the true values of different grades of goods, you most assuredly will increase the purchasing power of your dollars and strike straight at one of the main roots of high costs by weeding out extravagance.

What the buyer demands more than any other one thing determines the market price of commodities of all sorts. If you demand full-value foods, insist upon having them, you will get them and at legitimate prices. Persistent demand for top-price goods of questionable value will then be sharply curtailed and production stimulated in lines of maximum merit. And with this increased production will come lower costs, just as sure as day follows night.

The solution of the problem so far as the consumer is concerned is simply this: select only proudcts of recognized value, sold at lowest prices permissible under present conditions—eliminate waste—don't encourage the production of price-heavy products—co-operate with your grocer—don't lose sight of the fact that he must cater to your wishes. Your demand for the right type of goods is the best means at your command to straighten out topsy-turvy conditions which are a burden to the conscientious manufacturer, the square-dealing grocer and the consumer who are putting forth every effort under the sun to reduce the high cost of production, high cost of merchandising and high cost of living.

Mr. John A. Ulman, President of the National Retail Grocers' Association of the United States, an eminent authority on food values and intimately acquainted with manufacturing and marketing conditions, urges close co-operation between retailer and consumer and careful discrimination in the selection of merchandise—as a means of restoring prices to normal and promoting the distribution of the best grade of goods.

HALLOWEEN FAL-LALLS AND FARE.

THE word fal-lalls is in good repute to mean any ornaments, frippery, and gewgaws. Halloween today is a time for gay ornaments and fripperies. The old grewsome effects required old fashioned imaginations, yet a cotton glove stuffed with flour seems grewsome enough today to one blindfolded, and is more or less appropriately called "dead fingers." I say, away with such things and their sort!

Some pumpkins, plenty of apples and nuts and cider, cabbage stalks, dead leaves, and candles are enough for a celebration. An open fire is desirable, and a great deal of orange and black paper may be used; but these are not really gay, so why waste the money or anything more than a small amount on them? Oranges and carrots, chocolate and spices, cooky dough and pie crust, are some of the other materials that may be used as accessories.

Dead Leaves for Decoration.

The dead leaves are lovely for decoration and for their odor and rustle. A path may be made of them for candle bearers. Dead leaves rustling in the dark around one's feet as one peers into the gloom with a candle are eerie enough in frosty weather for anybody of imagination. At the end of the walk of dead leaves may be fastened the cabbage stalks to pull. The straight stalk affects to tell the girl or the boy that the future mate will be handsome or comely, while the crooked one fills the mind with apprehension. Perhaps the cautious hostess will see that all or nearly all the stalks are fairly straight.

Of course, a real garden and bona fide cabbage stalks are best for that dark excursion. Other refuse of the garden has had its meaning for the seekers after knowledge of the future. The apple tree was circled with the singing of rhymes, and folk lore has other riddling words for other rites of the night when goblins scream and witches from the housetops beam.

Sweets and Favors.

The household magazines for years have given Halloween suggestions and lore. There is such a wealth of this material that any one who would entertain for that evening has but to go to it for suggestions. Bound volumes of such magazines are in all our libraries.

For those who would rather spend a little money than either time or effort there is more and more of help every year. The candy makers this year have done a great deal for the Halloween celebrants, and they did it early. By the last of September Halloween sweets and favors were on t counters of the stores which specialize in such things. The forehanded undoubtedly purchased these and kept them in hiding as people do Christmas presents.

There was a profusion, even a confusion, of candies in orange and black. There were orange gumdrops, orange jelly beans, orange buttercups, and chips and hard candies. And there were black (licorice) gumdrops and jelly beans and buttons and all possible devices that were ever seen in black candies, including black babies. There were lovely and dainty opera sticks in both orange and black, tied often with ribbon for the center of some of the endless arrangement of these things in Halloween candy boxes—witch and black cat decorations on them—and ultimately tied with wonderful pompons of black baby ribbon.

The Devil Who Was a Failure.

The favors at their first appearance were quite as endless in variety as the candies, and comparatively inexpensive. The themes in these were the devil, the witch, and the Jack o' Lantern, and some were very funny. There was a devil with a squeak who had just sprouted horns of blue, and bloomers and eyeballs of the same shade—his eyes were largely ball—and a blouse of green. There were black trimmings on him, but as a traditional devil he was a failure. Perhaps the reason for this was explained by the stamp on his wooden back, "Made in Japan." When Scotch ideas get translated into Japanese there is represented a real predicament.

Licorice candy can be used in many ways for decorating the table, and dishes. I thought I would try making a sort of witchy drink by sweetening a lemonade with it. I can't say that I consider licorice lemonade a great success, unless you take it hot, and then it is not at all bad. I tried out more than half a dozen sorts of licorice candy as a sweetener for a mild lemonade, and some gave a black shaded drink, but others were of an olive green.

A Licorice Test.

Anybody having a prejudice against the candies sold in some school stores, especially the hideously unwholesome stuff called "pickles," dark green, insidiously bad stuff, "five for a penny," will get some interesting information on what licorice drops often are by soaking them in cold water. I first tried both boiling water and cold, and the boiling mixture told me nothing except about the coloring power of the candy. That with cold water was in one case covered with strings of raw crude gelatin, which the hot water had dissolved.

We may turn now to the cool and always delicious apple—that is, the dessert or eating apple. There is no end of things we may do with the apple. I noted one plan this year, in the Halloween articles, for giving guests a knife, coffee beans, red pepper, and so forth, directing them to make faces on pieces of apples. With the little crab apples one might make fascinating heads to fasten on sticks, real baubles.

"Black Caps."

By the way, it is difficult to bake a sweet apple without blackening the skin. It does not burst in baking as does the sour apple, and might be served on a stick with marshmallow decorations. It is mentioned as suitable fare for a Halloween party because baked sweet apples used to be called "black caps."

Roasting Ceremonies.

Of course there were apple as well as nut roasting ceremonies at this festival of old, and some of them were expressive of thankfulness for the bounty of the apple. We are getting back to it, or perhaps love and admiration for the apple has never been lost. At any rate, one of the October magazines has two pages extolling this fruit as "food and medicine for man," while, in days before print was common, they "girdled the tree with singing" on All Hallow's eve in order that it might have a bountiful crop the next year. The modern talks about it as a "vehicle for vitamines," as an aperient—a mild one—as a "fine food insurance" in the diet daily. The old saw said the same thing—"An apple a day keeps the doctor away."

Witch Salad.

The yolks of hard boiled eggs mashed with mustard and mayonnaise dressing may be used for the Halloween salad or its garnish for yolks so dressed have been called deviled. A bit of cayenne, of course, makes for devilment in foods.

Deviled Meat.

Any cold meat may be heated up in a sharp sauce of horseradish, mustard, and cayenne in the chafing dish and be called deviled, or it may simply be heated up in butter with those seasonings after being dipped in a French dressing.

Garnished Squash.

Plain mashed squash may be pressed into ramekins or paper cups and while kept warm may be decorated with faces. Or it may be served in one round dish thus decorated with cooked red pepper, white thin pieces of cabbage stem, or what you will. If you want to spend the time and thought or imagination, there is no end of devices to be worked out in garnishing Halloween dinner plates. The magazines have pictures often in color, representing the latest and freshest ideas of real artists, which you may use as a pattern.

Halloween Cookies.

Quite realistic bats—the dark or devil bird—and cats and witch caps may be made from this ginger cooky dough: One-fourth cup of butter, one-fourth cup of dark molasses, one-eighth teaspoon of allspice, one-fourth teaspoon each of cinnamon and nutmeg, one-half teaspoon of ginger, one-fourth teaspoon of soda dissolved in a teaspoon of warm water, one teaspoon of baking powder, one and one-fourth cups of flour. Sifted graham or white flour may be used.

Cream the butter and molasses together and add the spices; sift in the flour a little at a time, after sifting the baking powder with it, and finally add the soda. If chilled by leaving it in the ice box for half an hour, covered, the dough will roll out better. With the magic cover, for pin and board, this rolling is easy.

Nice idea to use it for Halloween cookies and pie crust, eh? But it is worth while the year around.

Witch's Soup.

Black bean soup—Four cups of water to one cup of beans—with seasonings of onion, carrot, and celery, particularly the celery, makes a suitable soup for the occasion, garnished with grated carrot or cooked slices of carrot. Bean cookery is a big subject. It is easy to cook beans when you learn how, but most people cook them without learning how to get supremely good effects. Of course, any soup may be garnished or served with thin slices of bread toasted dark and cut out in cunning forms to suit the occasion.

Chocolate Icings.

All sorts of dark effects may be secured with chocolate icings. Simple little cup cakes may be covered, and faces made with small white candies or bits of marshmallow before the icing hardens. In sugar famine days I got good effects with this: Three ounces of chocolate, one-half cup of milk to cook it up in, one cup of corn sirup. Cook for twenty minutes and then pour it gently into two stiffly beaten egg whites.

HOW TO USE THE TELEPHONE.

IN almost every office the telephone is such an important factor in transacting business that especial care should be given by every one using this means of communication to the manner of receiving and transmitting messages. A girl's efficiency in taking or sending messages over the telephone may easily be the means of her advancement.

The other day I came across a card of instructions on telephone service which a large corporation had printed for the attention of its employés. I am quoting it below, as I think it contains a number of good suggestions on telephone service that might be adopted by any office worker to good advantage.

"In answering the telephone the switchboard operator should answer giving the name of the firm and the person receiving the call should always give the name of the department first, and then the name—as, for example: 'Credit Department, Jones speaking.' This saves time, for if you say, 'Hello,' the other party has to ask: 'Is this Mr. Jones?' And then you must reply: 'Yes, this is he,' before the conversation can get started.

"If you are not the party wanted, say: 'Hold the wire, please, and I'll call him.' Don't require the other party to wait without knowing what is going on.

"If the party wanted is out, ascertain quickly

"[a] Where he is.

"[b] If in the building, whether he can be reached by telephone.

"[c] If outside, or out of reach by telephone, when he will likely return.

"If the call is transferred, stay on the wire until you are sure the desired connection is established.

"If the person wanted cannot be reached, tell the caller he is out and will return at such and such a time. Then ask whether you can take a message, and if not, whether you shall have the party telephone the caller when he comes in.

"Put the tone of 'How can I serve you?' into your voice, and not the tone of 'Now, what do you want?'

"Listen carefully—concentrate your attention on that call—so that the party will not have to repeat. If you can't understand him use a courteous phrase in asking him to repeat, such as: 'I'm sorry, but I didn't get that—would you mind repeating it?'

"Don't start 'bawling out' central if anything goes wrong. The other party may hear you, and he will immediately size you up as unmannerly. If some one else gets on the wire don't yell, 'Get off the wire!' Signal your operator and ask her to set things right.

"In signaling our operator, move the hook up and down slowly and gently. She is not only more apt to see this signal (a rapid movement may make no signal at all), but it is less likely to hurt the ears of the caller or operator.

"In all cases where calls are made for which the telephone company charges a toll employés are required to give the switchboard operator the necessary information, such as the number and party to be called, also as to whether the call is business or personal, so that the operator may make a record of the call. No toll calls should be made direct by the party calling."

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

BACK IN FRONTIER DAYS.

I AM going to tell you one of the most pathetic little love stories that I have ever heard; one that dates back to the early frontier days of Missouri. It is the story of a girl who remained true to her first and only love in spite of a blood feud between her family and that of her lover. I will use the names of Rogers and Williams because I do not wish to expose either of the families or open up old wounds.

I have always known that an uncle of mine had murdered a man and that a girl was connected with it in some way. It was in the year of 1870, but as my grandparents did not wish to discuss it, I never knew any more of the details of the murder. I did not wish to know more, because I am a firm believer in the old saying, "Let the dead bury its dead." Nevertheless my father, who was not living at the time of the murder, received a letter less than a week ago from an old resident of the frontier town near where the murder had taken place, who told the story in every detail.

According to his tale, which I have every reason to believe is true, this uncle—whom neither I nor my father have ever seen—was a wild and careless youth such as many of that new country were. I shall call him John Rogers. He was much in love with a girl whom I shall call Mary Williams. In spite of the fact that her family opposed the match, they went together for many years.

They must have intended to marry, for her brother said that if John Rogers was ever seen again with his sister he would shoot him on sight. John Rogers continued to meet the sister, however, but armed himself for a fight.

Thus the two young men always rode armed with heavy six shooters and waited for each other. Finally they met one night on a lonely road just outside of the town. Both drew guns, and there followed a fight on horseback in which my uncle shot his sweetheart's brother. He then rode to town and surrendered himself to the sheriff. Before morning the Williams gang, men, horses, and guns, had answered the blood call and prepared to take the law into their own hands. Likewise the Rogers gang was coming to defend one of their number.

To avert unnecessary bloodshed my grandfather had the boy spirited away and taken to the state prison at Jefferson City. Before legal action could be taken he died of pneumonia in the prison.

Where Mary Williams went or what may have happened to her I probably never would have known had it not been for the letter my father received. At the age of 68 she is teaching a school in a little town in Missouri. And the old friend tells us she has remained true to her first and only love. She is living in the days of fifty years ago.

Varied Activities of Women

There are more than 110,000 Girl Scouts in the United States.

New York has more illiterate women than any other state in the union.

Indications point to a new high record for marriages in the United States this year, the number probably going as high as 1,500,000 by Dec. 31.

Queen Marie of Roumania is a keen business woman and has taken upon her shoulders the responsibility of rebuilding the industry in her country.

Quite a sensation was created at the spring exhibition at the British Royal academy when Miss Eileen Soper, aged 15 years, exhibited two etchings of children that were accepted before the judges were aware of her age. She has never been to a real art class.

That housewives are becoming more careful is indicated from the reports of numerous cities showing that garbage collections have fallen off from 10 to 25 per cent since the war.

Compared with that of a man the average strength of a woman is as 67 to 100.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

WE WILL NEVER SACRIFICE QUALITY FOR DESIGN

When we select our Home-needs quality is given first consideration—then design—then price—for, if the cabinet-work and finish are not of that standard that assures satisfactory service the design surely is not of importance and the price means nothing.

A good value is not determined by price alone. It is the combination of quality, design and price.

Being, Truly—the home of Home outfits, it is necessary that our displays consist of a well graded stock—in all the most popular designs—in oak, mahogany or walnut, and ranging in price from the inexpensive to the most pretentious pieces.

To convince you of the magnitude of our displays and the excellence of our Home-needs we earnestly invite your inspection and encourage comparison.

And if we are successful in selling you the Home-needs you require we will suggest your opening an EXTENDED ACCOUNT, which offers you the benefits of paying for your purchase by monthly remittances in convenient amounts—extending your account over any satisfactory period. No interest is charged.

WHAT JAPAN THINKS, a group of papers on present problems, by thirteen Japanese statesmen, soldiers, editors, and professors; edited by K. K. Kawakami: small 8 vo, pp. 237. The Macmillan company, New York.

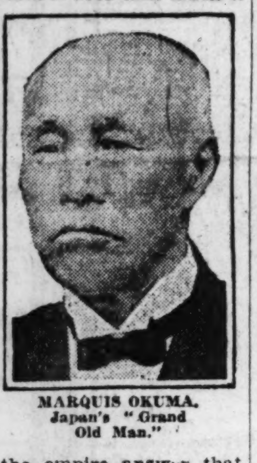
When I was in the primary school we were taught that the missionaries were here to take Japan for the west. In a song that was sung by the children it was said that even if there was such a thing as international law it amounted to nothing. The thing that counted was strength, and the policy was to get the best of those with whom Japan was coming into contact from without. . . . When you consider the men who occupy actual places of power today, you find them men who were educated at the time when militarism was at its height. Their minds were formed in the groove of that time. Their whole outlook on life was formed along those lines.

SAKUZO YOSHINO, Political Economist.
(In "What Japan Thinks," p. 82.)

By Eye Witness.

THIS is a very important and absorbing book. Some it will affright, some exasperate even to fury, some instruct. All it will deeply interest.

To those who have the patience to think beyond the terms of the passing day and the good will to grant a courteous hearing—no more than that—to the ideals of a distant and alien culture it will give pause. If amid the angry bustling of a contentious world it does that much it will do great good.



MARQUIS OKUMA.
Japan's "Grand Old Man."

It is a politico-racial document, and as such it will impress many as an ingenious and many as a diabolical book of propaganda. As all politico racial documents, unless they be centuries old, can hardly, in effect, be anything but propaganda, there seems to be no occasion for immediate panic or wrath in dealing with this volume. Potentially it may be a powder magazine; objectively it is a comfortable, well printed book in covers of sedate henna.

What does Japan think about itself in relation to itself and to the rest of mankind?

In "What Japan Thinks" thirteen representative men of the empire answer that question. With two or three notable exceptions, their names would mean little to any occidental readers save missionaries, diplomats, and other specialists in oriental affairs.

The status of the thirteen in the world, their vocations, the work in which they have made conspicuous and honored names will provide a better identification of them for the purposes of this review, the intention of which is to describe "What Japan Thinks" rather than to analyze it.

The thirteen, then, include:

A prime minister,
An admiral,
A jurist,
A political economist,
A theologian,
A physician and statesman,
A mathematician,
An editor,
A professor,
A statesman and journalist,
Two publicists.

Those Men of Many Contacts.

And yet that list does not adequately represent the many-sidedness of this book and of the contributors to it. You will find that the jurist is also a professor, one of the journalists a historian who had an important share in the preparation of a monumental work, the prime minister also a journalist, the political economist also a teacher, the admiral also a professor. And so on. Many-sided men.

Another list will tellingly indicate the momentousness of these men and of the brochures here assembled. To supplement "What Japan Thinks" with a volume of similar drift entitled "What America Thinks" you would have to summon for the preparation of such a book such men as:

Secretary Hughes,
Secretary Hoover,
President W. D. Scott,
President Kinley,
Bishop Fallows,
Admiral Mayo or Admiral Sims,
William Howard Taft,
President Harding,
Mr. Brisbane,
Mr. Ochs,
Cyrus Curtis,
Senator Johnson,
Leonard Wood,
Nicholas Murray Butler.

The first and, from the point of view of our good, the most needed service the thirteen Japanese perform is to blow off the map of the world the tradition still lingering in some otherwise enlightened and receptive minds that the Japanese is the little brown brother, to be kindly but firmly talked down to. He is not that now—if he ever was.

Yamagata the editor, Fujisawa the mathematician, Uyesugi the lawyer, Ozaki the statesman, Yoshino the political economist, Sato the admiral, Satoh the publicist, Hara the premier, Anesaki the theologian, Marquis Okuma the statesman and "grand old man" of Japan, Baron Goto the physician and administrator, and Zumoto the editor are not little brown brothers to be kindly talked down to. They are singularly clear-headed, facile, independent thinkers, betraying no slavish agreement with each other, often haughty, sometimes—but with a suavity that would be the despair of less finished controversialists—insolent. In the present translation of their views by their compatriot, Mr. Kawakami, their style is taut and strong. That it was less so in their native tongue does not seem likely. There is no oriental luxuriance of diction. There is none of the beautiful vaporing which often distinguishes and sometimes disfigures the style of oriental teachers. They deprecate phrases which say much but which accomplish little. They brush aside much forecast and speculation with one phrase, and it is:

"Were we allowed to indulge in the silly habit of prophesying."

"I Know What I Want When I Want It."

They never leave the reader in doubt as to what they mean, and they themselves seem never in doubt as to what they want. That last, especially, is the sobering

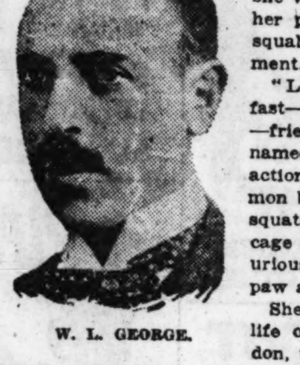
TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

By Fanny Butcher.

W. L. GEORGE has scattered more roses over the path that leads—in Shakespeare—to the everlasting bonfire. He has snapped his fingers in the face of the tradition of the wages of sin being death. He has written a book which, according to all the standards of morality, conventional, literary, economic, is wholly immoral.



W. L. GEORGE.

Ursula Trent is the name of his new heroine, who, theoretically, writes the story of her life in London after she left her ancestral estates because she was bored by the caging of her parents and a silly village squabble about a soldier monument.

"Little Bear" some of her fast—in both senses of the word—friends call her. She is well named. She has the delicate reactions to life of the fat cinnamon bruin in Lincoln park who squats widely on the floor of his cage and scratches himself luxuriously, or waves a maudlin paw at passersby.

She lives—at first—the sparse life of a working girl in London, typing for a novelist until boredom shooes her into an irregular relation with her employer's nephew. She is fascinated by a lady of the crowded profession, and collects data from her; she leaves her typing, becomes a manicurist, and lets men kiss her in the temporary privacy of the curtains of her booth. She meets thus a young and beautiful—her words—dress designer, male. She goes to live with him. She sinks to the dregs of his irregular and unsavory life, smokes opium without being more than physically ill, finds him unfaithful to her, tries to leave him, but cannot because she is not strong enough to get along without him. She is going to have a child, but in a brawl with him she falls over an open trunk and is ill for months afterwards. She hates him, but she still lives with him. Finally, when she feels that she has safely landed the man whom she thinks she loves, she tells him that she is going to leave her "husband" and she doesn't know what she can do. The hero says, "Be mine." She is, and she is happy.

It is all wrong, fundamentally wrong. Ursula was a girl of—theoretically—fine sensibilities, well born, well bred, with the traditions of an English country family behind her. Her acceptance of ugliness and indecency is too facile. If she were such an "intelligent" person as she calls herself she could not have been so insensible, nor, having lived as she had, could she have emerged so unremorsefully into a happy marriage.

She is the first heroine I have met who paid nothing for her mess of pottage. She has no literary forbears.

Economically, she is unforgivably immoral. Neither physical nor spiritual want drove her. She wasn't even in love with her lovers.

Mr. George always writes well. He holds the technique of the novel like a highly sensitized magnet in his fingers, to draw and retain a reader's interest. He has written some good satirical criticisms of modern life. Ursula Trent is not one of them. It is unconvincing.

It is, as Ursula is, disgusting.

On the Other Hand, As People Say—

On the other hand, Stokes have brought over a ducky book by W. L. George called "A London Mosaic"—a series of little essays about London, with amusing illustrations by Phillipe Forbes-Robertson. Mr. George says that it is not a "passionate Baedeker." He will not, he says, "cut up and pickle London. The secret of a city's exploration does not lie in the dutiful following of itineraries, but in a lover-like submission to its moods. I am not a student but a lover of London."

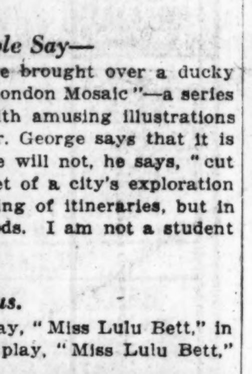
Both Book and Play Are Lulus.

Monday morning arrived the play, "Miss Lulu Bett," in book form. Monday evening the play, "Miss Lulu Bett," opened its Chicago engagement.



ZONA GALE.

Monday was a big day among the literati.

The play has a peculiar appeal to readers. Any piece of literary work that wins the Pulitzer prize is interesting. We in America have so few prizes that even to appear in one of Mr. O'Brien's "Best Short Stories" gives a thrill to many authors.

I thought before I saw the play that the book could not be made into a play, that the whole thing was too subtle, too simple, too unmelodramatic, too real. Also I thought that a happy ending to the play would be inconceivable, for much of the poignancy of the book was in the feeling that Ninian had intentionally splashed a sodden life with brief sunshine. When I saw the play I realized that the same fine art which had kept Zona Gale from writing all over the page in her book had kept her from scrubbing up the stage with sentimentality. "Miss Lulu Bett" is a terribly real book.

It is also a terribly real play.

The book and the play are one because Miss Gale made both.

Another reason book readers welcome the play is because it brings us Zona Gale for a few days and Louise Closser Hale for as long as the play runs. Zona Gale has one of the rarest qualities I have ever seen, the quality of being always at ease, as though, in some strange way, she had seen inside Pandora's box and so had no curiosity about opening it—as though, in some strange way, she knew what life is about. Can you understand? It is not the self-confidence of success, nor the self-assurance of beauty or having always done right in one's life, or of religion. It's just the certainty of knowledge, the philosophic discovery of the summum bonum. Louise Closser Hale plays the part of Grandma Bett with the most delicate finish of her art and with the same charming and deft sense of humor which makes all her books delightful, which made "An American's London," the latest one, so real.

From Our Own Courtly Clifford.

"Clifford and John's Almanack," which is, in quaint and charming form, a permanent record of that delightful almanac which THE TRIBUNE used to have each Sunday from the pen of Clifford Raymond. In it there was some of the loveliest writing imaginable about such gentle things as a bird's call or a leaf's vivid declaration that autumn had caressed it. John T. McCutcheon has made some drawings after the manner of old wood cuts for the Almanack.

Mr. Benet Safely Sheltered.

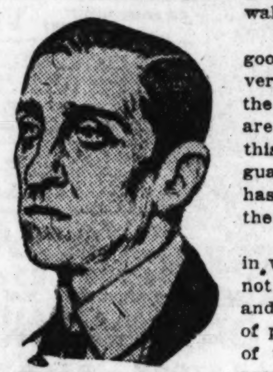
Another visitor last week. Stephen Vincent Benet, whose first novel, "The Beginning of Wisdom," has just been published by Henry Holt. A shy young person, safely sheltered behind large glasses and a beautiful young lady—by name, Rosemary Carr—whom he is to marry soon and with whom he is to return to the friendly solace of Paris.

Mr. Benet's enthusiasm—if one might call his guarded praise such—is for "Three Soldiers," by young Dos Passos. He thinks it's a great book. Another visitor, Hilmar Baukhage, who wrote the poems in Roy Baldridge's "I Was There," says that "Three Soldiers" sounded like his own diary. As he read it he kept wondering what was going to happen to him next.

Good English of 'The Claw' Baffles Some in Its Cast

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—[Special.]—Lionel Barrymore is too good an actor to be altogether happy in "The Claw" in the Broadhurst theater. His managers have done their best to give him good running mates. Irene Fenwick, for example, plays at his pace and seems to enjoy the sport. She is neck and neck with him at the final curtain, and beautifully unbreathed. But the others fall panting to the rear early in the performance, and lag, a wallowing pack, in the wake of the action thereafter.



HENRI BERNSTEIN.

"The Claw," which Henri Bernstein wrote in good French in the first place, is translated into very good English. The actors of "The Claw," with the exception of Barrymore and Miss Fenwick, are nonplused by the quaint, archaic correctness of this prose. "The Claw" is translated into a language which still survives in some printed books but has completely disappeared from the literature of the American stage.

Mr. Barrymore's support would be quite at home in words written by Mr. Winchell Smith, which are not English. They are younger than Mr. Barrymore, and have had all their stage experience in the kind of play that has been written since the vocabulary of the stage dropped to 1,000 words, mostly mispronounced. To prepare them to play opposite Mr. Barrymore, it would have been necessary to teach them the meanings and enunciations of words. That would have been a long, perhaps impossible process. The producer shrugged his shoulders and tossed them their parts. Most of the time they deliver them with a sort of desperate, defiant courage, as a man would ask for bread in Russian if it were absolutely necessary. It leaves the whole burden of making simple sense out of Bernstein's simple sense on Barrymore's shoulders. He braces them and carries the play.

Clever and Without Malice.

I imagine that "The Claw" was written before Bernstein became the Dreyfus of modern French drama. Circumstances made Bernstein a bitter writer. Society—something you might call the Paris "400"—snubbed Bernstein, he was weak, and he began to write plays that always have a little nasty taste of gossip.

LIONEL BARRYMORE.

"The Thief," with its triumphant air of revealing things you may not know about the upper classes, is snobbish. When Mr. Bernstein tells you in it that his aristocratic heroine peddles herself for clothes, you sense subtle propaganda. He wants you to suspect every yard of silk and every carat of diamond you may see in the boxes from your opera seat in the gallery. You feel that, if Mr. Bernstein has his quarrel with the hundred best families of Paris, that is no matter of concern to you, who pay to see a play.

In short, the malice of "The Thief" was unforgivable in spite of its cleverness.

"The Claw" is clever and has no malice. It is destructive but fair. There is no ulterior motive to be suspected in the case which Bernstein builds up against a senile politician heaping public treason at the feet of a beautiful prostitute as richer men heap jewels. There is no motive ulterior to the final catastrophe of the play itself. All the demoniac energy of the writer is concentrated in a drive toward that catastrophe. And when Cortilon, the premier of France, a moral pulp from the many fateful bludgeonings Bernstein administers to him, stoops to pick up his hat and falls dead at the end of the play you feel finish in every fiber.

Cortilon Stands and Falls Alone.

He knocks Cortilon into a cocked hat. Cortilon is his target. He is not aiming at French premiers in general. He has built up a man and demolished him in a play. All his energies are confined within the play.

IRENE FENWICK.
[Photo from White.]

It was easy for Bernstein to hit things in "The Thief." He was aiming at a whole class of women, and had but to shoot a barrel of buckshot in the general direction of anything dressed in sables. But Cortilon demands better aim. He is an individual. There are no others like him. From his broad shoes to his gray hair, he is woven out of Bernstein's imagination. He is flesh and blood, partly because Bernstein's imagination is vivid, but mostly because he is not a facile type. He is no more the type of a French politician than Macbeth is the type of a Scotch baron; no more to be understood as an intimate portrait of, say, Premier Briand than King Lear is a revelation of George V. Cortilon, before Bernstein killed him in his last act, had become something you can kill. Go to "Thank You" and try to shoot Mr. Smith's stuffed pastor. It would be easier to kiss Beatrice Fairfax.

When you get the very best of anything, you have only got what you have been looking for. We really deserve Lionel Barrymore as Cortilon. Patiently, sheepishly, we return again and again to the theater to see somebody be the somebody he is programmed to act. At first I was tempted to cry miracle when just this happened in the Broadhurst. I have thought it over and have decided that miracles ought to happen.

Recalling Huckleberry Finn.

You will remember a chapter of Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn" which deals with the stage in Arkansas. The "duke" and the "king," after having invaded Huck's raft drifting downward on the Mississippi, look about them for unparticular means of replenishing their pocketbooks and hit on the ripe scheme of putting on a show in the nearest village.

HAZEL DAWN.
[Photo from Daguerre.]

You will remember how the "king" did the acting (stripped and striped with printers' ink); how the "duke" held the box office, and how they attempted to write a plot, but abandoned literary effort as unnecessary.

You will remember that the first audience wanted to ride the production out of town on a rail. Then you will recall that they changed their minds. They had been enormously "sold." They wanted the rest of the population to be "sold" likewise. They went down to the drug store and told the world that it was a good show, none better.

Do thy neighbor as thou hast been done.

You must see "The Demi-Virgin," Avery Hopwood's new farce, in the Times Square theater. Come over in this corner while I whisper to you that it is about a young couple who separated on their wedding night before—well, you must see it.

It gives you the facts about the life they lead at Hollywood, real stuff about movie bathing beauties.

There's a scene where the leading man sneaks into the leading woman's boudoir at 2 a. m., locks all the doors, takes off his collar, and——

You ought to have been there.

In the third act Hazel Dawn and the other ladies of the cast start a game of "strip poker" with all of their outer clothing on, but as the limit rises they——

You'll have to pay your $3 to find out what I found out about "The Demi-Virgin" last Monday in the Times Square.

$3,000 a Week Is a Lot of Money

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—[Special.]—Back from the movies two weeks hence will come none other than Will Rogers, one time a much appreciated entertainer in the hire of Mr. Ziegfeld and more recently mute but prosperous out on the Pacific coast. One thing or another has conspired to set Mr. Rogers free from his film contracts, and the report is that the Shuberts have ensnared him for their vaudeville circuit. Still another rumor is concerned with Mr. Rogers' weekly wage, which, it is said, will be some $3,000.

And yet another popular film actor, it is said, is about to emerge into the glare of the footlights. This will be the youthful Wesley Barry, whose brief career has not yet been concerned with the legitimate stage. Barry, it is understood, will appear in a revival of the O'Higgins-Ford comedy, "The Dummy," first presented some seven or eight seasons ago. His rôle, of course, will be that of the juvenile detective, originally acted by Ernest Truex.

Tales of this terrible theatrical season continue to come to hand from the road, where it requires an exceptional attraction to do more than break even. One comedy, headed by one of the country's best character actors—a star—recently began a Detroit week to receipts of $208. Another comedy fresh from New York and with two stars at its head instead of one, opened in Cleveland not long ago to $144, and attracted but $158 on the succeeding night.

"Phi-Phi," the success of three seasons in Paris, closed in Washington last night and probably will not come to New York. Miss Frances White had the leading rôle.

MISS FRANCINE LARRIMORE.
[White Photo.]

She will be at the Cort Tuesday evening and for some time thereafter in Rachel Crothers' "Nice People," a comedy of bad manners, which provides her with much the same kind of a rôle as that she played in Cosmo Hamilton's "Scandal." Again she is a headstrong society girl whose pranks get her into trouble, and again she works out her salvation by falling in love.

Where Are the Popular Tunes of Yesteryear?

By Edward Moore

WHAT has become of the popular tunes that used to be whistled? If any are being written now, their composers are keeping the matter a profound secret. At least, they are not being whistled.

JOHN P. SOUSA.
[White Photo.]

Jerome Kern would seem to have gone into the silence. Fritz Kreisler wrote some waltzes and part of an operetta, and pure gold they were, but he has stopped. John Philip Sousa keeps up his two step marches, but off hand the tunes that attach to his name are "The Stars and Stripes Forever" and "El Capitan" of long ago. Victor Herbert has apparently lost his former joyous flash. Reginald De Koven is dead. Sir Arthur Sullivan never had a successor. Pretty nearly every Chicago dramatic critic in reviewing "The Whirl of New York" spoke mournfully of how much better were the tunes of Gustav Kerker, revived from a quarter century ago.

A few nights ago I had occasion to watch proceedings from the side lines of one of the city's smart restaurants, one where music sounded constantly, both for a professional show and the dancing of the guests. A fairly retentive and reasonably long memory revealed no period where the tunes were so flat, stale, and unprofitable, so unsparkling, pepless, and altogether dreary as at present. Each one sounded like a dozen others, with the curious result that they were all as difficult to remember as though they had been operatic arias.

Popular music means dance music these days. The up to date orchestras are permanent enough to work out their own dance numbers and then have them published and recorded on the waxen disks. Thus is their music spread. The five who can play the piano buy sheet music, and the five thousand who own phonographs buy records. This, I imagine, is a fair average.

But there is a disconcerting tendency toward standardizing popular music, and that in the direction of an imitation orientalism, irritating because it is so obviously imitation. The cymbals clash, the E flat clarinet emits a startled yelp, the Siberian buzfuz or whatever its name is, groans and chatters. Above all the drums keep up an unending thrum. I fully expect to see announcements of the Brahmaputra Blues as played by the Jejune Jazz Jackeroos, and the Turkestan Toddle by the Babylonian Balderdash Boys. But I know when that time comes the tunes will be neither blues nor toddle, and certainly not oriental.

This is not to be construed as the lifting of a scornful eyebrow at popular music as such. There has been and there will be plenty of popular music that is sincere and joyous and inspiriting. It is at a low ebb just now, but there is comfort. When it changes, as it must, it will be for the better. It cannot change in any other direction, not and remain music.

Word comes of a series of six Thursday morning musicals soon to begin at the Drake hotel. Nov. 10 is the date of the first, with three to follow in December and two more in January. In the rather ambitious list of artists are the names of Edith Mason, Edmund Burke, Lucy Gates, John Barclay, Francis Macmillen, Monda Goudré, Jacques Gordon, Louis Graveure, Carolina Lazzari, Alberto Salvi, Allen McQuahe, Eva Guahtier, Tino Pattiera, Victor De Gomez, Anna Case, Richard Hale, Juan Reyes, and Sascha Jacobinoff. The series will be under the direction of Mrs. Edward Kent Millar.

Seldom was Chicago's need of a medium sized—neither small nor large—concert hall better illustrated than on the present day. A glance at the concert calendar will show that seven musical events of one kind and another

'Miss Lulu Bett' and the Perils of Prizewinning

By Sheppard Butler.

IF I were a dramatist I should make it an object of nightly prayer that no one award a prize to a work of mine as the best play of the year. The experience, no doubt, is gratifying, but consider the handicaps.

The common or garden variety of play comes to us on its merits and stands on its own feet. If we like it, we like it, and we tell our friends, pleased with our acumen in having discovered something. The word gets about that there is a "good show" in town, and prosperity follows. It is as simple as supply and demand.

But with the prize play there are complications. The label gums things up. Tagged as worthy, improving, beneficent in its influence, the opus is eyed askance. Here, we argue, is somebody offering us bread when we want cake. We know the bread is good for us, but we don't want to be told. We want to use our own judgment, and we don't want any help.

MISS LOUISE CLOSSER HALE
in "Miss Lulu Bett."
[Schwarz Photo.]

When we see the play, do we look for its virtues? We do not. We engage in that most gratifying of diversions—picking flaws. Then we run over in our minds all the good plays that we think might better have been awarded the particular prize in question. Of course we shouldn't do any of these things, but human nature is human nature.

Miss Zona Gale probably will tell me that I am making a mountain out of a molehill, and that her "Miss Lulu Bett" was not harmed in the least by having won the $1,000 Pulitzer prize as the best American play produced last year. I hope she is right. As it happens, "Miss Lulu Bett" is first class entertainment, preaches no sermon, and is not at all "improving" in the devastating sense we sometimes bestow upon that word. It is a capital picture of small town family life, laying bare many amusing traits of character with the most searching kind of satire—that which sticks to the facts.

Whether it actually is the best American play produced last year is another question. Some judges, I venture, would hesitate to bestow this verdict on a piece whose last act had to be rewritten twice to achieve the sort of ending that would be satisfactory in performance. And some, I am sure, would frown upon the blunt device of lowering the curtain for thirty seconds three times in the midst of the action to indicate the passage of days and weeks. This is a makeshift, and makeshifts in prize plays are fair marks for criticism.

But these are not essential matters, and essentially "Miss Lulu Bett" is a singularly interesting play. It doesn't make the slightest difference whether it is a dramatic masterpiece or not, and if any one stays away because it has been so labeled, it will be a pity.

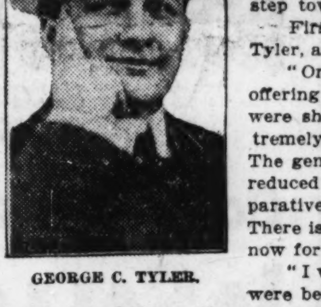
Bad Plays and the Theater "Slump"; Mr. Tyler Speaks His Mind.

Four new entertainments arrived last week, and three of them were disappointments. Of "Honors Are Even" and "The Whirl of New York" enough has been said. Of "Two Blocks Away" nothing need be said. It is, perhaps, Aaron Hoffman's worst play, but it is packed with funny lines, and it has Barney Bernard to speak them. A bulletin from the Olympic gets at the heart of the matter. "A record," it says, "was made of real laughs that swept the audience on the opening night, and a statement was sworn to before a notary public. The affidavit affirms that each laugh was registered on an automatic recorder, and that the total showed 210 divided between the three acts of the comedy. Snickers, chuckles, and giggles were ruled out. Two hundred and ten laughs means nearly two laughs per minute."

That sort of thing is unanswerable.



GEORGE C. TYLER.

Nevertheless it is a fact that the managers are beginning to look to the quality of their products. The number of plays that have failed since last summer is staggering. During the weeks since the opening of the present season the recurrent spectacle of many vacant seats has been viewed by the showmen with dismay, but apparently with the feeling that it was a phenomenon both inevitable and inexplicable. Now they are taking the first step toward recovery by trying to explain matters.

First to get his views into words is George C. Tyler, and he speaks his mind in no uncertain terms.

"One trouble," he says, "is that producers are offering to the public the same quality of plays as were shown before the war. The people, being extremely short of funds, will not patronize them. The general financial situation, as we all know, has reduced persons who through the war were comparatively independent to the very lowest ebb. There is not a great, big, vital interest in the theater now for this reason.

"I will say that business would be better if plays were better. The people have only so much money to spend, and they will not give it over to see a play unless they know it is a first class success. The day is past when a bad play can be petted and nursed along to success. The people won't be led.

"Anything went during the war. The people's pockets were full of money. The fellow who formerly earned $15 a week began earning $15 a day. His wife wore sealskin and he took her to a box at the highest priced shows. Now the salaries and wages are reduced. The play output is rotten, and the people haven't got the money.

"But good plays cannot be downed. Of course, this does not mean that the public will force the art of the theater any higher. For the big public really does not care for art, but more generally seeks to find something on the stage that appeals to its particular taste. However, since it is a well established fact that only the really good play can succeed and endure, the man who is a producer for the love of it instead of the love for the dollar is having his inning now."

News and Views (Mostly News) About the Stage and Its People.

If the railroad strike materializes, it will reduce theatrical activity throughout the country to the lowest ebb in years. Already the lean season has seen scores of traveling companies taken from the road, and, except for the movies, the towns hitherto known as one night stands are all but deserted so far as the players are concerned. In a few instances arrangements have been made to transport shows from town to town by motor truck, but for the most part the traveling entertainments simply will quit when the railroads do.

As for the so-called first class attractions, which have no dealings with the one night stands, they will be well or badly off according as they are situated. The few hardy successes, of which Chicago now has more than any other city, are settled down for long runs and will not be affected. But the many players in the many plays which are languishing, and whose future is uncertain, face a prospect of chaos. They will be stranded in the cities where the strike finds them—and "stranded" is the most desolate word in the lexicon of stageland.

Miss Terry, pictured close by, is the amusing player of the quaintest character in "The Gold Diggers"—a droll gamin of the footlights who "rolls her own" and conveys engagingly the impression that she is a tough egg. Her presence has nothing to do with the play, but she is a diverting item of its background.

"The Bat" reached its five hundredth New York performance yesterday, and the four hundredth performance in Chicago will be given next Thursday. Charles Coleman, the lawyer; Edward Colebrook, the butler, and Louis Morrell, the nephew, are the only members of the Chicago company who have played at every performance. During that time Mr. Coleman has been divorced, Mr. Colebrook has been married, and Mr. Morrell has remained a bachelor.

Good old "Ben-Hur," most persistently long lived of all theatrical properties with the exception of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," is to have a new and gorgeous production early next year under the supervision of A. L. Erlanger, who made the first production in 1899. The copyright, originally granted to Gen. Lew Wallace forty-two years ago, has just been extended for another fourteen years, and more than $1,000,000 has been paid to Henry L. Wallace, the general's son, and to Harper & Bros., publishers of the book, for the stage and film rights.

The report has been confirmed that John Drinkwater will visit America again this winter, but his friend Bernard Shaw is not coming, as positively not as an Irishman can make it. You may have missed his letter to Oswald Garrison Villard. Mr. Shaw says: "I have no intention either of going to prison with Debs or taking my wife to Texas, where the Ku Klux Klan snatches white women out of hotel verandas and tars and feathers them. If I were dependent on martyrdom for a reputation, which happily I am not, I could go to Ireland. It is a less dangerous place; but then the voyage is shorter and much cheaper. You are right in your impression that a number of persons are urging me to come to the United States. But why on earth do you call them my friends?"

Miss Grace George will appear next month as Marie Antoinette, queen of France, in something called "A Royal Scandal." Little has been made known about the play except that it is from a foreign source, runs both to comedy and tragedy, and is signed by an author who hides behind the nom de plume of "Endymar." Charles Cherry will have the leading male rôle.

Edward H. Sothern and Miss Julia Marlowe, bearing aloft the torch of Shakespeare, will begin an engagement next week in the stately Century theater. one of the largest and by all odds the most imposing of the New York playhouses. Thus the somewhat neglected Bard of Avon is restored, for a time, to his former high estate in the American theater.

Wreckers took possession of the famous old Union Square theater in New York last week, starting toward oblivion a landmark that has been identified with the history of the American stage for fifty years. Harrigan and Hart were the first notables to play there, and it was in the Union Square that "The Mikado" had its first New York performance, and Kate Claxton won renown as the heroine of the old melodrama, "The Two Orphans." When the house was turned over to vaudeville in 1893, George M. Cohan, Dave Montgomery, and Fred Stone were on the first bill. Here, too, Charlie Chaplin is said to have made his first American appearance in an English pantomime act, which didn't go very well.

"Happy Go Lucky," which Chicago liked so well that it played here for eighteen weeks, has encountered indifference in Philadelphia, and the entertainment is no more. O. P. Heggie, its principal player, is to act in something else.

Miss Gertrude Hoffman, starting out over the vaudeville circuits with what she calls her all-American ballet, played to distinguished audiences during a recent week in Washington. On three successive evenings she won applause, in turn, from William Howard Taft, Warren G. Harding, and Woodrow Wilson.

"Sally," Mr. Ziegfeld's musical comedy which is having great prosperity in New York and London, is to be produced in Paris with an all-French cast.

"Enter Madame," with Miss Gilda Varesi in the leading rôle, is to be taken to London soon after its forthcoming visit to Chicago. The piece is scheduled to follow "Miss Lulu Bett" at the Playhouse.

"We Girls," the new comedy by Frederic and Fanny Hatton, formerly of here, as the saying is, had its first performances last week in Worcester, Mass.

Arnold Daly's widely heralded repertory venture in New York lasted one week. The actor has gone into vaudeville with the sketch called "The Van Dyck."

Prof. S. H. Clark of the University of Chicago will give a dramatic recital of Shaw's "The Devil's Disciple" in the Illinois theater next Sunday afternoon. This will be the first of six readings scheduled by Prof. Clark for the six Sunday afternoons ending Dec. 4.

A new Spanish operetta called "The Wildcat" has been imported by John Cort and will presently bloom forth in New York. Mr. Cort will also be the sponsor for a play entitled "Her Salary Man," written by Forrest S. Rutherford. Miss Ruth Shepley and A. H. Van Buren will head the cast.

"The Jest," one of the notable New York productions when John and Lionel Barrymore played it there, is a failure in London. They called it "The Love Thief" in the British capital.

Thomas Burke, author of "Limehouse Nights," has reached the London stage. "Wong Foo," a one act play of his, is being acted at the Prince of Wales theater as part of a new revue called "From A to Z."

The New Plays

OPENING THIS WEEK.

Cort—Miss Francine Larrimore in Rachel Crothers' "Nice People," a comedy about the cigaret smoking flappers and their naughty ways. Miss Larrimore, you remember, was the sparkling player of the willful heroine in Cosmo Hamilton's "Scandal." IMPENDING JOYS.

Oct. 30—At the Garrick, the "Greenwich Village Follies," with Savoy and Brennan, Myers and Hanford, Phil Baker, the McCarthy Sisters, Ada Forman, James Clemons, and many other entertainers. Eddie Cantor and "Midnight Rounders" will move to the Great Northern.

Oct. 31—At the Princess, Miss Margaret Anglin in "The Woman in Bronze," the play which she acted briefly at Powers' two years ago.

Oct. 31—At the Central, John Galsworthy's "The Skin Game," with Miss Jane Grey in the principal rôle.

Nov. 27—At Powers', Mrs. Fiske in "Wake Up, Jonathan," by Hatcher Hughes and Elmer L. Rice.

BERT LYTELL!

It's getting so I register a thrill every time I see that name advertised in a new picture. For why? For because it's a downright rest cure to know you're scheduled to see good acting. And that man's been making record breaking runs lately. In "Ladyfingers," as in his other recent pictures, he noses in.

To begin with, he has an awfully good story. It was written by Jackson Gregory and adapts itself marvelously well to picture purposes. It provides Mr. Lytell with a little of everything to do. He opens safes; he repents; he falls in love; he gives himself to the police, who haven't a thing in the world on him; he bravely serves his time, and comes out to a grand finale that will please everybody. It's full of sweetness and humor and apple blossoms, and sends you away from the picture theater in high good humor with even the war tax.

I'll tell you another little something, too. The high good humor is attended with a heightened courage. The old besetting sin that has seemed such an impossible thing to contend with shrinks in the glow of a will that you discover can really successfully contend with anything, once given a chance.

"Don't you see?" Ladyfingers asks softly of the adoring old woman who is offering to pay for everything he has stolen, "you can't buy my freedom. I've got to earn it." (And he does have to, you know, if he's ever going to be able to look his soul's self in the eye.)

Nobody's preaching to you, understand, this Sunday morning, and "Ladyfingers" is no sermon. It just has a little boost I wanted you to know about.

The photography is exceptionally beautiful. The scenery sometimes makes your throat ache, it is so lovely. The acting all the way through is immense.

Did I like it? Now, what do you think?

Ask Me! Ask Me!

G. L. T.: I'm awfully sorry, but I haven't the name of the judge you mention. The company seems to have no record of it, either. However, I'll try to find out and let you know, if you can be patient a little while. I'm just flattered to pieces about your clipping system. Mustn't tell me such things, Mrs. T. No, the picture you mention hasn't been shown here yet.

VERONICA L.: Norma Talmadge played in the picture you mention. Dorothy Dalton did not. What do you win?

WHITE DUKE: Not that I know of. Don't think so. Mail will reach Herbert Rawlinson, care of Lambs club, New York. You are not a steady reader or you would have known how Mr. Turpin "got his glims crossed." I did interview him. Write again.

N. R.: From all I hear Mr. Sills is exceedingly modest and not in favor of personal appearances; in other words, a shrinking violet. Which, I daresay, or rather who, I daresay, may in time be brought to the light of the lecture platform by aspiring promoters of the picture game. Hope on!

J. M.: Who plays opposite her in what?

KAY: Miss Young was born in Chicago. I believe you are right regarding the other query. Older than you say, but not as old as you have heard, I think. You keep right on being "strong for the right." [That's the next thing to being strong with it.]

CLOSEUPS

A chewing gum vender who, for a time, unostentatiously vended his way about the De Mille studio, is said to have nearly wrecked some of the most scrumptious scenes of "Fool's Paradise" at that time being made. Everybody bought of him; everybody chewed. Unusual tremors shook the lower jaws of stars and extras. With a yell Mr. De Mille called a halt, and business stopped moving until jaws did.

* * *

"One Arabian Night," which is soon to open here, ought to be good. In it appear Pola Negri, Ernst Lubitsch, who directed "Passion," and Paul Wegener, who produced "The Golem." Miss Negri will have the part of a harem queen; Wegener will be seen as a Persian sheik, and Lubitsch is cast as a hunchback clown wildly in love with the dancer who becomes the sheik's favorite wife.

Will Rogers says that he's been doubly exposed so much in his picture "EK" that he feels like two persons,

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

MUSIC OF THE WEEK

TODAY AT 3:30—Arthur Rubinstein, pianist, will give a recital at the Grand Opera house.

TODAY at 3:30—Amelita Galli-Curci, coloratura soprano of the Chicago and Metropolitan opera companies, will appear in a song recital at the Auditorium.

TODAY AT 3:30—The Civic orchestra of Chicago, directed by Frederick Stock, Eric de Lamarter, and George Dasch, will give a concert at Orchestra hall. Katherine Wade Smith, violinist, will be the soloist.

TODAY AT 3:30—Nelson Illingworth, baritone, will make his first appearance in Chicago at the Blackstone theater.

TODAY AT 3:30—Kathryn Meisle, contralto, will give her first Chicago recital at the Playhouse.

TODAY AT 3:30—Albert Borroff, basso, will give a song recital at Kimball hall. Minna Krokowsky, violinist, will be his assistant on the program.

TODAY AT 3:30—Leopold Godowsky, the pianist, will give a recital at the Illinois.

TUESDAY NIGHT—Bronislaw Huberman, Russian violinist, will give a recital at Orchestra hall.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT—Hans Muenzer, a violinist, recently arrived from Germany, and now located in Chicago, will appear in a recital at Kimball hall.

THURSDAY NIGHT—The Chicago Symphony orchestra, conducted by Frederick Stock, will give its second popular concert of the season, repeating the program played last week.

THURSDAY NIGHT—Ebba Sundstrom, violinist, will give a recital at Kimball hall.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON AND SATURDAY NIGHT—The Chicago Symphony orchestra will play its regular pair of subscription concerts. Wilhelm Bachaus, pianist, will be the soloist.

are listed for this afternoon, and with extraordinary unanimity they are all beginning at the same hour. There are difficulties in the way of giving recitals through the week that would be lessened if there were more places to give them. But when seven decide upon the same hour of the same day one of the first questions that arises is how, or if, they all expect to get audiences.

An air of activity and cheerfulness pervades the Auditorium just now. Business Manager George M. Spangler and Conductor Isaac Van Grove have gone to New York to meet Miss Garden and receive her first words about the new season. The general musical director, Giorgio Polacco, and his wife, the soprano Edith Mason, are expected here early in the week. By the end of the week most of the principals will have arrived, and rehearsals will be in full flight.

For that matter, they are going now, all over the vast theater. A visit there a few days ago found Alexander Smallens taking the orchestra through the maze of tonal and harmonic surprises that will be revealed under the name of "The Love of Three Oranges." In another quarter Pietro Nepoti was giving the chorus an enthusiastic drill in various works of the répertoire. On the stage new scenery was being set up for inspection and lighting.

Up in the business offices they are still taking subscriptions and they are not averse to letting it be known that the present sum total is close to the quarter of a million mark. Mrs. McCormick's unmodified support of Miss Garden, as expressed in her own statement a few days ago, has spurred on the campaign and increased the number of subscribers. Nov. 1 has been set as the last day when subscriptions will be received.

Mr. Godowsky's reappearance this afternoon brings to mind the fact that he is neither scornful of the lowly nor afraid of the high estates in piano technique. For the one he has revived Schumann's "Scenes from Childhood"; for the other, Liszt's Sonata in B minor. He is newly back from Mexico, seemingly the only place open to him since the war; a tour of England planned for last year was abandoned because he could not identify himself as a citizen of any country for the purpose of passport. Mr. Godowsky automatically (and unwittingly, he says) cancelled his American citizenship when, many years ago, he accepted a court position from the old Austro-Hungarian government.

Several copies of Music and Poetry, a monthly publication organized less than a year ago, have reached this desk. It is devoted to the interests of musicians of the colored race, and is an uncommonly commendable effort. It contains news, editorials couched in a vein of sane good sense, information of one kind and another about music and musicians, and a brief composition. One of the last is a graceful solo setting of the spiritual "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," transcribed by the Negro composer, Carl Diton.

There is gossip to the effect that Paderewski has been quietly limbering up his fingers at the piano keyboard, although he stated some time ago with some emphasis that his career as a pianist was ended. The probability is that he is confronting the necessity of earning a living. A wealthy man at one time, he donated huge sums to the cause of Poland, fairly stripping himself of available capital. His ranch at Pasa Robles, Cal., was advertised for sale during the summer, but it is said that bids received on it were in no way commensurate with its value, and were not accepted.

The Civic orchestra of Chicago begins a new season at Orchestra hall this afternoon. It is the only organization in the country where capable players can learn symphonic training and routine under actual orchestral conditions. Its present membership is over eighty.

Mr. Gatti-Casazza, who most of the year keeps silent in many languages while directing the destinies of the Metropolitan Opera company, broke his custom the other day long enough to say that Feodor Challapine would probably have some guest appearances there this season in "Boris Godunoff," "Mefistofele," (Boito's) "Don Carlos," and possibly "The Barber of Seville."

Miss Garden has several times stated her desire to engage Challapine for Chicago. The chief difficulty would seem to be that the operas of his best rôles are not in the répertoire of the Chicago company, and it would, therefore, seem that his concert appearance here will be about his only one. The fee that he will receive for each appearance is reported to be $2,500, more than twice what he got when he was in the United States in 1907-'08, and quite a sizable sum in comparison with what he took from the soviet government in Russia.

North Shore Suburb Has Model Library

By Mme. X.

IT was with a more than usually acute pang that this P. P. P. (pillar of polite piffle) left the jungles of the north shore last week to return to the doubtful amenities of city life. Never before have the oaks of Lake county indulged in such a bronze splendor as this year. Never before have the maples burned with such a yellow flame, while the almost angry crimson of the woodbine and sumach adds the final touch to the orgy of color in the groves and fields in that delectable region.

The institution, however, which we miss most in leaving the quiet and secluded nest which it was our good fortune to roost in this past summer was the Lake Forest public library. It is everything that a village library should be, and that is saying a great deal.

The village circulating library is, I fancy, a peculiarly American invention. It is even more of a factor, if rightly run, than our schools in molding thought and opinion.

Largely instrumental in guiding the literary taste and bent of this particular collection of books is one of the best connoisseurs of books, modern and ancient, in this part of the country, Horace Martin. Mr. Martin is an omnivorous reader, with a catholic taste in literary matters which makes him the delight of book lovers of every cult. You never catch him napping. Wherever your fancy may turn in browsing among books there you will find him a pioneer ready to direct and sympathize with you.

A Home Overflowing With Books.

His home in Lake Forest, a delightful, rambling cottage crouching under acorn-dropping oak trees and within a few hundred feet of the bluff overhanging the lake, literally drips with books. The rooms are lined and interlined with them. Every inch of available wall space is a bookcase crammed full with many hued volumes. They overflow in all directions, into the pantries, kitchen, bathrooms, store closets, and cellars. Merely to sit in one of the deep chested easy chairs in his library is to steep in the unmistakable atmosphere of books. Have you never noticed their subtle perfume? There is nothing else like unto it.

While Mr. Martin is the presiding genius in the selection of the works offered to the public by the Lake Forest library, he is by no means the chief force or source of inspiration in that institution. The village did not have to go outside its boundaries for its librarian. In selecting Miss Frances Kemp the library went to the oldest family in that region. She is the granddaughter of the first pioneer in that district, the late Thomas Atteridge.

In 1830 Thomas Atteridge came from somewhere in England and was granted by the government 300 acres on what was then merely a trail through the forests between Chicago and Waukegan. The latter place was known in those days as Little Fort. The trail is now the much traveled Green Bay road, and the land which then was acquired at a nominal figure is today worth at least $5,000 an acre, to judge by the price purported to have been paid recently by John Maynard Harlan for what was once a part of the Atteridge grant.

Wields Her Scepter Well.

The original 300 acres have been gradually sold off until there remain to the descendants only two pieces of it on which the two family homes, those of Miss Atteridge and of her sister, Mrs. Kemp, are left.

Miss Kemp is, one might almost say, the public library, so potent and well wielded is her influence there. She guides the young in their taste in books; she inspires their nonreading elders to come and sip at the fount of literature (and once they come they always return); she makes all visitors to that cheerful shrine of books feel welcome and at home. But it is chiefly as a guardian and purveyor of the most powerful factor in the average life, reading, that she is, to the writer, an impressive figure. She does it so extremely well and so extremely gently that few know she is doing it.

We only realized it by a growing tendency to hide from her the fact that we had an uncontrollable taste for detective stories. As a toper maneuvers and schemes to achieve his besotting liquor unbeknownst to others, so we manuevered and schemed to satisfy our equally besotting literary taste without Miss Kemp's knowledge. Not even the reports in the public print that Lloyd George has a predilection for this form of mental dissipation mitigates our sense of shame at this weakness. A soft bed, a well shaded bedside light, the window open near by, and a rattling good tale of finally detected murder mystery—can you beat that as a combination making for real bliss?

Farewell to a Gay Summer.

Apropos of the Lake Forest steeplechase of yesterday, did you know that the term steeplechase came from the fact that at the time it was originally instituted in England it was a real race across country, when two church steeples were usually taken as the goals for the ride? They were the most conspicuous landmarks in a wooded landscape. The riders were allowed to pick their own route between these two objectives. The straightest line ordinarily led riders "thorough bush, thorough brier, thorough flood, thorough fire," and was a strenuous test of horsemanship.

MISS CAROLINE DE WINDT.
[Photo by Raymor.]

Announcement was made recently of the engagement of Miss Caroline de Windt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heyliger A. de Windt of Winnetka, to Albert Sellner Gardner of Chicago, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Gardner of New York, formerly of St. Louis. Miss de Windt was a debutante last winter. Her marriage to Mr. Gardner will take place next spring.

The steeplechase, the luncheon before it, and the big dinner and dance after it given at the Onwentsia club were the closing events of a gay summer. Those who spent this now closing season at this the most fashionable of our suburbs will probably always remember it because of the unusually long hot spell. As the Irish refer to the "year of the big wind" or the "year of the great hunger," so the dwellers in the country surrounding Chicago will date things from the "summer of the big heat."

It meant a lot of dancing on the charming open air dancing platforms which are the almost inevitable adjunct of every country club nowadays. There is certainly nothing more delicious than such a dance, under the stars, with the warm night breeze just rustling the leaves in the nearby trees. If a summer moon, large and placid, be added to the scene there is nothing left to be desired.

Discipline and Dancing.

It may be of interest to the younger element among the dancers that returning travelers bring back word from foreign parts like Paris, London, the Riviera, Deauville, and wherever else the world that amuses itself delights to congregate that some of the American ways of dancing are not looked upon with favor over there. Particularly do they disapprove of the cheek by jowl custom. Also some of the close clutches not unknown in our dancing meet there with dislike and disdain.

The European parents still have some sort of hold on their offspring which American parents seem occasionally to have lost in the shuffle. (Entre nous, "shuffle" is a good word right there, because, if there has been such a loss of parental control as reported, it may have been lost in the shuffle of the bridge cards.)

Before we leave the dance subject it may interest some of the terpsichoreans in the ultra smart set to learn that there is on the carpet a ball to take place on Jan. 6, which is promised to be the "snappiest" affair of its kind ever given here. While the date is Twelfth Night, made historic thereabouts by the annual gay, fancy dress balls got up by the late William C. Gamble, the proposed ball is in no sense a continuation of these. It is rather to be patterned after the Bachelors and Benedicts in their early and perhaps we may say more exuberant era, when the cotillion figures were original and elaborate, not to say menagerial, if you understand what I mean. That is, they partook of the nature of a mild menagerie because of the many ferocious animals, like rabbits, puppy dogs, kittens, and canaries, which were used as favors and let loose in the ballroom during the evening. Rabbit races, puppy dog matches, kitten contests, and canary flights were features of the program.

MISS BARBARA GRANGER.
[Photo by Ivan Erixon.]

Miss Barbara Granger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hamill Granger of 39 East Schiller street, will become the bride of Thomas H. Cowles, son of Alfred Cowles of 1130 Lake Shore drive, on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Church of the Holy Spirit in Lake Forest. A reception will follow at the residence of the bride's grandfather, Marvin Hughitt, 207 Sheridan road, Lake Forest. Mr. Cowles has taken a house in Lake Forest where he and his bride will be at home after Nov. 15.

Ball Surrounded with Secrecy.

The Bachelors and Benedicts claim to be the most ancient of Chicago society dance clubs. They grew out of the midwinter cotillions, which were in their day, some twenty years ago, the most fashionable affairs of their kind here. Among the original organizers of this parent institution were the late Stewart Patterson, Charles Dewey, Julian Mason, Hugh McBirney Johnston, J. Allen Haines, Noble Judah, John A. Carpenter, Rosecrans Baldwin, Joseph T. Ryerson, and Alfred Hamill.

In two directions, however, the forthcoming dance is copying the famous Twelfth Night balls of Mr. Gamble; in the secrecy as to the identities of those composing the organization committee, and an even more profound obscurity which will be cast over the kind of entertainment to be provided for those invited to the ball. Not until the afternoon of the occasion will this be revealed, but, as those who are handling the affair are old hands at this sort of thing, a unique and festive evening is promised. Both the Assembly balls and the Bachelors and Benedicts will have to look to their laurels.

It was a gala event for their friends when Mr. and Mrs. Herman Gade arrived in Chicago yesterday. They are old and well known Chicagoans, whom fate and the Norwegian government have domiciled of late years in Brazil, where Mr. Gade is the Norwegian minister.

Mrs. Gade is a daughter of the late Charles B. King. The Gade place in Lake Forest is one of the most charming there. It is the hope of their friends that when diplomacy no longer claims Mr. Gade he will bring his family back to this part of the world. Mrs. Gade's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Garfield King, gave a dinner in their honor last evening at the Onwentsia.

Figures in the Art World.

Two Englishmen of fame and talent are sojourning temporarily in Chicago, and are being much entertained at luncheons and dinners. They are Glyn Philpot and Vivian Forbes.

The former stands at the top of the list of English portrait painters of the day. He has just finished a full length likeness of Mrs. Potter Palmer, and will embark on one of Mrs. Walter Brewster next week. This is his second visit to Chicago. He was here in 1913, the year before the war tore art to tatters, at which time he painted a striking portrait of the youngest daughter of the Hugh McBirneys, Miss Isabelle McBirney [now Mrs. Henry Stimson Jr. of Rye, N. Y.].

MISS BEATRICE FENTON.

Miss Beatrice Fenton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Fenton of 818 Bryant avenue, Winnetka, will make her debut at a tea to be given by her parents Thursday afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock at the Webster hotel. That night Mr. and Mrs. Fenton will give a dance for their daughter at the Webster. Mr. and Mrs. William T. Fenton of 230 East Delaware place will give a tea dance at the Drake for their granddaughter on Friday, Nov. 4.

Mr. Philpot is of old English stock with a strong strain of Spanish blood from a Spanish grandmother, which is manifest in his decidedly Spanish look and his rather stately Iberian manner. His appearance is striking. He is of slender build, medium height, dark in coloring, with a rather long, oval face, smooth shaven, with brown, somewhat prominent eyes. He has a slight defect in the sight of one eye which he corrects by wearing that, to Americans, most interesting ocular weapon, a monocle.

He is a great admirer of the African type of looks as we see it here in America. When he returned to England eight years ago, he painted a frieze in Lord Everingham's dining room in London depicting a troop of Negroes leading a herd of white bulls against a gold background, which attracted great attention, almost as much as Whistler's famous peacock room in Barney Barnato's house.

Excels in Portrait Sketches.

His young protegé and companion, Vivian Forbes, who has accompanied him to America, is a coming figure in the English art world. He and Mr. Philpot met during the war when each stood in the great line of volunteers, Mr. Forbes coming just after Mr. Philpot. They were assigned cots side by side at the training camp quite by chance. It was in this grim and close companionship that the already arrived artist found in his young tent mate a passionate desire to become a painter. He took him under his wing, and made it possible for him to take up the brush when the war was over.

At the British academy show last June a big canvas by Mr. Forbes was the most talked of picture there. It presented a large group of boys under a widely branching cedar tree all preparing to go in swimming in the river which glimmered in the background. The brilliant sunshine in the distance reflected on the nude and semi-nude young bodies, the dense shadow cast by the somber tree, and a certain sense of brooding mystery, conveyed by some intangible quality in the painting, made it the center of much observation and comment.

Mr. Forbes is to have an exhibition of his chalk drawings at the Arts club, opening Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 1. In it will include some spirited portrait sketches he has made of two of the Potter Palmer children, Miss Bertha Palmer and Potter Palmer III., a striking likeness of Robert Allerton, and a study of the latter's aunt, Mrs. Sheldon. Also two big, what the artist calls cartoons, one representing Christ among the people, a strong piece of work which he accomplished lately during a visit at Robert Allerton's place near Monticello, Ill.

An Ideal Spot for Artists.

Mr. Forbes and Mr. Philpot have made Mr. Allerton's home their headquarters since their arrival in this country early in September. Their host has given them a quite superb studio in his lovely Georgian mansion. It is a transformed stable which has been incorporated into the house itself. The spacious proportions and the red tiled floor have been kept. There is a fine north light. Two bachelor bedrooms and a bath open off the studio, which is further adorned with some of Mr. Allerton's treasures in the way of ancient Chinese pictures and rare old renaissance furniture.

It is, in short, an ideal spot for artists. When genius "isn't burning" they can go out and roam the fields and woodlands which make up Mr. Allerton's 13,000 acres.

Illini Plan War Memorial.

Nov. 1 ushers in what the alumni of the University of Illinois call "Stadium week." It is the period they have set apart in which to raise funds for the great memorial stadium which it is proposed to erect at the university at Urbana. In the honor court of this stadium will be columns, each of which will be dedicated to an Illini who died in the world war. The drive begins on Tuesday, Nov. 1, and ends on the following Saturday, the day of the Illinois-DePauw football game at Urbana.

The stadium is a part of the impressive new designs proposed for the embellishment and enlargement of the state university, designs which, if carried out as planned, will make it one of the show places of its kind in the country, and also make it a place of pilgrimage for Illini from all parts of the U. S. A. The plans include a new campus in a conspicuous site, dominating the countryside, and a reassembling of the buildings in such a way as to make the whole arrangement both harmonious and convenient. The scheme reflects great credit on the farsight of the university trustees and the faculty.

Another educational institution which is appealing to the world for help in raising funds just now is Vassar college, one of the best known women's colleges in the country. The alumni, faculty, and trustees are undertaking to raise a salary endowment fund of $3,000,000 by Nov. 12.

President Henry Noble McCracken of Vassar is in the city now as the guest of Mrs. William H. Bush, 1536 North State street. The Vassar alumni are planning to make much of this visit, and have arranged dinners, luncheons, and teas in his honor.

The Illinois quota is $164,000. Mrs. Ellis K. Kerr of Oak Park is Illinois district chairman of the campaign. Mrs. Bush is president of the Vassar Alumnæ of Chicago and the west. Miss Alice Stoehr of Evanston is vice president. Its secretary and treasurer is Mrs. Arthur Wakeley, 5608 Blackstone avenue, while Miss Harriot Ward, 4450 Woodlawn avenue, is assistant secretary and treasurer.

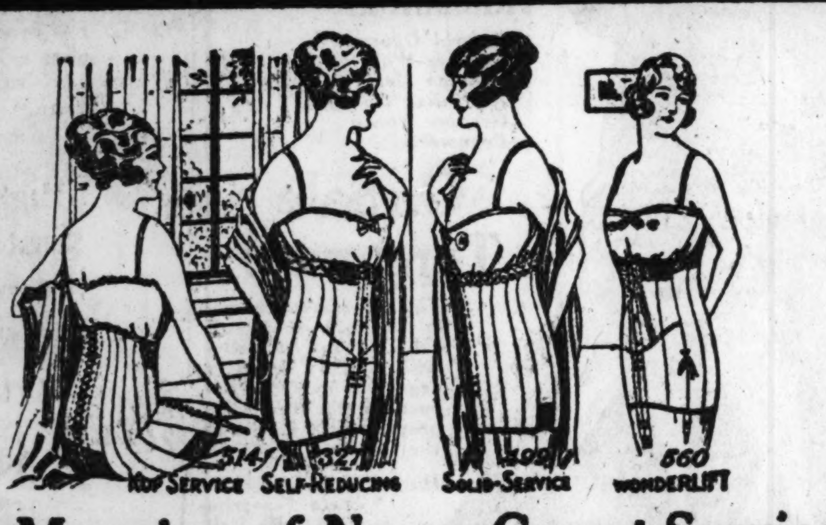
TRIPLE-SERVICE
(ECONOMIC-HYGIENIC-STYLE)
Makes Nemo Corsets Indispensable



The Meaning of Nemo Corset Service
MILLIONS OF WOMEN DEPEND ON IT

Nemo Corsets comprise many hygienic features of great scientific value and are divided into three distinct services:

Hygienic Service---Style Service---Economic Service

Their Hygienic Service has become invaluable and indispensable from a humanitarian and health point of view. The medical profession fully recognizes its preventive and curative qualities.

Their Style Service is necessarily different from that furnished by other corsets. The scientific and hygienic results can be obtained only when Nemo Corsets fit the figure accurately, comfortably and properly.

Their Economic Service, on which the first two depend represents the long-wearing qualities of Nemo Corsets. No amount of ingenuity in conceiving these valuable inventions would avail if the corsets themselves were not extremely durable. Their intrinsic value is based exclusively on the production cost of the corsets themselves. Their Hygienic Features, although worth much more than the corsets are given entirely free.

does for the figure above the waist what the corset does below.

The Circlet
has neither hooks nor eyes yet it molds the figure perfectly.

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Press Women to Stage Burlesque of Sunday Magazines

By Kate Webber.

A BURLESQUE on the women's magazine sections of Sunday newspapers is to be the feature of the meeting of the Illinois Woman's Press association on Thursday evening, Nov. 3. Members of the association will portray in caricature the different departments of fashions, society, etc.

The active membership of the Illinois Woman's Press association is composed of professional women writers throughout the state, with a provision that admits as associate members women with whom writing is a minor and gratuitous activity.

The association was organized in the middle eighties, and numbered among its sponsors the most prominent literary women in Chicago—and they were numerous, even in that day—a number of whom are still active in the club.

The president, Mrs. Albert W. Evans, just entering upon her second term of office, has, with the coöperation of the board of directors, raised the club to a new standard of achievement the last two years, and is planning still further innovations. The promoting of Illinois authors will be continued and the book fair, for the sale of the works of Illinois authors, which proved such a success last Christmas, will be repeated this winter.

The program chairman is Miss Catherine E. Cook, and under her guidance the sections' chairmen have arranged one of the best year's programs the club has ever had.

One of the most helpful technical features of the association's meetings is the round table, which convenes at the close of the business session on the third Friday of each month.

The officers of the association, aside from the president, are: First vice president, Maude I. G. Olliver; second vice president, Gertrude Willits; third vice president, Mrs. Edward R. Higgins; recording secretary, Mrs. Archibald Rae; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Albert J. Fischer; treasurer, Helen B. Bennett; parliamentarian, Mrs. Clarence G. Goodwin.

MRS. EDWIN ROMBERG.

Mrs. Edwin Romberg is general chairman of the woman's division of the Mount Sinai hospital extension funds campaign, comprising ten divisions of clubwomen's organizations. Miss Mary Francis Kern is the director of the campaign, and headquarters have been opened in room 1341 of the Congress hotel.

Reciprocity day will be observed by the Woman's Allied Drug club Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Hotel Morrison. Elizabeth Whitlock will give an illustrated lecture on "The Psychology of Color and Individuality in Dress." Club members who will serve as models are Miss Rosamond E. Starr, Mrs. George P. Miller, Mrs. Carolyn C. Rosenthal, and Mrs. P. J. Miniter.

THE HOME MAKERS

The progress made during the past decade in the comforts and conveniences of American Homes has been amazing and gratifying.

It is not only in the cities that the call of Better Homes has been heard and answered. In the country each month sees greater care being used in the condition of the American Home. No longer is the plain and cheaply built furniture good enough. The farmer now wants and has the best. This desire has been created by a progressive policy of country stores and by advertising of the city stores.

In the city we see a natural progress of good taste in furnishing. People realize that a quiet but tasteful home atmosphere gives as definite dividends in happiness as well managed, conservative business earns money dividends.

The result is a nation of clean, comfortable homes; of Mothers who have time for other than tiring household tasks; of Children who have a clean and refined opportunity to learn the duties and responsibilities that will surely fall upon them, and of Fathers who will have a delightful and restful home to come to after a hard day's work in the office, factory or fields.

Does not all this connect with peace loving, quiet, forceful men and women and a clean, wholesome business policy?

IMPERIOUS VICTORIA :

By Lytton Strachey

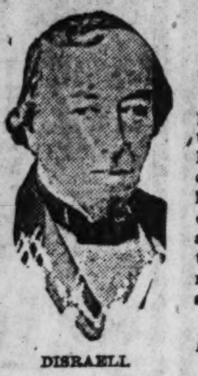
NEW political protagonists—Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Disraeli—now struggled together in the limelight. Victoria, from her post of vantage, watched these developments with that passionate and personal interest which she invariably imported into politics.



DISRAELI.

Her prepossessions were of an unexpected kind. Mr. Gladstone had been the disciple of her revered Peel and had won the approval of Prince Albert; Mr. Disraeli had hounded Sir Robert to his fall with hideous virulence, and the prince had pronounced a man who "had not one single element of a gentleman in his composition."

Yet she regarded Mr. Gladstone with a distrust and dislike which steadily deepened, while upon his rival she lavished an abundance of confidence, esteem, and affection such as Lord Melbourne himself had hardly known.

Disraeli Comes Into Favor

Her attitude toward the Tory minister had suddenly changed when she found that he alone among public men had divined her feelings at Albert's death. Of the others she might have said "they pity me and not my grief," but Mr. Disraeli had understood; and all his condolences had taken the form of reverential eulogies of the departed.

The queen declared that he was "the only person who appreciated the prince." She began to show him special favor, gave him and his wife two of the coveted seats in St. George's chapel at the Prince of Wales' wedding, and invited him to stay a night at Windsor.

When the grant for the Albert memorial came before the house of commons Disraeli, as leader of the opposition, eloquently supported the project. He was rewarded by a copy of the prince's speeches, bound in white morocco, with an inscription in the royal hand. In his letter of thanks he "ventured to touch upon a sacred theme," and in a strain which reëchoed with masterly fidelity the sentiments of his correspondent dwelt at length upon the absolute perfection of Albert.

As for his own acquaintance with the prince, it had been, he said, "one of the most satisfactory incidents of his life; full of refined and beautiful memories, and exercising, as he hopes, over his remaining existence a soothing and exalting influence." Victoria was much affected by "the depth and delicacy of these touches, and henceforward Disraeli's place in her affections was assured.

Disraeli Made Premier

When, in 1866, the Conservatives came into office, Disraeli's position as chancellor of the exchequer and leader of the house, necessarily brought him into a closer relation with the sovereign. Two years later Lord Derby resigned and Victoria, with intense delight and peculiar graciousness, welcomed Disraeli as her first minister.

But only for nine agitated months did he remain in power. The ministry, in a minority in the commons, was swept out of existence by a general election. Yet by the end of that short period the ties which bound together the queen and her premier had grown far stronger than ever before; the relationship between them was now no longer merely that between a grateful mistress and a devoted servant: they were friends.

His official letters, in which the personal element had always been perceptible, developed into racy records of political news and social gossip, written, as Lord Clarendon said, "in his best novel style." Victoria was delighted; she had never, she declared, had such letters in her life, and had never before known everything. In return she sent him, when the spring came, several bunches of flowers, picked by her own hands.

Contention with Gladstone

Upon political questions she was his staunch supporter. "Really, there never was such conduct as that of the opposition," she wrote. And when the government was defeated in the house she was "really shocked at the way in which the house of commons go on; they really bring discredit on constitutional government."

Mr. Gladstone was in his shirt sleeves at Hawarden, cutting down a tree, when the royal message was brought to him. "Very significant," he remarked when he had read the letter, and went on cutting down his tree.

Mr. Gladstone, with his daemonic energy and his powerful majority in the house of commons, was irresistible; and for five years (1869-1874) Victoria found herself condemned to live in an agitating atmosphere of interminable reform—reform in the Irish church and the Irish land system, reform in education, reform in parliamentary elections, reform in the administration of justice.

THE CALL

By Guy Lee

I fain would hurry back to sunny Kansas,
  I long to see the state where I was born;
I used to doubt 'twas one of earth's bonanzas,
  And now and then I held it up to scorn;
But lately something's happened to assure me
  A gracious promise at its rainbow's end;
This bit of news has drifted in to lure me:
  Theyr'e playing golf at Larned and Great Bend.

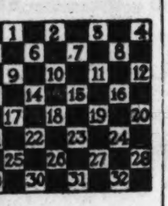
I never saw much virtue in the prairie,
  It seemed a bleak perspective in the past;
In days agone I didn't care to tarry
  Where there was naught but open spaces vast;
But now the wide and roomy vista changeth,
  The panorama has a sweeter blend
Since Progress in its own good time arrangeth
  A country club at Larned and Great Bend.

I have no great ambition for perceiving
  The lowing kine wind slowly o'er the lea;
The golden grain beneath the zephyrs weaving
  Has neither charm nor novelty for me.
But when you dot the plain with green and fairway
  And pit and bunker, why, you may depend
That's something else again. . . . Ho! for an airway
  To speed me out to Larned and Great Bend!

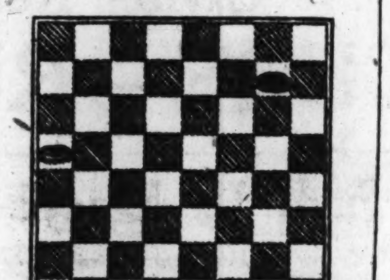
CHECKERBOARD PUZZLES

by P. H. Ketchum

Squares on the checkerboard are numbered from 1 to 32, beginning at the upper left hand corner and running from left to right, as shown on the diagram. It will be necessary to refer to this for the solution to the puzzle. The white squares are used so the checkers will show.



Black men on 8 and 13.
White king on 29.



Black to move and catch the white king in just six moves. Now this king is a slippery article and you may have trouble to catch him in six moves.

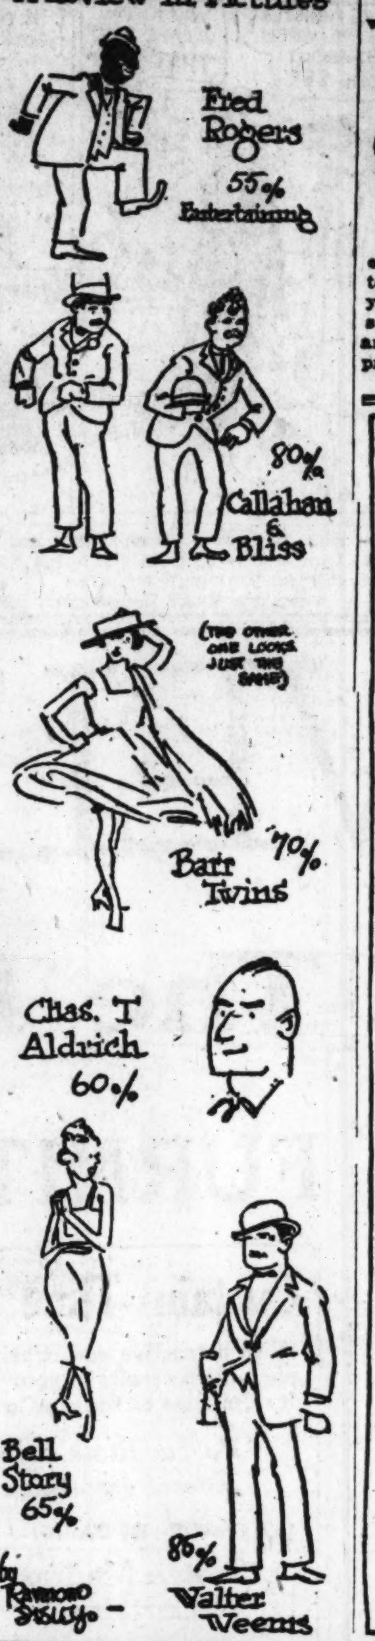
A Review in Pictures



MY FAVORITE on Stage and Screen

Constance Is Refreshing.

When you're just about disgusted with screen stars and you've just seen a revolting picture, doesn't it do your heart good to see Constance Binney?

You live her joys and her sorrows for an hour or more, and you think, "This is the kind of a girl I want my daughter to be."

Coming out of the theater into the early dusk, you pause for a moment to window shop. There is a girl beside you—and when she lifts her head you see that her face is clean and her eyes are clear, and you decide that it's a pretty good old world, after all.

The Cowboy Appeals.

If all the actors were lined up,
And I could have my pick,
I'd choose not Wally,
Doug or Bill,
But that bully cow boy Mix.

I must say he's not good looking,
But I'll bet he's lots of fun;
I like the way he rides
a horse,
And handles a six shooter gun.

I've heard that he is married,
Now doesn't that sound mean?
But I'm sure his wife won't object,
If he's my favorite on the screen.

Marcia Dear—
I'm going to give a Halloween party!

Peg and I had planned the usual shopping, luncheon and matinee today and were walking down Michigan Avenue when we spied Helen gazing raptly into a window. And such a fascinating window display! Everything for a Halloween party.

Right then it struck me—wouldn't it be fun to have one! We rushed inside like children and the promise of the window was more than fulfilled.

Place cards, tally cards, favors, table decorations, dance programs, invitations—everything one could possibly want—and all the most unusual looking.

If the party gives us any more fun than we had selecting these things its going to be a wonderful success.

Of course the place was Hall's on Michigan Avenue, just south of Madison—the same shop I have been writing you about.

Will write you again next week.

Easy and Economical to Take. Results Quick.

Of what use are fine features, with an ugly skin, flabby flesh, sunken cheeks, a scrawny neck or a careworn face? If you want to quickly clear your skin and complexion, put some firm, healthy flesh on your bones, increase your nerve force and power, and look and feel far better, here is a simple test you will find well worth trying: First weigh yourself and measure yourself. ART and ARCHITECTURE

Indian Mound Suggests Idea for War Memorial

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE latest suggestion for a war memorial—and by war we mean, of course, the world war—comes from Evanston and originates in the Chicago School of Architecture, of which the leader and ablest exponent is probably George W. Maher, whose talent is shown plainly in the beauty of the Patten gymnasium on the campus at Northwestern.

"Miss Mary" by Carl van Buskirk, a New York artist who is now exhibiting at his studio on the north side.

The plan as outlined is to assemble a huge earth mound with a base covering some twelve to fifteen acres and a height of 300 feet. This scheme follows the precedent set by prehistoric Americans, who built mounds in various parts of Illinois, Ohio, and other central states, passing down to posterity in this way an indestructible evidence of a vanished race. Material for the proposed mound may be readily secured from the enormous spoil banks which line both sides of the $7,000,000 sanitary canal that at present forms the western boundary of Evanston.

Upon this mound the erection of a memorial building is contemplated. The building (a preliminary sketch of it has been finished by Mr. Maher) surrounds a shaft measuring 350 feet in height, which, added to the proposed 300 foot earth base, would give a total height of 650 feet. This is 105 feet higher than the Washington monument, and nearly three times as high as the Bunker Hill monument.

The canal is no longer to be used for the carriage of sewage. It will be in the due course of time merely an attractive length of pure water, something after the kind seen in so many countries abroad, inclusive and exclusive of Holland. Along both sides of the canal boulevards are to be built. Their goal will be the enormous and beautiful monument born at this moment only in the minds of those who seek to bring it into being. At a nominal cost of less than $10 a person, Chicago in its plans for a city beautiful may count this memorial among its wonders. Time will show whether or not we want it sufficiently to create it out of the present mass of ugly dirt that now abounds along the length of the Evanston sanitary canal.

The beauties of the forest preserves are brought home to one in a striking manner in the exhibit of paintings to be seen for the next ten days on the third floor of the Hamilton club. To be exact, this exhibition, which opened last Tuesday, will remain on view until Nov. 1.

Thirty-three reasons for the keeping and extending of the preserves of Cook county are shown in these canvases. The country in winter and summer, spring and fall, has been painted feelingly by the several artists. Though picnic papers and charred embers are lacking in the foreground of these paintings, yet every once and again you recognize the place where you had lunch that day last August, or the stream where the children paddled when you were changing the tire that so tiresomely had burst. It is all there—all the beauty and peace of the country, which is Chicago's.

Among the artists whose pictures are hung are Conde Hickock, F. C. Peyraud, E. Vognild, Torey Ross, J. H. Carlsen, Carl R. Krafft, Anna L. Stacey, John F. Stacey, Axel Linus, and Svend Svendson.

The annual report of the Chicago Public School Art society has just been issued, and it is interesting reading for those who are concerned with the welfare of children. Peculiarly vital are the reasons given for the society's efforts to introduce good pictures, both copies and originals, into the schools. This bit of civic work should have the encouragement of all of Chicago's citizens.

With the closing today of the various exhibitions that have held forth in the east wing of the Art institute during the last few weeks expectations are roused as to the worth of this year's annual exhibit of American paintings and sculpture that opens there Nov. 3. The large prizes which are offered yearly in this particular exhibition make its day of opening all the more exciting. What will the jury like this year? And who will be the fortunate winner of the gold medals?

Lorado Taft is a popular speaker. His lectures in Fullerton hall of the Art institute are practically always crowded to the doors. To test the value of his audiences' interest he has arranged a series of talks, to be given in addition to the Friday afternoon lectures, on Sunday afternoons at the extremely awkward hour of 5:30 o'clock. By the number of those who will listen to art at this hour the depth of feeling for art may be somewhat gauged—or so he thinks.

On Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock Dudley Crafts Watson will speak in Fullerton hall on "Batik—In History and Practice."

LINES FROM THE PLAY

OLYMPIC.

Barney Bernard and his valet:

"Who's that?"

"A lady to see you, sir."

"What's her name?"

"She didn't give her name."

"Send her away!"

"She—she's not the kind one sends away, sir."

"What kind is she?"

"Beautiful; charming."

"Show her in."

"Whose bag?"

"The—the lady's, sir."

"She brought her bag already? Let her in. (Looks in mirror.) What money will do, eh? Beautiful vimmen are starting to hang around—and at your age, well——"

(Later.)

"You're sick, sir?"

"No—no, I'm not sick. I'm rich, and the doctors just found it out."

"I'm afraid you have too many doctors, sir."

"Is that my fault? They send me from one to the other. You can't get one doctor to do the whole job any more; it's all piece work—like that last one, that lunatic from Chicago. He said all I needed was a monkey gland, and he wanted to give me one for $5,000, and I know where I can get a whole monkey for $18."

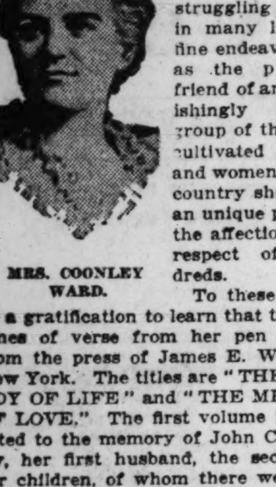
Sweetness of Mrs. Coonley-Ward's Life Echoed in Her Verse—Other Notes on New Books.

BY ELIA W. PEATTIE.

THOUGH Mrs. Lydia Avery Coonley-Ward has led a private life and has never so much as craved any sort of career save the one of generous and ardent living, her name is singularly well known. As an encourager of talent in others and the advocate of high ideas, as the benefactor of many struggling artists in many lines of fine endeavor, and as the prized friend of an astonishingly large group of the most cultivated men and women in this country she holds an unique place in the affections and respect of hundreds.



MRS. COONLEY WARD.

To these it will be a gratification to learn that two volumes of verse from her pen appear from the press of James E. White of New York. The titles are "THE MELODY OF LIFE" and "THE MELODY OF LOVE." The first volume is dedicated to the memory of John C. Coonley, her first husband, the second to her children, of whom there were six.

Through both volumes flows the abundant stream of good will. Few have loved life with such serene and grateful enjoyment as this natural maker of rhymes and utterer of joy. She has rejoiced in her days, and she has been unashamed to give voice to her happiness.

It has been one of her tenets that any one of appreciation and enthusiasm could write poetry if they would cultivate the art. The making of rhythm and rhyme are, in her estimation, arts to be cultivated like the making of music, and she taught her children and encouraged her friends to follow this beautiful amusement. That she has herself succeeded well in incorporating the moods of life in verse is proved by these two books. The hymns in them are of exceptional beauty; the memory verses are tender and poignant, many of the verses are especially well adapted to music—and, indeed, many of Mrs. Ward's songs have already been used by composers. The following verses, selected almost at random, show as no comment can the spirit of Mrs. Ward's poetry:

Sometimes in the city I lose the sense
Of the hurry and rush and the life intense:
The bricks and the mortar fade away;
And I see as plainly as light of day
The blue of skies in the summer's hush,
A bittersweet screen and a barberry bush;
And then all the landscape seems to fill
With the sunflower hedge at the top of the hill.

Ah, the city shuts down upon the life like stone;
In the midst of its crowding the soul is alone.
The heart aches with woes that it cannot reach,
And broods over lessons it cannot teach.
Then memory wakes, and the city flies;
Joy greets the green meadows and azure skies,
And once more the landscape seems to fill
With the sunflower hedge at the top of the hill.

Pleasant lines from one who has found life lovely and who has tried to make it so for others.

Suave Diplomacy and Good Writing.

WARRINGTON DAWSON, born a Charlestonian but for many years an attaché of the American embassy at Paris, has, in writing a book which he hopes will further cement the friendship of the French and the American peoples, performed the sort of a service that best becomes the true diplomat.

This book is a novel entitled "THE GIFT OF PAUL CLERMONT" [Doubleday, Page & Co.]. It tells of the relations between a scholarly and elderly American gentleman and a much troubled, tumultuous French lad who, possessing a sort of genius for fine living, was destined to spend a childhood in the charge of his father's mistress, an intemperate and brutal creature, to be suspected of theft and imprisoned, and eventually to die for his country in the performance of a humble duty.

The book is written very quietly. Not even the descriptions of the German advance or the sacrifice of the leading characters of the tale lift it from a certain sad, serene, literary calm reminiscent of certain French books of the last century. The narrator is sometimes the American scholar, sometimes the author himself, but the tone remains the same. It is all delicately gray and exercises a pensive fascination.

The hero, Paul Clermont, whose impulsive generosity could find nothing to give save love and life, is gravely charming. There is an air of distinction about him that marks him everywhere. The story has, beyond question, a genuine vitality in spite of its curious tone of contemplative narration.

Elia's Belated but Welcome Note on Some Fine Work.

LIKE a drift of autumn moths the books come winging in, some bright and beautiful, some dull and nondescript, some exotic and challenging, and some bedraggled and broken of wing.

And among them is one that exceeds all the others, a creature as delicate, yet as royal, as a purple emperor probing the sweets of a gaillardia. This is "MESSER MARCO POLO," by Donn Byrne. [The Century company.] Donn Byrne has not vaunted the fact in the ingenious and sympathetic fiction which he has offered to the public in periodicals and between book covers the last decade or more, but he is a scholar of attainment, with a power of creating atmosphere as fine as that of Joseph Hergesheimer and a richness of imagination equal to that of Joseph Brach Cabell, minus Cabell's libidinous obsession.

Every one knows Marco Polo for a Venetian traveler and a great reporter of wonders. Donn Byrne knows him for a lover and one who, in a scented garden by the Lake of Cranes, made love to the daughter of Kubla Khan and was held by the crystal chains of her love till the day of her death. After which he served the great Khan with fealty, and, a bitter man, returned after many years to the tarnished glories of his Venice. Tarnished, that is, in his esteem, since, for all of the voices and the instruments of Saint Mark's in his ears, he would be hearing above them "the little drums of China. . . . All the sunlight," so he lamented, "will be glinting on the Grand Canal, and the little rain of China. . . . the little rain of China will be falling in my heart."

I can hardly recall anything by an American so richly decorated and with so exquisite a design. It carries one away, as literature may in its loveliest phases, into a land of phantasy, not trivial but beautiful, serene and enchanting. It is lovely in the sense that a moonlit Chinese garden is lovely—a garden with lovers in it. Indeed, that is precisely what it is about; and also in the garden is an old, sad poet and a great Khan, and a sorcerer, and love and parting—beauty, wisdom, power, magic, life, and death.

I spoke of Byrne as an American. He is so by birth, but he has an inheritance from Ulster, and he possesses the witchery of Ireland of the south plus the direction, the meaning, and the character of Ireland of the north. Fanciful as James Stevens, he has what Stevens will not permit himself to have—passion and climax, a compass to steer by and a harbor in which to weigh anchor.

Miss Wells Stumbles Again.

CAROLYN WELLS' "mystery" tale "THE LUMINOUS FACE," is not much of a mystery, nor, indeed, much of anything. It is a disgracefully careless book and what with its inconsistencies, its bad grammar, its lack of interest, and absolutely inane characterization, leaves one wondering what has become of Miss Wells' sense of humor. If it be not quite extinct, it should keep her from writing such a book. [Doran.]

Now It Comes Out What a Nice Man Captain Kidd Was

LOST SHIPS AND LONELY SEAS, by Ralph D. Paine, author of "The Fighting Fleets": octavo, pp. 418; 16 illustrations. The Century Company.

SUNDAY BOOKS—Insert under italic matter in John Carroll's review of "Lost Ships" on LIT GALLEY 109. Galley starts with 3 line head reading "Now It Comes Out," etc.

Ralph D. Paine is the author of thirty books, more than twenty of them having to do with the sea, and is recognized as a writer who is also a thorough seaman. During the war he was given the privilege of spending six months with the British and American navies, during that time cruising aboard submarines, destroyers, trawlers, and battleships. When not "heading for the open sea," as he puts it, he lives on a farm in New Hampshire. He is a member of the state legislature and the state board of education.

BY JOHN C. CARROLL.

IT is not essential to read the testimony in the shipping board investigation, to feel that Capt. William Kidd, long regarded as the skipper who put the ace in piracy, was a much maligned man.

Ralph D. Paine shrives him in "Lost Ships and Lonely Seas." Mr. Paine does that at the expense of those fine old Yankee merchants of more than a century ago who supplied family tree timber second only to that of the Mayflower.

"Colonial merchants," Mr. Paine says on page 32, "outwardly the pattern of respectability, were in secret partnership with the swarm of pirates that infested the American coast and waxed fat on English commerce of the Indian ocean."

The writer tells that this disturbed William III. and that when Richard Coote was made governor of New York and Massachusetts in 1695, he was specially charged by the king to stop such practices. His selection for that purpose was William Kidd.

"How Capt. Kidd," Mr. Paine writes, "sent out to catch pirates, was convicted of turning pirate himself rather than sail home empty handed, is another story. Fate has played strange tricks with the memory of this seventeenth century seafarer who never cut a throat or scuttled a ship, and who was hanged at Execution Dock for the excessively unromantic crime of cracking the skull of his mutinous gunner with a wooden bucket."

That pirates were used as trade regulators, is indicated by Mr. Paine on page 132:

"The Christian nations of Europe deliberately granted immunity to these nests of sea robbers in Algiers, Morocco, Tunis, and Tripoli in order that they might prey on the ships and sailors of weaker nations and destroy their commerce. This ignoble spirit was reflected in a speech of Lord Sheffield in parliament in 1784.

"'It is now probable that the American states will not have a very free trade in the Mediterranean. It will not be to the interest of the great maritime powers to protect them from the Barbary states. If they know their interests, they will not encourage the Americans to become ocean carriers. That the Barbary states are advantageous to the maritime powers is certain.'"

It will be recalled that later the Americans, under Commodore Preble, and to the tune of American guns, accompanied by the crumbling defenses of the city of Tripoli, ended that menace to their shipping.

All that, however, is but a meager glimpse at the book, which holds seventeen true sea stories. In those narratives appear men who drifted for six months and 2,000 miles on the derelict that was the good brig Polly; eighty refugees from the wreck of the Blenden Hall, cast on Inaccessable island, wearing red broadcloth clothing, and quarreling about their station in life and their proper tasks. With that group was a full sailor who made his home in an empty gin cask.

Then there is the story of more than one hundred from the French frigate Medusa, bound for Senegal, who were afloat on a partly submerged raft, who fought with pistol and sword in the dark, who, reduced to twenty-seven, finally threw the twelve worst wounded overboard. The remaining fifteen were rescued.

There is Nikola Monacre, born Jamieson, an accomplished Scotchman, turned pirate in spite of himself, and who turned back, saw many old comrades hanged, but who died respected and near Boston.

In the book, too, are real sailor kings of little islands, Barbary pirates, assorted pirates, wild natives of strange islands, and the story of what happened to the expedition of La Pérouse, the Great French explorer, to seek for whom even the revolutionary leaders had Louis XVI. send an expedition of two ships. They found no trace, but a Yankee skipper about forty years later did.

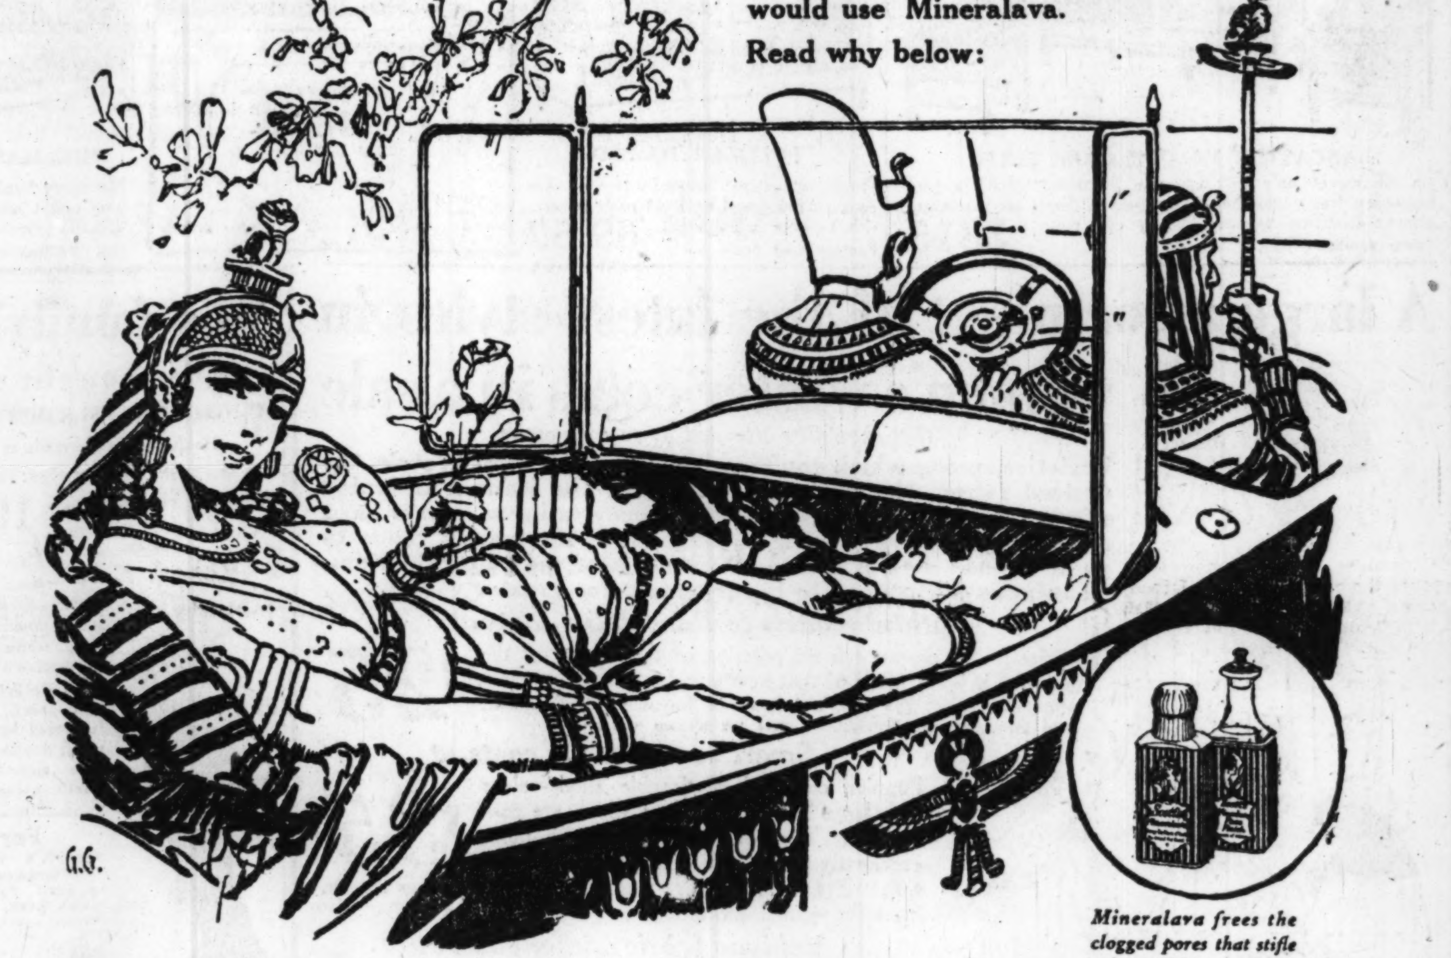
Cleopatra Would Ride in a Car To-day and for the same reason, would use Mineralava.

Read why below:



Mineralava frees the clogged pores that stifle a beautiful complexion.

By VERNON RADCLIFFE

CLEOPATRA, the beautiful, the magnificent, would never be satisfied with ancient Egyptian methods of conveyance, were she privileged to live to-day. In place of her chariot, she would speed in a car. In place of her famous barge with chanting slaves, she would own a yacht. And is there any reason to suppose that she would continue the use of ancient soaps, creams and lotions for the complexion, when modern life offers something so much better?

The Menace of Fading Beauty

The life to-day of trains and motor cars and dusty city streets is different from the indolent age of Cleopatra. To-day, the trains roar back and forth into the cities, belching smoke and dust. The streets throb continuously from the exhausts of jamming motor cars. The factories send up clouds of sooty vapor which seep down in gritty particles. All this dirt and dust becomes a part of the complexion, forcing itself deep down into the pores.

It is these impurities, lodged at the very bottom of the pores, which cause practically all complexion blemishes—blackheads, dry skin, enlarged pores, oily skin, pimples and sallowness.

The care of the complexion has become increasingly necessary, increasingly hard. Beauty has been fading earlier and earlier.

Your Skin Must Breathe

A skin cannot be healthy, a complexion cannot be beautiful, if clogged pores do not permit the skin to breathe, to eliminate, to throw off impurities. When these pores are free and functioning, the complexion has a natural glow. When they are clogged, fermentation sets in, the face sinks into sallowness, and wrinkles and blemishes. With all the lotions that you put on, is there any assurance of this foreign matter coming out—that tired Nature can expel the added burden in the pores?

Yet these impurities must come out. Nothing put on the face can possibly be of benefit if the pores beneath are clogged, and to-day they are clogged as they never were before.

Old Treatments Fail

Women have turned in desperation to massage, the vigorous action of human hands. But unscientific face massage has made more old women than age. Under guise of a benefit, it is a wholesale destroyer of beauty. To parboil your skin with half scalding water, and knead and maul the muscles of your face is bound to be injurious. A minute's thought will tell you so. It stands to reason that it breaks down tissue. Massaging will not even cleanse properly, that is down to the bottom of the pores. It merely slicks off the surface. It does not remove dirt, foreign substances and impurities from the place where they do the real damage—down below the surface of the skin. Your Beauty Specialist will tell you so.

Vivaudou's Discovery

Very recent has been the complete change in beauty method by the best specialists and parlors. Victor Vivaudou, famous perfumer, discovered that the best Beauty Shops in this country were using a preparation so wonderful and immediate in its effects upon the complexion, that he arranged for its sole distribution in the home. He says, "Here in America, I have found the one thing which ladies in Paris and all over the world have yearned for—a care of the complexion which is at once natural, convenient and successful—MINERALAVA.

"I have seen its amazing benefits—its amazing success. It is delightful to use. No more wonderful contribution to comfort and cleanliness has ever been devised!"

Answers Modern Needs

Mineralava is the one way to a good complexion—the only way—so startling, so revolutionary in idea, so different from any treatment that you have known that you cannot afford not to know it—to try it.

Instead of being just one more thing to put on the face, to rub in the face, adding to the accumulation of grease and impurities in the pores, Mineralava takes out. It cleanses the clogged pores—washes off—and is gone, all in twelve minutes.

What Mineralava Does

Mineralava, Nature's Beauty Clay, originated by Mrs. M. G. Scott and perfected by her through 23 years of scientific research and experiment, is applied wet to the face, neck and hands, and accomplishes two important results—impossible with other preparations. It draws impurities from the pores and it tightens sagging muscles.

As it dries it contracts, and you can feel its medicinal ingredients penetrating the depths of the pores. You can feel it withdrawing all foreign matter, leaving the pores free and clean.

You can feel the wrinkles being smoothed out. You can feel the flabby skin being made tight and firm. You can feel the cleansing purifying blood tingling through each tiny vein. When Mineralava is thoroughly dry, cold water easily removes it.

Mineralava—Cold Water Face Finish

Immediately, a blooming youthfulness glows and radiates from the cheeks. The long stifled face pores breathe again.

Mineralava Face Finish is a necessary skin food and tonic, acts as a mild bleach and forms a perfect base for your face powder. It has amazing benefit because you can apply it at the proper time, after the pores are cleansed.

Lasting results follow from the use of Mineralava, the cleanser, Cold Water, the invigorant, and Face Finish, the food—in combination.

Lasting Beauty of Complexion

Continue this treatment twice a week and we guarantee, whether you are sixteen or sixty, a beautiful complexion as long as you live—free from blackheads, pimples, enlarged pores, wrinkles, blemishes of all kinds—striking in its beauty and youthfulness.

Ask for Mineralava TO-DAY

Go to your druggist or department store to-day and ask for the Mineralava set containing fifteen home treatments. If yours has not got it, do not be satisfied with an imitation. Write Mrs. Scott herself. She will gladly inform you where it may be obtained. You may try Mineralava right away by mailing the coupon with 25c for the demonstration tube of two full treatments.

ect of the book for us. We are not ing kowtowed to by little brown others who, seeking the way, say humbly, "You please, master, show You make all clear, and those we will do."

Not at all.

In the essay which opens the book—"A World Unsafe for Democracy"—Yamagata's manner of approach and locution is more in the manner of: "How do you get that way?"

He is speaking on page 19 of those whom we speak of as undesirable aliens and he would do with them precisely what we have done. Thus: "Before the missionaries, the teachers, the doctors, . . . before the newspaper editors who . . . preach against Japan's militarism and imperialism . . . before these agitators do any further harm, let them be unceremoniously hustled out of the country, or, to use more dignified language, deported as undesirables. . . . Nature will doubtless fill the vacuum that their departure causes."

In this book you will find the little brown brother of your childlike and [illegible]ful Sunday school tradition resourceful in occidental allusion, a glutton for occidental statistics—especially statistics relating to armament—a man of wide reading in the belles lettres as well as in economics, and, as a result of that wide reading, a dialectician with an ingratiating gift for embellishing argument with those literary allusions which make scholars kin the world over—except when scholars lose their tempers. Within the compass of a score of pages of "What Japan Thinks" you will find the little brown brother quoting Balzac, quoting Henry ["Education"] Adams, quoting the less known Brooks Adams, quoting Roger Bacon, quoting Bacon of Verulam, quoting the Atlantic Monthly, quoting Henley, though by a slip crediting "I am the captain of my soul" to Whitman. They employ logic, irony satire, a little sentiment, a great deal of chauvinism, and an immense amount of common sense. Sophisticated as they are, they love, as all orientals do, a bit of parable.

Here, in the course of Editor Yamagata's paean to authority, discipline, order, and organization, is a prime specimen:

"The agitators who are preaching democracy and freedom in various parts of the world today are out of harmony with nature's teachings. . . If one of them was seized with a bad attack of palsy or St. Vitus dance, in which all of his fingers and toes and other members wished to go their own free and individual ways, he would speedily, so far as his own personality was concerned, become an ardent advocate of autocracy. . . . An individual with shaking head, twitching arms, jerking legs, and a stuttering tongue would be absurd if he got up to recite Whitman's 'I Am the Captain of My Soul.'"

That, aside from the detail that Whitman did not write "Invictus," is cogent, pungent, and sane.

Cant Me No Cantings.

To cant they make no recourse, as you may discern from these detached laconicisms:

"Self-denial on the part of an individual is occasionally met with, though very rarely. Self-denial on the part of a nation is something which we can hardly even dream of.

"After all, we might as well recognize the fact that, in spite of the upward trend of evolution, we are still merely human beings built on a substratum of neolithic man.

"Simple honesty requires the admission that, without becoming monarchical in practice, if not in form, the United States government could never have given the help which the lordly and supercilious Briton now so derides."

Dr. Dernberg's Apothegm

And especially this, which, from the point of view of any proud, highly individualized, and constantly developing people, cannot but appear a complete extenuation of that proper self-protection which, as Dr. Dernberg used to say, runs into mad militarism and waste, partly—almost solely—because the ingenuity and the resources of mankind have outrun its moral sense:

"But for her army and navy and great military leaders Japan would have become an English or Russian outpost, and instead of being the sturdy and efficient race that they are the Japanese today might have become a subject race, bearing the yoke of a European rule."

No more shall here be quoted from this important book lest the reader, by having a smattering, shall think that he has the book. It is too valuable a book for an American so to brush aside. It presents problems as old as "Carthago delenda est" and as imminent as the payment of the taxes of next year, or the year after that, or the year after that. Such problems hold in their womb inevitabilities for great good or for terrifying ill. Those nearly seventy millions on the other side of the sphere do not much like us and little trust us. It is possible that we do not thoroughly understand them or the grievances some of which they indubitably feel, some of which they probably affect to feel. That we purpose aggression against them every informed American would calmly deny. Every uninformed one would vehemently deny, for that is the way of the uninformed. And yet—and yet—over what a powder magazine may not both nations be living, on what precipices may we not both be teetering, while that widest ocean called Pacific smiles between us.

Carefully studied, this book on what Japan thinks of itself, of China, of us, of democracy, of the Monroe Doctrine, of Mikadoism, of liberalsim, of navalism and militarism, of the white problem in Asia and the brown in America, and of Christianity, could be and ought to be the way not to a powder magazine but to sanity and good understanding.

In international affairs it makes little difference whether a grievance entertained by one side or the other to a controversy be a valid grievance or not. The fact that one side or the other thinks its grievance valid is usually sufficient to precipitate matters.

The knowing, the getting together, is all.

The wise William Hazlitt said—

"We can hardly hate any one that we know."

Publishers could not take the risk as they would under normal conditions. Were the publishers profiteers, as chimed by the writer of the article in question, they certainly would keep their old titles listed and publish at least as many new ones as in former years. It is incomprehensible to us that a paper of the standing of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE would so unjustly attack one of the leading industries of the country and one that has supported the paper since its first issue. Why They Come Down

The following letter has been received:

"Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, N. Y., Oct. 18, 1921.

"Eye Witness:

"Dear Sir: Your recent article on the prices of books strikes a most responsive note in the hearts of Doubleday, Page & Co., although we feel that you hardly do us full justice. I inclose herewith a circular letter sent out to the book trade generally wherein we outline our position on the subject of prices. If I may say so, Doubleday, Page & Co. were the first to reduce prices after the cost of materials began to recede. In January of this year our whole list, with few exceptions, was reduced very materially.

"One special feature of this price reduction which may interest you is the fact that we have made special leather bindings of a number of important popular books such as, 'Alice Adams,' 'The Beloved Woman,' 'Her Father's Daughter,' 'Vera,' and 'The Girls,' which sell in the retail book trade for $2, an advance in price of only 25 cents over the new price of $1.75 which we are charging for all of our fiction, and, if I may say so, we are making a reasonable profit on both bindings. I am sending you copies of 'Alice Adams' and 'Vera' in the leather binding with our compliments in the hope that these facts on the subject of book prices may be taken into consideration by you should you write further about them. With all best wishes, we remain, yours very truly,

"DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.,
"H. E. MAULE,
"Editorial Dept."

[This is the circular mentioned in the foregoing]:

"REDUCED RETAIL PRICES.

"To Our Friends in the Book Trade:

"Last January we became convinced that when the cost of material fell from 30 to 50 per cent readers would only buy freely when the price of books was reduced. We then decided to do three things, which have cost us many thousands of dollars, but which we hope in the end will be found to be fundamentally sound and will yield an advantage:

"(1) We improved the quality of our books; (2) we reduced the prices; (3) and we gave more liberal discounts.

"We hope this fall to get the benefit of this pioneer work. We are sending you herewith a little poster which we are putting up in our own book stores. We find by experience that calling attention to the price of the novels and other books which have been reduced enlarges the sale.

"You know where you stand on Doubleday, Page & Co.'s books. There will be no further reduction unless conditions change materially next year. The greatest trouble that any one in the book business can possibly have is restricted sales. If the public can be convinced that their demands for lower prices are being honestly met we fee sure that sales will be increased.

"I feel so strongly on this subject that I am troubling you with this personal letter. Any suggestions that you can give us will be gladly received.

"Yours very truly,

The Story of a Dog That Died

BY A LADY WHO IS KIND TO DOGS.

To one who, like those to whom the tale is dedicated, has "loved and lost a dog," the little book of "Nancy," by Louis Dodge [Scribner's Sons], will have a peculiar and poignant appeal.

It pictures the fascinating and ingratiating ways of Nancy, only to make one more truly feel the void her pitiful death created in the heart of the author. Her companions in his esteem, "Si Slocomb" and "Rags," are no less lovingly depicted, so that the reader will experience a sad pleasure as the endearing ways of his own particular four footed, warm hearted friend are brought to mind.

NANCY.

The pictures, from photographs of the three dogs, make one long to meet them and they explain, too, the devotion of the author, who surely belongs to the inner circle of dog lovers.

A PLEASANT knack of rhyme, the trick of hitting off in verse odd news of the day, and much harmless good humor—these constitute the chief quality of Edward Anthony's "MERRY-GO-ROUNDELAYS" [Century], a volume the contents of which have already seen light in humorous publications.

Model Review—Brief, Informing, and Decisive

BY HOWARD ELLIS.

[Of The Tribune Law Department.]

PUTNAM'S HANDY LAW BOOK FOR THE LAYMAN, by Albert Sidney Bolles. .1 vol.; pocket size.

It is an ancient adage that the lawyer who represents himself has a fool for a client. It is doubly true that the layman who acts upon his own legal knowledge has a fool for an adviser. In any event, this pocket size volume, topically arranged in alphabetical order, is of no real value.

One who would attempt to order his legal affairs by reference to this book might save the overhead charge of a lawyer, but he would certainly incur the operating expenses of numerous legal difficulties.

HALL CAINE'S Novel Has Become a Storm Center

THE MASTER OF MAN

Some have condemned it as "an apology for sin." Eminent critics, such as the Bishop of London, Edwin Markham and others, praise it as a great and inspiring romance. In an article "Why I Wrote the Master of Man" the author has written a stinging reply to his critics. A copy will be mailed to any one who wishes to read it.

▪The Poisoner▪

He was a genius. His music held thousands spellbound. Yet, even as they listened, they felt that their hearts were being stirred to evil.

And he? What was the sinister thing that threatened him—that communicated itself to his audiences in spite of him?

Read this story of a man who was hunted down by the secret in his own soul, and of how he triumphed in the end.

DUST — An Epic of the Kansas Prairies

The story of dust that reluctantly yielded up success to a struggling man, only to claim its price from a woman. The careful study of a marriage—a story that could not have been written by a man or woman alone, but only by a man and woman facing together frankly and wholesomely the great human problem. Mr. and Mrs. E. Haldeman-Julius have created a story that will not soon be forgotten.

EDNA FERBER

When Edna Ferber wrote the "EmmaMc Chesney" stories a wave of approval fixed for her an enviable place among American authors. "Cheerful by Request" and "Half Portions" turned the sweep of literary criticism high in her favor. Her magazine stories have commanded tremendous popularity. Edna Ferber writes with the impulsive gesture of a distinctive personality.

The Girls

"This story is about great-aunt Charlotte Thrift, spinster, aged seventy-four; her niece and namesake, Lottie Payson, spinster, aged thirty-two; and Lottie's niece and namesake, Charley Kemp, spinster, aged eighteen and a half. If you are led by this to exclaim, aghast, 'A story about old maids!' you are right; it is. Perhaps, though, after all, one couldn't call great-aunt Charlotte an old maid . . . perhaps, too, the term is inappropriate for vigorous, alert, and fun-loving Lottie. For that matter, a glimpse of Charley in her white, woolly sweater and gym pants might cause you to demand a complete retraction of the term!"

FAR TO SEEK — Maud Diver

"One of the really fine novels of the year. Mrs. Diver tells her story so well and with such sympathy and understanding that her book stands out with distinction. It is all done with the literary charm that has given her so high a rank among the novelists of the day."—Boston Herald. $2.00

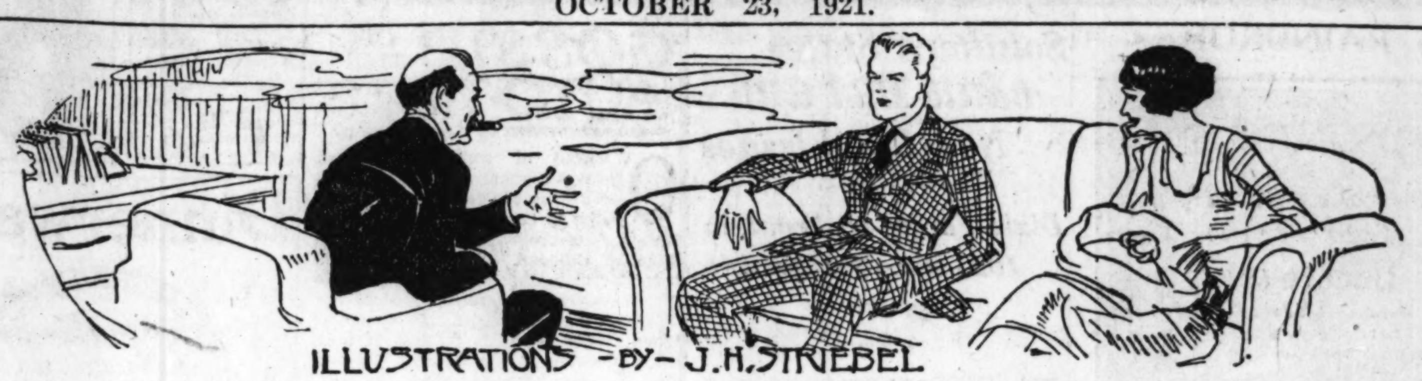
THE POTTERS

Pa Helps Mamie Entertain.

By J. P. McEVOY

PROLOGUE.

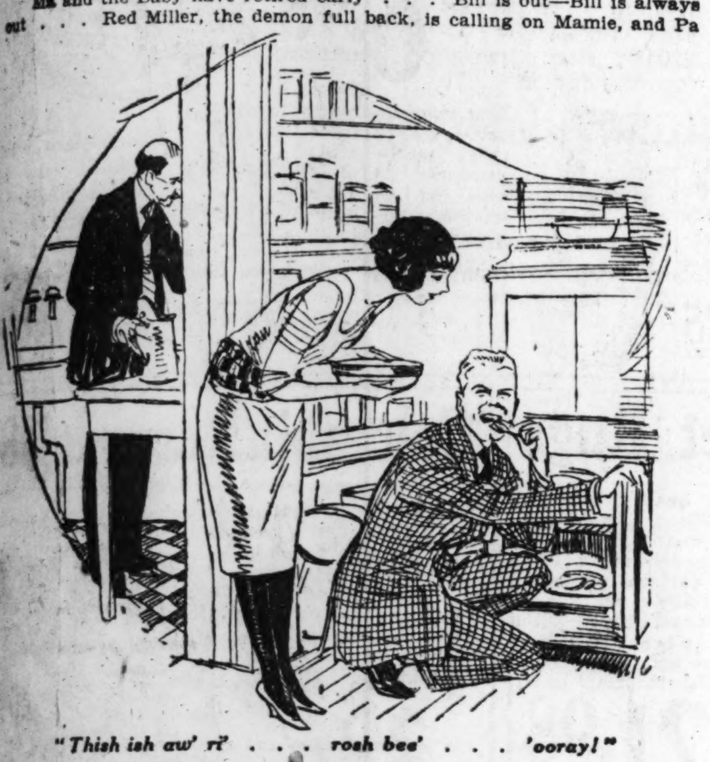
There is something pathetic about paternity in the primate . . . some insects order their affairs with more finesse . . . the mother nonchalantly eats the fortunate father before his children grow up to make him realize how superfluous he is around the house . . . the Tibetans, it is said, more nearly approximate the proper procedure . . . at the wedding feast the mother-in-law is cooked ceremoniously and eaten with great gusto . . . undoubtedly this is the groom's gesture of protest against her pre-nuptial chaperonage . . . but mothers are mild chaperons compared to fathers, and Mamie Potter will tell you that Pa is the most poisonous chaperon of all.



ILLUSTRATIONS -BY- J.H.STRIEBEL

Scene I.—In the Living Room.

Ma and the Baby have retired early . . . Bill is out—Bill is always out . . . Red Miller, the demon full back, is calling on Mamie, and Pa is sitting up to help her entertain him . . . Mamie is so grateful . . . O, yes, so grateful!



"Thish ish aw' ri' . . . rosh bee' . . . 'ooray!"

PA (with enthusiasm, hitching his chair closer to the couch on which Red and Mamie are sitting very tensely):
When I was a feller the age of you
I was consider'ble athalete, too.
I rassled at a hundred and thirty-three,
And the bigger they came—why, the softer for me.
MILLER (trying to appear interested—a tremendous effort):
I'll bet that you can go some yet—you look as though you might.
MAMIE (with a meaning look at Pa):
I think you'd like the movies, Pa . . . there's a dandy show tonight.
PA (ignoring look and remark):
I'm sorter fat and on the blink,
But I'm not as slow as you might think
When I was young I sure was fast—
And wind! Believe me, I could last.
I remember the time . . .
MAMIE (to Pa):
I heard them say
There's a dandy play with Charlie Ray,
But after tonight they will take it away.
PA (not to be derailed):
Where was I at? O, yes, I know;
I remember the time some years ago
I rassled a fellow named—let me see—
I think it was Green—no, Brown—dear me,
Perhaps it was Brown.
MAMIE (desperately):
It might have been White.
Just look, it's a wonderful moonlight night,
And the walk to the corner will do you good;
You'd like the movie, I'm sure you would.

(As a matter of fact, it's raining . . . it would be, of course.)

PA (blandly):
I don't believe that I'd care for the show.
Where was I at? O, yes, I know.
I remember the time some years ago
I rassled a fellow named—let me see—
Why can't I remember his name? Dear me!
MILLER (internally):
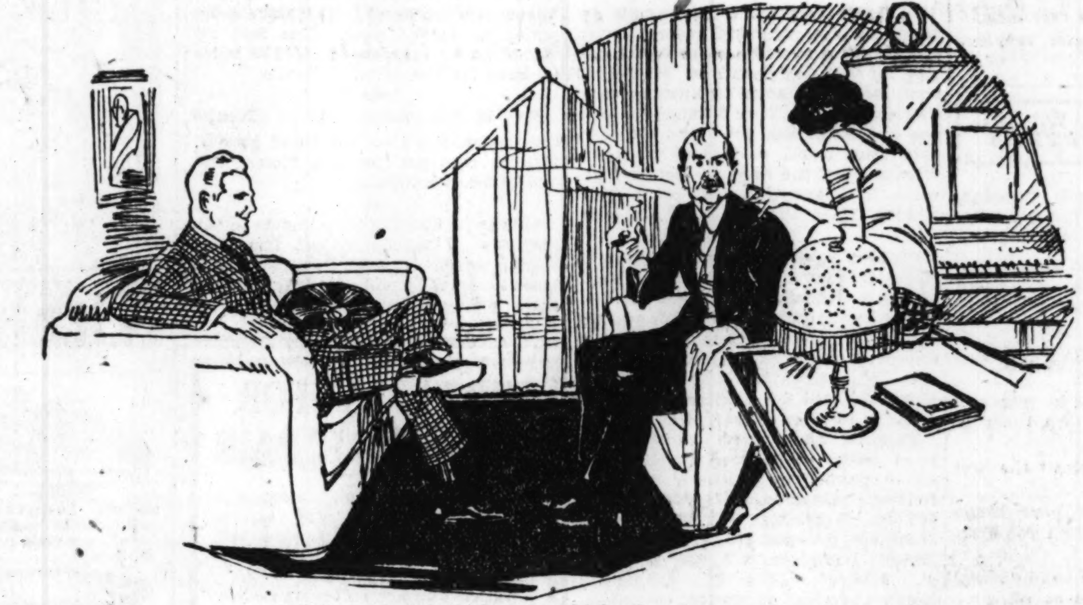
For the love of Mike, man, go to bed!
(to Pa) You thought his name was Brown, you said.



"A good night's sleep would be fine for you, dear."

MAMIE (to Red):
Dad doesn't rest nearly as much as he might,
And he works awful hard; he looks tired tonight.
Perhaps you and I are a bore to him here—
(to Pa, with a savage look)
A good night's sleep would be fine for you, dear.
MILLER (eagerly):
O, yes, Mr. Potter, Mamie is right—
You do look a little bit tired tonight.
MAMIE (gaily):
We'll go to the kitchen and make some fudge.
(to Pa, not so gaily)
You can't help, Dad, so you needn't budge.

(Maybe that'll get rid of him . . . we've got to manage it some way, goodness knows.)

Scene II.—In the Kitchen.

So Mamie guides Miller out into the kitchen, hoping that Pa will take the hint . . . vain hope! Miller makes a bee-line for the icebox . . . a football hero has bankrupted many a home . . . eat? . . . ooooooooh!

MAMIE (to Pa, with smoldering eyes):
Whaddye think you're going to have?
PA (with heavy parental humor):
I thought I'd brew me a little Jav'.

(Nobody laughs at this gay sally but Pa.)

MAMIE (pouring sugar into the fudge . . . even sugar can't make it sweet for her now in her present mood):
I hope I'll have pretty good luck this way.
(to herself)
I hadn't had any tonight, I'll say.
MILLER (at the icebox, with a mouthful of cold roast beef):
Thish ish aw' ri' . . . rosh bee' . . . 'ooray!
MAMIE (tenderly):
Like some sandwiches? How about cheese?
Give us your order—we strive to please.

(Mamie knows in her intuitive feminine way that the œsophagus leads straight to the heart and that there is something altogether irresistible to the fascinated male in the apparition of a pretty girl assembling food for him with her own fair hands . . and now if Pa would only go to bed, or they could get away . . . ah, an idea!)

MAMIE (with whisper to Red):
Did you bring your car when you came tonight?
MILLER (with an intelligent gleam in his eye):
What a bully idear . . . say, you're all right!
MAMIE (bustling around with the sandwiches, fudge, coffee, etc. . . . in great good humor):
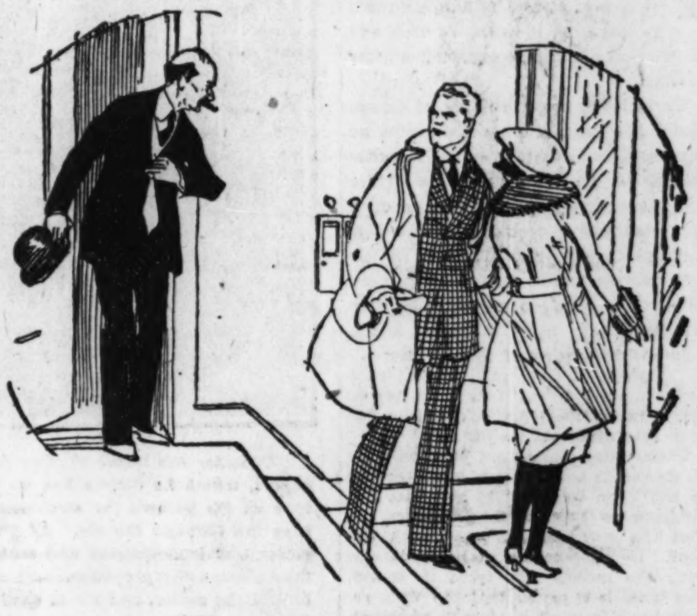
Sit down here, Dad—just help yourself;



"There simply isn't room for three."

You'll find the sugar on the shelf.
Make some sandwiches—here's the bread.
(to Red) Put some fudge in your pockets, Red,
And now let's go—Dad's fixed all right.
PA (alarmed):
Why, where are you going this time of the night?
MAMIE (exiting to hall and grabbing coat off rack):
Red's going to take me out for a ride;
He has his roadster parked outside.
MILLER (rushing on his hat and coat):
We'll just go out for a little spin.
We won't be long; we'll be right in.
PA (getting his hat and coat):
Well, that's a good idear, b'gee—
A little ride will be good for me.
MILLER (with a sad look):
I wish I could take you, honestlee,
But there simply isn't room for three.
MAMIE (gaily, to Pa, as she drags Miller out the door):
We'll be back real soon; good-by, good luck!
(to Red) Nix on the speech . . . c'mon, let's duck.

And out they go for a ride in the rain, leaving Pa wondering in a vague, confused way just how it all happened.

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

Dairymen's Committee to Scan Marketing Methods; Pure Bred Hogs Rapidly Replacing Grade Herds

By Frank Ridgway.

IRONING out the wrinkles of the dairy industry of the United States is the big task that the farmers' dairy marketing committee of eleven has just started to accomplish. The committee, appointed by J. R. Howard of the farm bureau a few weeks ago, is now making a thorough study of every phase of dairy marketing in this country. It will also investigate the methods of marketing dairy products in Denmark and Ireland.

At the initial meeting of the committee members, held at St. Paul recently, subcommittees were selected to study the different phases of marketing, including fluid milk marketing organizations, marketing cheese and butter, and marketing of dairy by-products. Two other special subcommittees will make a careful study of coöperative laws and coöperative advertising.

The line of investigation mapped out for the dairy committee is somewhat similar to the study of coöperative marketing that is now being made in the grain and live stock fields. All of the work will be along coöperative lines. According to the plans, the chief purpose of this committee will be to study the various dairy marketing organizations; to provide plans for marketing organizations in the unorganized territory; to strengthen existing organizations wherever possible; to recommend plans for the correlation of the various dairy products coöperative marketing activities in a national way, and such other matters as the committee may consider valuable in the interest of the producers and consumers.

Dairy Industry Highly Organized.

With all this assigned, it is apparent that the committee members have a big piece of work to do. There are more organizations in dairying than in any other field in agriculture, and they are built up in a variety of ways, adding to the complexities of standardizing, so that good things may be accomplished in a national coöperative way. Greater coöperation, dairymen believe, will enable the producer to get a greater share of the money paid for his product, which will, in turn, enable the dairyman to produce a better grade of products, and eventually he hopes it will mean a lower price to the consumer.

The committee is starting out with the feeling that if dairy products are to be marketed successfully they must satisfy the consumer. Along with their study of the producers' problems, the consumers' interests will also be carefully considered. The good and bad features of the various organizations in dairying will be studied. Study will be made not only of the plants, but an attempt will be made to find out whether the producer and the ultimate consumer are satisfied with the various methods of marketing dairy products in the different parts of the country.

Committee Will Have Wide Scope.

To be sure that all angles of dairy marketing problems are looked after carefully, the committee was selected to represent various branches. Not only groups from a geographical standpoint, but factions within different dairying districts are represented on the committee. With all interests and territories included, the plans worked out by the committee of eleven will surely be national in scope.

The two features of this nation-wide committee that differ from the plan followed by the live stock and grain committees will be the study made of coöperative law and advertising. Coöperative laws of different states will be studied to see if some plan of dairy marketing can be devised that will conform to them. The question of how far the dairy farmer should go in advertising his products has been under discussion for many years, and this will be one of the main tasks of the coöperative advertising subcommittee in its investigation and survey of the field.

The committee includes Richard Pattee, Massachusetts, chairman; E. B. Heaton, Illinois, secretary; C. Bechtelheimer, Iowa; Milo D. Campbell, Michigan; F. H. Harvey, California; Harry Hartke, Kentucky; C. L. Hawley, Oregon; Henry Krumrey, Wisconsin; C. Larsen, Illinois; John D. Miller, Pennsylvania, and H. B. Nickerson, Minnesota.

All Practical Dairymen.

The committee of eleven is especially well fitted to handle their work for every one of them has had experience in marketing products of the dairy. The chairman is secretary and manager of the New England Milk Producers' association. Mr. Nickerson is president of the Minnesota Co-operative Creamery association. The Wisconsin Cheese Producers' federation is headed by Mr. Krumrey. For five years Mr. Campbell has been president of the National Milk Producers' federation. Mr. Miller owns and operates a dairy farm and is vice president of the Dairyman's league, the big organization that supplies milk to New York City. Besides owning a herd of Jerseys, Mr. Hartke is a director of the National Milk Producers' association. Mr. Harvey is a director of the Northern California Milk Producers' association. Illinois is represented on the committee by Mr. Heaton, who is director of the dairy marketing department of the American Farm Bureau, and Mr. Larsen, head of the dairy marketing department of the state farm bureau.

THROUGH the emancipation of the pure bred hog from speculative slavery, the real hog raisers of this country have been given a chance to produce pork of high quality at a reasonable cost. Farmers issued their protest against the high priced pure bred several months ago; the proclamation soon followed, and within the last year hundreds and even thousands of herds of grade hogs in the middle west have been replaced by pure breds. Pure breds were probably never in such great demand, and the price is extremely low.

From practically every hog lot in the corn belt farmers denounced the speculator, warned against the unfairness of the exorbitant prices that pure breds were bringing, and the inevitable damage that would come to the swine industry from such a condition.

When prices for pure breds dropped to a low level the speculator was automatically eliminated, and the dirt farmers, who grow their own feed and grow hogs for the pork barrel, stepped in and took his place. The pure bred hog is still in an aristocratic class when compared with grades that dominated the hog lots of the swine belt, but he is out of that exclusive class of domestic animals with prohibitive prices—prices often high enough to take the average farmer's entire bank account to pay for a single individual. All the farmer could do was to take a look at the hogs with polished hoofs, oiled backs, and massaged ears and walk away or listen to the auctioneer cry staggering bids of five figures for a single hog.

Prices of Pure Breds Drop.

Today almost any farmer can afford to buy the same kind of pure breds that were in that prohibitive class a few months ago. In fact, the relation of prices makes it possible for the average cornbelter to replace his herd of grades with pure breds at a small additional cost. In every section where hogs are raised grades have been gradually sent to market, and the breeding pens have been restocked with pure breds during the last ten months.

H. B. Hall of Maple Hill farm, near Clarence, Mo., has a unique way of replacing grades with pure breds and building up a herd of the highest quality at a small cost. His method is so simple and practical that it may be employed successfully by almost any farmer in the corn belt. The system he has followed in handling pure breds on his 320 acre farm in the heart of Missouri has attracted the attention of farmers and expert hog men throughout the state, and within four years he has become known as one of the best breeders of his class in the whole Mississippi valley. His success has been attained within a comparatively short time, for five years ago every hog on his farm was a grade.

As a general live stock judge at community, county, and state fairs, Mr. Hall was able to make a careful study of hogs and hog men, and he came to recognize that the best hogs were usually produced by the farmer who got between the swill pails and took care of the hogs himself.

Began on Small Scale.

Starting out with the belief that the real place for pure bred hogs is in the hands of the farmers who grow them for the pork barrel, Mr. Hall began on a small scale to replace his grades with pure bred Duroc-Jersey hogs. He started with two sows, keeping some of his grade sows so that the results of the grade and pure bred herds might be compared. By the end of the first year he was convinced that pure breds made him more money than grades, even when he sent them to market and received market prices for them.

He kept the best individuals in his herd for breeding purposes, gradually filling up his breeding lots with pure breds and eliminating the grades, a system he has found to be the least expensive and the most satisfactory in many ways for the beginner.

From the beginning he applied the fundamentals in animal breeding that he had learned as a student in the agricultural college of his state. He believed and has been convinced, he says, that size can be bred much cheaper than it can be put on with feed, and he has found this to be true in the breeding of pure bred Hereford cattle as well as hogs.

Blood Lines Must Be Good.

"When I started with pure breds, about the first thing I learned was that I needed two blood lines if I expected to build up a herd successfully," he says. "I started with two sows, and later added a boar to complete my foundation. I began when pure bred hogs were selling at fairly high prices, and I was not satisfied to use anything but animals of good ancestry. If you have good blood lines, you have no trouble in selling your surplus breeding gilts and boars. By having different blood lines you can supply a customer with both sexes."

Another of Mr. Halls' principles is that it pays to adhere to one main blood line. No matter haw good the dominating blood line may be, he says, another entirely different should be used to avoid inbreeding, which often results in weak or deformed offsprings. He has added eight sows and sires from time to time to avoid these difficulties and to get the desired crosses. New blood lines may be added to a herd by either male or female.

In Mr. Hall's system of management he works on the theory that a pure

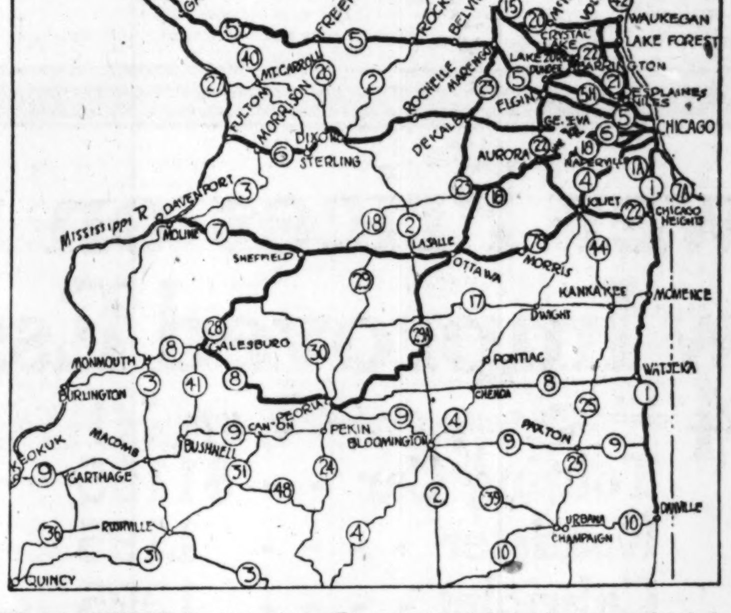
NUMBERED ROADS IN ILLINOIS



DISPATCHING the highway traffic in Illinois is declared by transportation experts to be one of the most important problems faced by the state. To date this dispatching system, which includes the marking of through routes and short routes and the collecting of exact data on the condition of roads for distribution among highway users, has been the work of agencies outside of the state organization. Motorists have had to look to automobile clubs, newspapers, and trail associations for this essential information and service, although the state legislature voted an appropriation months ago for the installation of a complete marking system in connection with the systematic patrol and maintenance of the bond issue routes.

The map above, furnished by the Chicago Motor club, shows in detail the numbering system worked out by the Illinois highway department for state trunk lines in the central and northern counties. Plans for this improvement have been completed for weeks and, it is said, have been delayed only by the failure of Gov. Small to authorize the work. In Chicago the Illinois Automobile club and the Motor club led in the distribution of state highway information.

Numbers in small circles on the map follow the proposed state numbering system, to be uniformly sign posted by the state. The heavy lines indicate roads where the Motor club has followed out the state numbering system by stenciling its own number signs on telephone poles at the side of the road. Twenty-three routes, some of them extending into neighboring states, have been marked in this way.

Among the most important of the state roads are Illinois Route 6, following the paved Lincoln highway from Chicago to Fulton; No. 1, the paved Dixie highway from Chicago south through Danville; No. 4, the partially finished pavement from Chicago through Joliet to Bloomington and Springfield; Nos. 24, 29, 7, and 4 linked up to designate the Chicago-Peoria-Springfield-St. Louis highway; No. 11, the national road from Marshall to St. Louis, and No. 5 the Chicago-Dubuque road.

Movies Aid in Fight for Wide Roads

EMPHASIZING the educational purpose back of its plans for the construction of an "ideal section" at a central point along the transcontinental Lincoln highway, the Lincoln Highway association announces that arrangements have been made with one of the leading motion picture producers of the country to film every stage in the development of the short section of roadway which will be built to specifications and in accordance with plans laid down by the foremost American highway authorities.

The tentative selection of that section of the Lincoln highway in Lake county, Ind., between Dyer and Schererville, as the site for the construction of its object lesson section has been emphasized by the recent securing of a considerable footage of motion pictures, depicting the present appearance of the old road.

Under the personal direction of A. F. Bement, vice president and secretary of the Lincoln Highway association, scenes were recently taken showing traffic on that section, the restricted width of the present road, the inadequate nature of the existing construction, the dangerous and weed choked ditches on each side of the right of way, and many other features which later can be used in contrast to the appearance of the finally completed ideal section, should arrangements ultimately be made for its construction in Lake county.

J. N. Gunn, president of the association, has stated that the primary interest in the construction of the section is to stimulate a wider public interest in more adequate highway specifications.

Motorists Back Project for New Forest Preserves in Lake County

By J. L. Jenkins.

DEEP, vine tangled ravines and wooded bluffs; quiet glens and century old woodlands; exotic lotus beds laid down a stone's throw from 3,000,000 people—all these and more will be lost eventually to Chicago and Illinois unless Lake county takes steps to preserve its unique natural attractions in permanent form.

Revival of old plans to extend the northern Illinois forest preserve belt into the lake land playground came with a rush last week when nature's fall carnival drew thousands of motorists into the Cook county reservations and spilled them over the leagues of picturesque country adjoining the preserve district on the north.

Hundreds of outdoor fans returned to favorite haunts across the county line to find them robbed of half their charm by unrestricted vacation parties, careless timber clearing, and new factory sites. They found much of the splendid shore line north of Waukegan strewn with sign boards advertising its industrial advantages; "keep out" notices barred their way into the Indian summer banquet along some of the north reaches of the Des Plaines river, and abandoned camps spoiled some of the choice retreats in the Fox lake region.

Behind Preserve Plan.

Realization of the steady invasion against nature brought immediate action. County supervisors were asked to reconsider the old preserve district project and to coöperate with Cook county commissioners in extending the present preserves to take in the beautiful stretches of Des Plaines river timber to the north, a large part of the Fox lake district, and the unspoiled height of land along the lake shore. It was pointed out that, in each instance, Lake county attractions could be connected directly with the present preserve system. The west river preserves could be extended to save natural beauties on a line north of Wheeling, linking the river lands with the vacation country surrounding McHenry, while the Glencoe preserves could be advanced to take in all of the lake shore north to the Wisconsin line.

"People in Lake county know they have a national treasure in their lakes and heavy timber growths," declared E. H. Clifford of the Waukegan Chamber of Commerce in indorsing the preserve plan, "and they are ready to coöperate in any way to save these natural beauties for all time. Lack of necessary funds is the only drawback. There are not enough people in the county to carry the financial burden as purely a county project, but I believe that if the preserve plan is given another hearing right now it could be financed in a number of ways. General subscriptions might swing it. Chicago could certainly afford to help on such a project. We are open to suggestions."

Ray Paddock, chairman of the Lake county board of supervisors, also pledged his support to the new campaign.

"We saw the need of forming a preserve district to link up with Cook county three years ago," he said, "and the proposition was put to a vote. At that time it was voted down by a very small majority, simply because people of Lake county could not see their way clear to footing the expense. It is quite a load for 75,000 people to carry alone, but we certainly want to protect and perpetuate our scenic beauties.

Calls for Protection.

"Every year that passes cuts into Lake county's natural attractions. The woods along the Des Plaines river are as fine as any in the country and should be kept intact. One could travel from coast to coast without seeing any greater variety in lake scenery than can be found in the Fox lake district, where every one of the half hundred lakes has its own peculiar beauty, while the 600 acre bed of lotus flowers at Grass lake cannot be duplicated anywhere. It is estimated that more than 10,000 people visited the bed and gathered lotus blossoms in July and August. This bed should be protected against reckless destruction. Tourists are all impressed with the tableland and wooded shores of Lake Michigan from the county line north to Wisconsin, but this land is gradually being cut over."

"The Cook county board of commissioners has no power to aid officially in the annexation or extension of our preserves into Lake county," said President Daniel Ryan, "but we are for it to a man and willing to help in every way possible. Our preserves were visited by about 4,000,000 people this year."

Motorists have taken a more direct interest in the Lake county proposal than ever before as a result of this year's highway development. This year's work has completed the concrete paving on the federal aid "Telegraph road" in the county from the Cook county line north through Deerfield to a point opposite Lake Bluff, where the paving turns east to the Green Bay road and north again to its intersection with Grand avenue at the edge of Waukegan. Paving work is being pushed north of this point to the Wisconsin line. The road already completed and opened to North Chicago offers the most beautiful drive in the neighborhood of Chicago and leads through some of the proposed preserves.

Supt. of Highways Charles Russell has closed the long delayed contract for extension of the Rand road pavement from the Cook county line north to Lake Zurich to eliminate one of the worst stretches of main road hereabouts

MOTORDOM

Now Is the Time to Prepare Car for Hard Winter

Warm Garage Proves Best Cold Weather Motor Protection

BY HIGH SPEED.

THE greater number of car owners will need to operate their vehicles this winter, and unless adequate preparation is made driving will be just one north pole experience after another.

While there are a number of things which need attention, no other is so important immediately as the installation of devices for keeping the driver and passengers warm even in an open car fitted with side curtains. Now is the time to get ready, because as the cold weather comes on it will be more difficult to get help in installing the heating device, and, further, it is anticipated the prices of the devices will be higher. Don't wait until zero weather arrives, but install the heater now, since it need not be put into use until cold weather sets in.

Those who can afford it should by all means fit some sort of a winter top to the open car, but if not that the inexpensive side curtain holders, so that the curtains will open with the door. Inclose the car as best you can with the money you have to spend. The ideal is a permanent top with removable side windows; try to approach that ideal.

There are ever so many types of heaters on the market to keep driver and passengers comfortable. There are electric heaters, heaters which use the exhaust gas, and in another class all those using special fuels which burn like wood or coal. The electric heaters are costly, because the average type uses a heavy current. Also the initial cost of these heaters is greater than that of the others. The heaters using briquettes are the same your grandfather used in his carriage. They are certainly efficient enough, but when the first cost and ease of operation and control of the exhaust type is considered, it is hard to see why any one would want any other type. The exhaust heater, of which there are dozens of designs on the market, is usually cheap in first cost, costs nothing to operate, and may be controlled so that any heat is maintained.

It may seem like a simple matter to install one of these heaters, but quite often the driver finds that after the installation has been made the passengers are likely to be asphyxiated because of the presence of exhaust gas in the compartment. In some cases the heaters are of cheap construction and allow some gas to escape; in other cases the heater is all right, but the installation is poor. The car owner will find many types on the market which may be placed in two general classes—the type in which the heater forms the foot rest and the one in which the heater is mounted on the floor either flush or above it. The question of which design to take is not so important. Get the reliable make, so you will not be bothered with gas leakage.

While on the subject of heaters it might be well to give some advice about garage heaters, for no doubt the car and garage will be taken care of at the same time. Whether the car lies idle, is used part or all the time, a garage heater is essential. For those who do not wish to spend much money the market now affords kerosene heaters properly designed so there will be no trouble from fires or explosions. Then there is the coal heater which feeds automatically so the owner does not have to attend to it as he does the furnace in his home. Gas heaters also may be had in a variety of forms. Before a heater is purchased the owner should find out about the local restrictions on the use of certain types, especially the kerosene burners. He also should arrange to place the heater away from inflammable liquids or places in the garage from which vapors may arise.

There are some types of heaters on the market which perform a double function—that of keeping the water in the radiator warm by heating and circulating it and also heating the garage. I do not believe the results to be had from these types can compare with a well designed coal or kerosene burner with but the single function—heating the garage to a sufficient temperature to keep the water from freezing. There are other means of keeping the water from freezing and an anti-freeze solution is the best, or if you wish you can drain the water, or use one of the handy little electric devices which may be connected with an ordinary electric lamp socket. Bear in mind that a heater is essential for many reasons aside from keeping the water from freezing. If the garage is kept at a uniform temperature there is little chance of the paint cracking because of sudden changes. If it is kept at even, warm temperature, it retains a certain amount of elasticity.

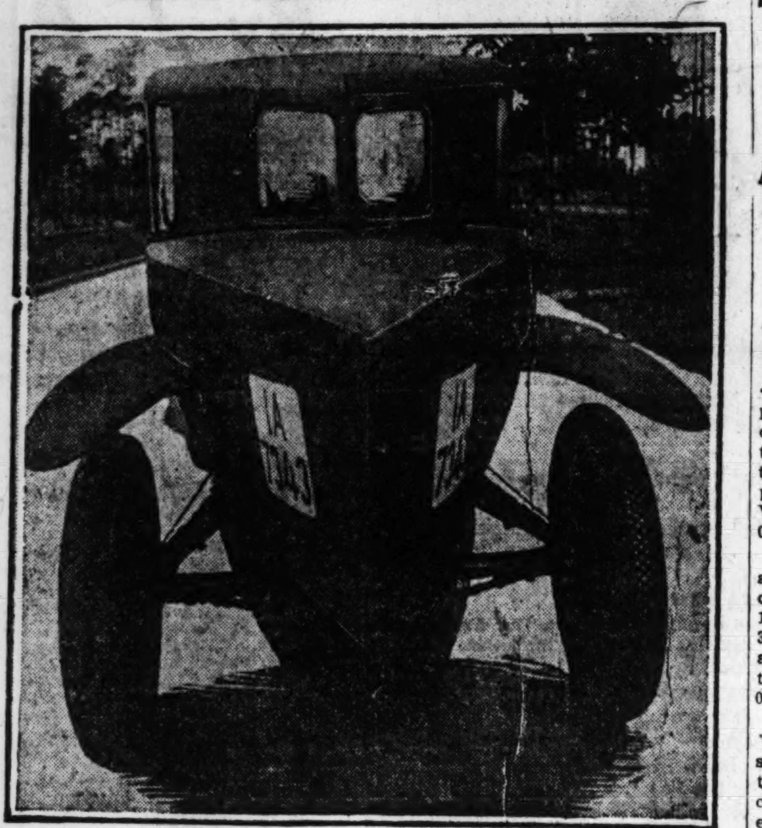
RUNS LIKE A RAINDROP



Consider the latest offering from Herr Rumpler, the German airplane expert, which he claims has an absolute minimum head resistance. He took as his pattern for streamlining the shape assumed by raindrops as they fall through the air. As another unique feature he made a unit of motor and transmission and mounted both to swing above the rear axle, thus eliminating propeller shaft and universal joints. The radiator, too, is behind the motor, and air is used as a cooler.

Motorists Back Preserve Plans for Lake County and reports progress on the paving from Wauconda to Volo. Concrete is already in service from Sherman corners, north of Libertyville, running west through Gray's Lake to Volo to tap the Fox lake district, and grading work is going forward from Lake Villa into the same district. The state has been asked to repave Sheridan road from Lake Forest to North Chicago.

All of these new roads lead into the proposed preserves, where motorists want the privileges of regulated camps, picnic facilities, and all other advantages of organized preserves. Increased property values due to regulated preserves, and the annual revenue from camping parties alone, it is believed, will pay the costs of districting Lake county in five years' time.

BALL BEARING CARE.

Few owners pay the attention to the ball bearings that these latter deserve. They usually wait until the garage man calls attention to the injury done by breakage. At least once in six months ball bearings should be inspected, the rough or worn balls replaced with perfect ones, and the ball run filled with graphite grease.

Caution Vs. Regrets

On approaching a grade crossing, shift into second gear. This will eliminate stalling car on the crossing.

When you overtake and pass a car, do not cut in again until you are about fifty feet ahead of the car you have passed.

Do not pass a vehicle at a highway or street intersection.

Carry extra light globes in your tool box just as you would extra tubes or tools.

Put on your skid chains at the first sign of wet weather.

In wet weather apply your brake with the clutch still in when you start to stop.

Remember that a chain on one wheel only is worse than none at all.

When negotiating a corner or curve, don't jam your throttle on too soon. Bad skids occur in this way.

Approach all crossings cautiously. The worst accidents occur at crossings.

Do not straddle car tracks when driving on slippery streets. Your wheels may jump.

RUBBER CEMENT.

When rubber cement has stood exposed to the air even for a short time it becomes so thick that it does not give good results in application. Many motorists thin cement with gasoline, but the ordinary grades of gasoline contain considerable oil, which has a decidedly adverse action on the cement. High test gasoline or bisulphate of carbon is best to use for thinning.

Southern States Battle Mud with New Bond Issues

Dixie Forges to Front in 1921 Race for Road Supremacy

RECENT provision by the legislatures of North Carolina, Virginia, Missouri, and other southern states for bond issues to provide funds for extensive highway construction, has placed the states of the south far to the front in the matter of good roads. North Carolina has provided a bond issue of $50,000,000; Virginia, $40,000,000; Missouri, $60,000,000.

Texas is already doing a large amount of construction work, having completed 130 new projects involving 1,106.1 miles at a total cost of $7,366,314, and is now building 192 projects at a total cost of $26,955,348. Ninety-two other projects to cost about $4,000,000 more have been approved.

At an expenditure of $3,000,000, the state of Georgia has completed sixty-two new road projects in thirty-six counties. In addition 161 projects in eleven counties, involving an expenditure of $14,000,000, are under way. Plans are being prepared for seventy-eight additional projects in fifty-three counties at a cost of $2,000,000. Fulton county alone will spend $1,000,000.

In South Carolina a good roads association was organized recently with the object of securing at the next session of the legislature a $50,000,000 bond issue for a state highway system. Florida, Georgia, New Mexico, Tennessee, and Louisiana are doing considerable road work, and there is much discussion of the need for better highways in Mississippi, Kentucky, New Mexico, West Virginia, and Alabama.

Pickens county, Alabama, plans to spend $200,000. In Virginia the state highway commission in June let contracts amounting to $1,209,000, and the Arizona state highway commission has approved forty-one projects at a total cost of $6,000,772. Approximately $1,000,000 will be available for good roads in Letcher county, Ky.

Reports show new contemplated bond issues for road building and street paving in southern states as follows: Alabama, $470,000; Arizona, $60,000; Arkansas, $50,000; Florida, $4,605,000; Georgia, $853,000; Kentucky, $995,00; Louisiana, $631,000; Mississippi, $480,000; Missouri, $60,380,000; North Carolina, $6,775,400; Oklahoma, $815,000; South Carolina, $1,709,000; Tennessee, 1,670,000; Texas, $11,201,000; Virginia, $200,000, and West Virginia, $15,727,000.

Valve Lore.

In engines not fitted with special valve stem guide bushings excessive wear of the guide and consequently valve stem side play and oil leakage may be prevented by reaming the guide and fitting a bronze bushing. The bushing may be obtained already machined from any supply house. In fitting the valve should center on the tappet, otherwise there will be a side thrust against the bushing and it will wear eccentrically.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

OWNERS of commercial truck fleets have shown marked interest during the recent safety campaign in the timely sales promotion work of the "Speed Guv-n-r" company of Chicago. The local concern manufactures a speed governing device which prevents excessive speed of any delivery car, truck, or pleasure car when the machine is pulling in high gear. Owners of a number of commercial vehicles have installed the governors in order to conform with safety speed laws.

Charles B. Voorhis, general sales manager of the Nash Motors company, last week announced a reduction of $150 in the price of all models of the Nash four line. These models went into production about a year ago and have met a ready market. The touring car is now $1,045 and the sedan $1,835.

'Gene Silver, general manager of the Chicago Cole company, last week put the finishing touches to a four floor service station which is said to be one of the most complete plants in the state. The addition, built at 2326-28 Indiana avenue, at the rear of the Michigan avenue salesroom, is equipped to render quick service from the replacing of a bolt to the repainting or rebuilding of a car.

The Ansted engine, feature of this year's Lexington "Lark" model car, hung up a new record recently by covering the distance between Los Angeles and San Diego, Cal., in three hours and fifty-nine minutes with its transmission sealed in second gear. The feat required an average speed of 32.53 miles an hour for the entire distance.

Ray M. Hernandez, veteran Chicago tire dealer, has been appointed general district manager for the Howe Tire and Rubber company.

Morris M. Markin, long known to the industry as a body maker, has been elected president of the Commonwealth Motors company. General offices of the company have been moved to 1509 Michigan avenue.

MOTORDOM

National Battle with Car Thieves Cuts Year's Loss

Chicago Leads Both in Autos Stolen and Recovered

THIRTY THOUSAND and forty-six automobiles were stolen in 1920 in twenty-eight index cities of the country, and 21,273 of them were recovered, according to the annual compilation of the National Automobile Dealers' association. The number stolen was 3,012 less than the number stolen in 1919, but was 2,00 more than the number stolen in 1918. In 1918 cars unrecovered were 21 per cent of the number stolen; in 1919 they were 26 per cent, and in 1920, 29 per cent.

Chicago took the lead from New York with the number stolen, although a higher percentage of cars remained unrecovered in New York. New York had 5,179 stolen; Chicago, 5,527. New York recovered only 2,717 of her stolen cars, while Chicago recovered 4,340. Dayton, O., had the unusual record of having recovered more cars than she had stolen.

The Pacific coast cities kept up their yearly good work of recovery. There were 4,877 cars stolen in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, Portland, and Seattle; 4,175 recovered. The unrecovered cars were 16.4 per cent of the total stolen, or approximately 50 per cent of the average for the country. The number of thefts decreased about 10 per cent, while the general increase in the number of automobiles throughout the country was about 20 per cent during the same period. The decrease in the number of thefts is materially greater than would be indicated by the percentages. A considerable part of this decrease is attributed to the deterring effect of the national motor vehicle theft law (the Dyer law), which was put through congress at the instance of the N. A. D. A., and by more stringent laws in the states for the punishment of motor car thieves.

Part of the better showing is due also to vigorous activity of the peace authorities, such as in Buffalo, where Chief of Police Higgins, known as the "youngest police chief in the United States," is making a determined drive against the automobile thieves, and in St. Louis, where the office of the circuit attorney, coöperating with the police department, has virtually put the automobile thieves in the state penitentiary; most of them convicted received long terms, and it is expected that thefts in St. Louis will show a steady decrease from now on.

The subject of theft is being watched vigorously by the N. A. D. A. because theft insurance rates have become so high as to prove a big factor in the resistance to sales of automobiles. It is realized that until thefts are materially checked, little progress can be made in the matter of insurance reductions.

Safety Contests.

More than 200,000 school children are to have a chance to help make southern California the safest territory in America for motoring, according to an announcement just made by the Automobile Club of Southern California. All children in school under the age of 14 are to be given an opportunity to get a trip to the nation's capital at Washington, D. C., and also to aid in the prevention of accidents by writing essays on "How I can make the highways more safe." Grammar school teachers will also be called upon to engage in a safety contest with a reward of $500 and a trip to Washington, D. C., with all expenses paid, for the purpose of preventing accidents in this country.

CARBURETER TROUBLE.

Many cars have no provision aside from the strainer in the tank for keeping out the dirt from the carbureter. Owners of such vehicles will do well to fit a trap in the fuel line. All the big carbureter makers offer these traps, which are to be placed in the line near the carbureter or in the bottom of the tank. The trap catches all the dirt and water and should be cleaned out regularly once a month.

GATEWAY TO YELLOWSTONE

Beautiful Two-Gwo-Tee pass, recently dedicated by Wyoming state and government officials as the doorway to the new southern entrance of Yellowstone park, rises from Wind River valley of frontier days' fame. Hundreds of cars, starting from Denver and drawing trail recruits all along the line, formed the dedication caravan shown in this picture.

Brilliant Fleet of Cars Assemble for Annual Salon

PRELIMINARY announcement of the forthcoming automobile salon discloses the fact that space has already been taken for a larger number of motor cars than were seen at any previous session of this notable exhibition, and that the twenty-three different makes of high grade cars and ten custom body builders now entered is more than twice the number ever before in hand at this early date. The automobile salon will be held at the Commodore, New York, from Nov. 27 to Dec. 3 next, and at the Drake, Chicago, coincident with the National automobile show the latter part of January.

Because of the demand for space at the salon arrangements have been made to exhibit cars in the lobby and on the mezzanine balcony of the Commodore as well as on the entire second or ball room floor. This means an increase of about 30 per cent over the last salon, which itself set a new record for this long established event. There has been no curtailment, however, in the strict rules which limit participation at the salon to the highest priced motor cars and custom built coachwork.

Cars already entered are the following: Brewster, Cunningham, Daniels, Delage, Dorris, Duesenberg, Fergus, Fiat, Lafayette, Lancia, Lincoln, Locomobile, MacFarlane, Mercedes, Minerva, Packard, Panhard, Pierce-Arrow, Renault, Rolls Royce, Stevens Duryea, Sunbeam, and Winton. Space for custom coachwork exhibits has been taken by Brewster, Brooks-Ostruk, Fleetwood, Healey, Holbrook, Locke, New Haven Carriage Co., Smith-Springfield, United Body, and the Walter M. Murphy Co. There will be no separate exhibits of tires or accessories, but all automotive products appropriate for motor cars and custom bodies will be found on the various complete cars shown.

Fifteen of the cars to be exhibited are of American manufacture.

Auto Saving.

Five billion dollars a year saved in time through the use of the automobile, says Clarence A. Earl, president of Briscoe Motors, is a conservative estimate of the actual time saved in the use of the automobile as against other means of every day transportation. Even figuring as low as an hour a day saved per car, this means a daily saving of 9,000,000 hours. Many business men count their time as worth from $5 to $25 an hour. Striking an average of all trades and businesses as low as $2 an hour, you will see that this figures, in a year's time, an actual saving of tremendous volume.

STEERING KNUCKLE PLAY.

The removal of play in the steering knuckle necessitates the installation of new front axle bushings. These are the ordinary bronze bushing type, and after they have been put in place they should be liberally supplied with lubricant in the shape of graphite or grease.

The Inquiring Reporter

He's Out to Find the Truth About Motordom.

THE QUESTION.

Do you think the price of automobile repairs is too high?

Where Asked.

In Grant Park.

The Answers.

Mrs. Lewis Kahn, 5241 Drexel boulevard, housewife—I do not think that repair prices are so terribly high. Our man is considerate and gives us the kind of prompt service that most people are willing to pay for. We try to keep the car in good repair at all times and catch the little things that sometimes grow into big repair bills.

H. J. Bruhn, 3339 Foster avenue, foundry manager — I have a flivver and do my own repairing. I'll say it is cheap enough if you do your own, but if you pay for it, motoring for the middleman would be prohibitive. A few minutes each day with the pliers will help every car and keep it running without expensive repairs.

P. A. Caswell, 6400 Normal avenue, salesman—I think that the man who can afford to run a car today, particularly a light car can afford to pay the repairing prices they are charging. I make most of my own repairs myself. My recent experiences with repairmen have proved to me that repair prices are coming down, like all other prices.

Mrs. M. Chaikeim, 5908 Kenwood avenue, housewife—We do none of our own repairing. What little we find needed is done in a neighborhood garage at prices which cannot be called profiteering. I think it pays to find a good repairman and to stick to him. But more important still—keep your car in as good order as possible by learning to drive properly. It is well to have repairs made the moment they are noticed, too.

Earl L. Fortney, 7230 Yale avenue, salesman—In comparison with other commodities of today, auto repairing is not prohibitive. I believe that many of the old time repair profiteers have been run out of business by the legitimate business men who have entered this field. Now when a man has a repair made, he holds the mechanic responsible for its service.

Saves Work.

The car owner who is handy with tools may find it profitable to replace a number of the grease cups which lubricate important parts of the mechanism by an oil reservoir with leads running to these various parts, such, for instance, as the thrust bearing or throw out collar of the clutch. This oiler should be constructed much like a mechanical oiler, with controls for each lead.

NEWS OF THE NEW

AIDS THE CARBURETOR.

SALVAGE of wasted gasoline is the prime function of the new Pemberthy reatomizer, a carburetor device invented by F. O. Bell of Detroit to solve the motor carbon problem. The reatomizer is installed in the intake manifold where it collects the liquid gas adhering to the walls and sends it through small tubes to the cylinders, where the fuel enters in a highly atomized form. Tests have proved that the attachment affords increased mileage and stops dilution of oil in the crank case.

DEMOUNTABLE CUSHION TIRE.

In its development of a standard demountable cushion element for motor truck wheels the Morand Cushion Wheel company of Chicago has struck a popular note in the highway transportation field. The new truck tire is being used by fire departments, transport trains, and truck owners generally as a replacement for worn pneumatics. It is easily installed and is interchangeable, a service heretofore restricted to the pneumatic field. The local factory is preparing a small demountable pattern to be used on light delivery trucks.

LATE ACCESSORIES.

The Thompson spotlight control, a new Hartford shock absorber, and the Lea Visco-Meter are three newcomers in motordom. The first controls spotlight rays and automatically locks the spot in any desired position. The absorber is a development of the old standard which holds springs normal and keeps the wheels to the road at all times. The new meter shows the driver positively when crank case oil has been diluted and should be changed.

FOR COLD WEATHER.

F. J. Gustave of Chicago offers the latest insurance against winter radiator troubles in a new condensor which catches the steam rising from the radiator cap and sends it back through the cooling system. The device is said to prevent freezing troubles and loss of anti-freeze compounds.

Pulitzer Race to Be Held Thursday; Look for Records

BY MORROW KRUM.

DISPATCHES from Omaha announce that all is in readiness for the Pulitzer race that is to be held there Thursday afternoon. The classic air event of the year has attracted nation-wide interest, and already more than 100 airplanes are reported on the field in the Nebraska city.

The Pulitzer trophy race is a free-for-all speed contest for airplanes. Any type of ship that can fly faster than 140 miles an hour can enter. The race last year was won by Lieut. C. C. Mosley, who flew the army's Verville-Packard. He made an American speed record of 168 miles an hour. The experts who have looked over the entered ships believe that Mosley's record will be beaten this year.

Roland Rohlfs, former test pilot for the Curtiss company, is going to fly the "Texas Wildcat." This is a special built Curtiss monoplane. Rohlfs took the ship to Estampes, France, two years ago to fly in the Gordon Bennett race, but a rough landing field spoiled his chances. The ship is expected to fly faster than 170 miles an hour. Its real speed has never been determined. A twin ship is the "Cactus Kitten," which will be flown by Clarence Combs. Both ships are entered by S. E. J. Cox of Houston, Tex.

There are several other fast ships entered in the contest. James Curran of Chicago will fly the "Chicago," an S. V. A. scout ship owned by Ralph C. Diggins. E. D. Steely of the Aero Club of Utah will fly a Thomas-Morse scout, and Al Johnson of Dayton has entered a German ship of great speed. There are more than twenty-five ships going to compete in this conetst.

Then there is the Larsen trophy contest. This contest is open to any ship that will fly faster than sixty miles an hour, but the fast ships will be entered. The winner of this contest will be the ship that has flown the most miles at the fastest speed and carried the greatest load with the least consumption of gasoline. It is a contest that will bring out the best ships in commercial aviation.

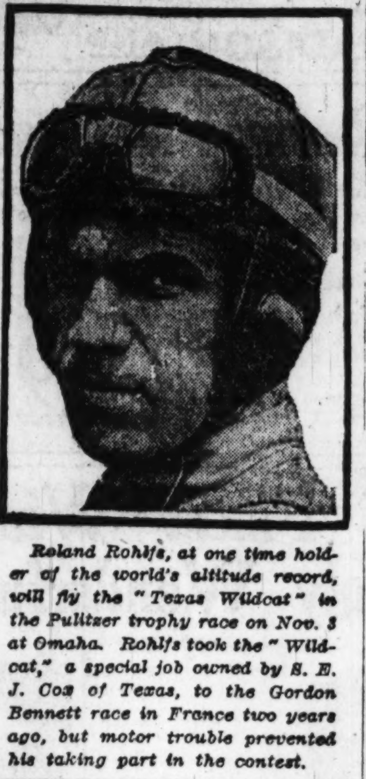
Judge Land's to Attend Pulitzer Race at Omaha

TWO important announcements were made last Thursday in connection with the Pulitzer trophy race that will be held in Omaha, Neb., on Nov. 3.

Judge K. M. Landis will attend the meet. He will fly to Omaha in a Laird Swallow with his son, Capt. Reed Landis, Chicago's ace, and Maj. R. W. Schroeder, former holder of the world's altitude record. Capt. Landis will head the delegation of Illinois aviators who will represent this state at the congress of America's airmen.

On Wednesday Col. H. E. Hartney flew a Thomas-Morse monoplane down the wind at the rate of 233 miles an hour. The speed test of the scout that is entered in the Pulitzer race was held in Ithaca, N. Y. This ship, if it lives up to the record set on Wednesday, will probably win the race.

ROHLFS



Roland Rohlfs, at one time holder of the world's altitude record, will fly the "Texas Wildcat" in the Pulitzer trophy race on Nov. 3 at Omaha. Rohlfs took the "Wildcat," a special job owned by S. E. J. Cox of Texas, to the Gordon Bennett race in France two years ago, but motor trouble prevented his taking part in the contest.

Don't Worry If You See Flying Boat Over Land

BY MORROW KRUM.

THIS summer has given Chicago more flying than any previous season, and Chicagoans are gradually becoming sophisticated in aviation matters. An airplane overhead will hardly draw more than a passing glance from a pedestrian on the street, and the experts assert that approximately 25 per cent of the city's population have at least had one little ride in the air.

There has been greater activity this year in the water type of airplane. In fact, almost every day this last summer saw some sort of a flying boat bouncing along the air lanes over our beaches and lake. The ships were almost as common as the excursion boats.

Now these flying boats have caused much worry. They have, it seemed, ventured too far inland, strayed too far from the water. The man who lives on North Clark street has frowned upon the flying boat that was circling above his house, just as the resident on Englewood has felt a bit unsafe when a big water ship sailed over his back yard. They have complained.

Land ships should stay away from the water and flying boats should stay within gliding distance of the water. There can be no doubt as to the wiseness of such flying. It is one of the first rules of an airman always to have a spot to land within gliding distance.

And that is the point of this story. Good aviators always do stay within reach of their landing field or some suitable spot to land their ships.

Last Monday I was the guest of Walter La Parle, who operates the flying boat at the Edgewater Beach hotel. A young man named John H. Miller was flying the boat, and he was a mighty capable pilot. He took the ship in over the land. Not knowing of the gliding ability of the ship, I was slightly concerned as I saw the water slip away.

Over Graceland cemetery he cut the throttle and turned toward the lake. Long before the ship had lost any noticeable altitude my worries were quieted. He could have landed 300 yards off shore.

"Tell the people not to worry about the boats when they come in shore," said Stevens. "We always fly safe."

It is true that the majority of aviators are young men, but life is just as sweet to them as anybody, and they take few chances in peace flying.

President Sends Armistice Day Note to Heroes' Mothers

By Leola Allard.

PRESIDENT HARDING sent a message yesterday to the Chicago council of gold star mothers, to be read at their Memory tree planting on Armistice day. Mrs. Lillian White, president of the council wrote to the President, and this message came to her:

"To the thousands of gold star mothers throughout the land will go out the deepest and most reverent sympathy and affection of the American people as they gather in a thousand places to celebrate Armistice day. Of all who made the sacrifices in the great cause, none has known the sorrow, none may now feel the stern pride in sacrifice, which are the portion of these mothers who have given their sons. They will ever be assured the gratitude of a nation which understands, which knows what their sacrifice has meant, and which will neglect no opportunity to do them honor.

"WARREN G. HARDING."

Mrs. White's letter to the president had this to say:

"The Chicago council of gold star mothers will plant Memory trees for its hero dead on Armistice day. We want to try to make this day stand out in history as one of the greatest days Chicago has ever known, and, in order to do this, I am asking you if you, our President of the United States, will send a message to the gold star mothers, which may be read to them on that day. Nov. 11 will be filled with more or less sadness for all gold star mothers, whose sons made the supreme sacrifice in the world war.

"We will feel that both you and Mrs. Harding will be with us in thought, if not in person, on that special day. I shall be pleased and will consider it a great favor as well as an honor if you and Mrs. Harding can find time to send a message of some kind to our gold star mothers for this day.

Most of our mothers are long past the half century mark, and will soon pass on to join their gold star sons, so we hope the trees that will be planted on Armistice day in memory of hero sons will thrive and grow to prove that the gold star mothers of America can be brave even though there is a vacant chair in the home.

"While the city of Washington pays a last tribute to the unknown hero, the Chicago council of gold star mothers will also plant a tree for the unknown hero and will offer up a prayer for the unknown gold star mother.

"We are a charitable organization, come together for the purpose of assisting needy mothers or wounded sick soldiers and their families, and there are many who are in need in Chicago."

The Mississippi Valley Highway association at its tenth annual convention at Meridian, Miss., passed resolutions commending the enterprise and patriotism of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in giving a great deal of publicity to the plan of honoring the American soldiers with memory trees, and pledged hearty coöperation in having the plan carried out along the entire Mississippi valley highway at the earliest possible date.

The Ravenswood Kiwanis club held its charter meeting on Thursday night and James Welch of Waukegan, toastmaster, brought out the Memory tree plan, which received praise and promises that will result in much help on the Armistice day task of placing Memory trees on the Chicago-Milwaukee Memory avenue.

The Hyde Park-Woodlawn Boy Scouts, through their scoutmaster, have announced a willingness to plant 1,000 of the Memory trees on Armistice day, provided that is a school holiday.

Oct. 27 is the birthday of Theodore Roosevelt, and the members of the Roosevelt post have announced their intention, through their commander, John G. Little Jr., to plant, if possible, their first tree to his memory on that day.

A CALIFORNIA MEMORY ROAD

CALIFORNIA is one of the leader states in memory tree planting, and one of the favorites for the highways is the eucalyptus tree. The state is growing trees in great nurseries and they will all be given away for memory trees on roadsides. The state cares for them and the highway commission rules the roads. Property owners can't object if they want to.

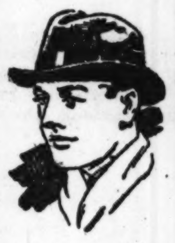
The WELL-DRESSED MAN

Quality Comes First and Prices Follow

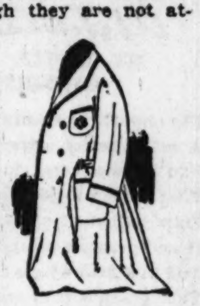
NEW YORK.—Price is quick to wear out of one's mind, but quality is slow to wear out of one's clothes. It is a curious contradiction that some men grudge no sum they may spend upon random luxuries of one sort or another, but are stiff necked in declining to assume any considerable outlay in the plenishment of a wardrobe, which is a social, cultural, and business necessity.

You cannot compute the value of a suit of clothes by mere length, breadth, and thickness. It represents far more than 3¼ or 3⅜ yards of cloth, a handful of linings, and a row of buttons, just as a painting or a statue represents infinitely more than the mere cost of canvas and pigments, chisel and stone. The things you also pay for are labor, artistic perception, technical proficiency, fashion, and good taste, in addition to an indeterminate something which, being priceless, cannot be added to the price, and that is the idealistic impulse to do better than necessary which inspires all creative work from putting stitches into a coat to putting splendor into a cathedral. Don't split hairs or pennies about paying a fair price for fine clothes. They're worth it, and the finer they are, the deeper the worth.

The Lustrous Velour.

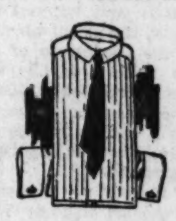


Notwithstanding the fact that the velour is the right hat often seen upon the wrong heads and the wrong occasions, it preserves its vogue among a certain set of men. They are indulgent to it for its luxurious feel and finish. The black velour has been favored of late to accompany informal (tuxedo) evening dress, which has no standard hat of its own. The velour portrayed is a prepossessing shape which is procurable this season, besides black, in seal brown, copper, brass, natural, and dark green, silk or satin lined.



With the resumption of that favorite indoor sport, register hugging, room robes or house gowns will be worn more, though they are not attempted upon this side of the Atlantic to anything like the extent that they are assumed in England and France. There the fine art of leisure seems to be more sympathetically understood and more sedulously practiced. The three-quarter length robe has rather supplanted the full length affair, because it is more trim and engaging. It is designed to be worn over the trousers. The robe illustrated here is three-quarter length of plain or brocaded silk, having satin taped edges, collar, pockets, and sleeves. It fastens with a ditto girdle, which bestows a belted, figure flexing effect in the back. The breast pocket carries an ebroidered monogram.

"Front!" to the Starched Bosom.



Tiring of the long time softness of shirt bosoms, many men, with the advent of waistcoated days, are turning again to starched and plaited fronts of the sort reproduced. Plaiting lends more heft and flatness to the bosom and keeps it from rumpling so readily. Starched single cuffs instead of the familiar double cuffs are also gaining vogue among those who do not follow fashion but, rather, whom fashion follows.

Mufflers having a checkerboard pattern formed by diminutive black and white squares are sometimes to be met with evening dress.

ASTRONOMY

THE NEBULA OF DEATH.

THERE is something appalling and terrifying to the human mind in the thought of utter nothingness. The sea, with its leagues of sky and water, is an efficient barrier to those races of mankind whose imaginations are not vivid enough to cross it in spirit before the voyage is begun in fact.

Space would be another such barrier should we meet it. Nothing! Can your mind encompass the term? Suppose you were by some means transplanted into distant space and there set down far from any star. There would be an utterable lack of everything.

You could not see yourself. No air would be there, not one molecule. There would be no sound. There would be no heat, but only the cruel, never-ending cold of absolute zero. There would be no time. Time denotes duration, but where there is nothing to endure, where change does not exist, the thought of time is meaningless.

Near you there is no matter. Your hand clutches nothing. You feel no weight. Which way does your body lie? It makes no difference—there is no direction. Up or down, right or left, it is all the same. You move your limbs without effort, you run with all your might, you stop exhausted, you have gone nowhere.

Existence is like some nightmare. In spite of all your efforts, you can do nothing. You live your life, and die, but that makes no difference either. Eternal space is death.

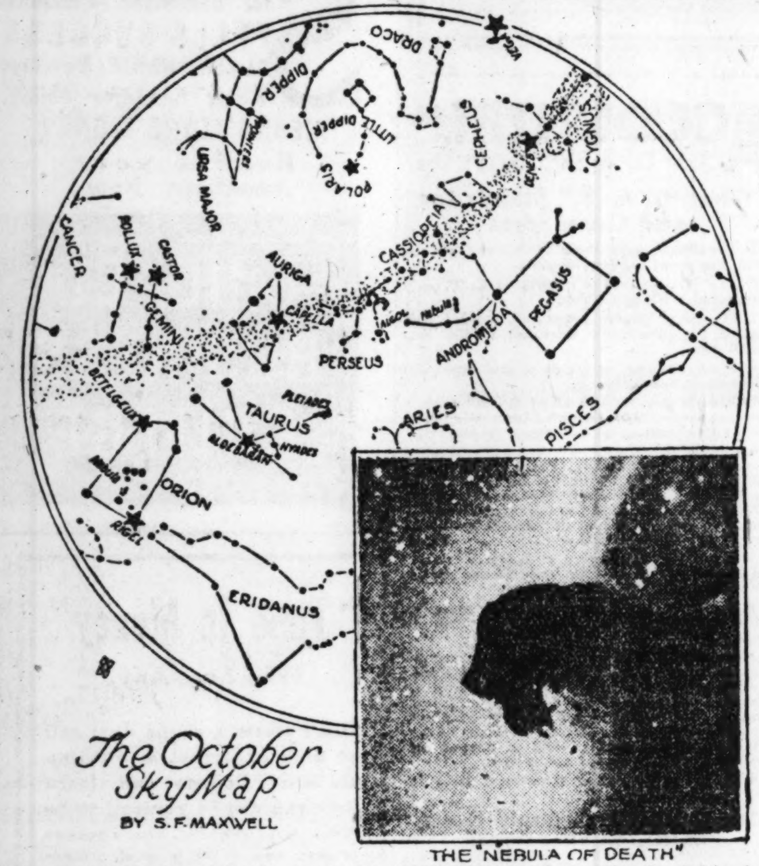
Death? But what is death? Is it the ending of existence? Never! Death is a resting point between two lives, a changing from one condition to another. Out in space there are living suns and dead suns, side by side. The dead differ from the living only in that they are dark. Death is the cessation of activity. Bring energy and the dead stars return to life. One state is as natural as the other.



The October Sky Map

BY S. F. MAXWELL

THE "NEBULA OF DEATH"

Off in Orion, which you must learn to recognize at once, if you do not already know it, is a newly discovered dark nebula. Such clouds, lying in sullen blackness across the skies beyond, are by no means uncommon, but this nebula is blacker and more awful than any ever seen before. What is it? Come with me and we will journey to it through the telescope, for centuries in our fancy, until its dark obscuring shape eclipses all the sky before us.

Around us everwhere are stars. Each one is a sun, like ours. About each one of them are worlds. Some suns hold but few, others are holding many planets. On some of these worlds is life, perhaps like ours, perhaps as different as that world is different. Somewhere, certainly, out there we might find a resting place where we would almost fancy ourselves back home on earth. The living, flaming stars are sending heat and light, which for planets and their inhabitants means life. And only this means life.

Just beyond we enter the dark swarms. There the suns are dead. They give no light. Planets course about them in stygian darkness, worlds like ours, which might once have supported life. Without a steady intake of energy from the star, death rules supreme. Black comets sweep about the black suns, black zodiacal swarms encompass their equators. Perhaps black Saturns lie unknown amid their numbers. Star dust, inert nebula, and shoals of meteors are coursing everywhere. There is only one bond in space which recognizes no difference between life and death. It is the inexorable rule of gravity.

Beyond the cloud we enter regions where this nebula is shining. After the members of the death field have been ground to powder by their own colliding, their dust lies scattered broadcast before the waves of light of other stars. These feeble impulses beat upon each grain, and eventually give it motion, so it shines. Life is returning. There really was no death. As the dust is gathered into stars, as any field of dust will shape itself in space, a new sun grows to life, to run its cycle.

Crank Case Oil Dilution Is Ruining Your Motor!

Get Perfect Lubrication and Stop Paying Repair Bills!
Get a Penberthy Re-Atomizer from Your Nearest Dealer!

Crank Case Oil dilution is an evil common to all motor cars. It thins out lubricating oil and allows the bearing surfaces to grind and wear in a remarkably short time. In fact, you should change your crank case oil daily unless your car is fitted with a Penberthy Re-Atomizer! After a day's run the lubricating value of your oil is ruined.

Present-day gasoline is not as volatile as it formerly was—consequently much of it refuses to burn in your engine. With the compression stroke of your motor a combination of gasoline and kerosene, the world's poorest lubricants, is forced into your crank case—washing away with it all lubrication on your cylinder walls. In a few hours every bearing in your motor is free from oil and subject to grinding wear—soon becoming so worn that even the finest motor runs noisily.

Penberthy Re-Atomizers Were Designed to Combat the Dilution of Crank Case Oil—Thousands Now in Use

Penberthy Re-Atomizers have proved their worth to the most skeptical. Users find that their cars run smoother on account of the even distribution of fuel to the cylinders. Motors have more "pep" and use less gasoline with the Re-Atomizer.

HOW IT WORKS

The Penberthy Re-Atomizer traps the liquid gasoline at the vital point—just as it is thrown against the manifold walls—and feeds it into a powerful air stream, completely re-atomizing it! The Re-Atomizer is easily inserted. You will find it the best investment you ever made if you want to decrease repair bills and keep your car in condition. NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Episcopal Church Observes Mission Society Centennial

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.

THE Episcopal Church in the United States is celebrating this year the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the church's domestic and foreign missionary society, and on next Sunday afternoon the churches in the diocese of Chicago, under the leadership of the Rt. Rev. Charles Palmerston Anderson, D. D., bishop of Chicago, will hold a mass-meeting in the Auditorium at 3:30 o'clock in commemoration of the mission society centennial.

Bishop Anderson will preside over the meeting, at which the principal speakers will be the Rt. Rev. Daniel Sylvester Tuttle and John Stewart Bryan, editor in chief of the News-Leader of Richmond, Va.

A chorus of 500 voices from the leading Episcopal church choirs in Chicago and its suburbs will sing under the direction of Dean Peter Christian Lukin of the Northwestern University school of music. Dr. Francis S. Hemington, dean of the Illinois chapter of the American Guild of Organists, and organist of the Church of the Epiphany for the past twenty-five years, will preside at the organ. The Rev. John Henry Hopkins, D. D., rector of the Church of the Redeemer, will serve as the marshal of the choirs, which will enter in procession, vested as for church services. The clergy and choirs will occupy the stage, officers of the various organization and institutions in the diocese will be seated in the boxes, and delegations from the 108 parishes and missions of the diocese will fill the body of the theater.

"This meeting is designed to be a public demonstration of our gratitude for the work of the domestic and foreign missionary society in the past," says a statement issued by Bishop Anderson and his suffragan, the Rt. Rev. Sheldon M. Griswold, "and a pledge of our loyalty to the church's missions today and in the future."

The Rev. George Craig Stewart of St. Luke's church, Evanston, is the chairman of the committee on arrangements, composed of the Rev. Drs. John Henry Hopkins and George H. Thomas of St. Paul's church and Messrs. Angus S. Hibbard and Courtenay Barber.

Dr. Edward A. Steiner, educator, author, and a nationally recognized authority on immigration, will speak at the Sunday Evening club tonight on "The Mind of Europe." Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, president of Vassar college, will also have a part in the service, and at the 7 o'clock meeting a motion picture version of conditions in the far east, under the title "Alice in Hungerland," will be shown instead of the usual informal Bible talk by Clifford W. Barnes.

The Rt. Rev. Daniel Sylvester Tuttle, D. D., D. C. L. (Camb.), LL. D., "presiding bishop" of the Episcopal church in the United States since 1903, was consecrated first missionary bishop of Utah and Idaho, with jurisdiction in Montana, on May 1, 1867, and was transferred to the diocese of Missouri in 1886. Bishop Tuttle, while en route to his post in the middle west in 1867, rode out of North Platte on the first Union Pacific train which ventured beyond that point, and fifty miles beyond he boarded a stage coach at Fort Sedgwick and, with a Bible in his hands and a rifle across his knees, rode to Salt Lake pursued by hostile Arapahoe Indians.

Last May Bishop Tuttle made a journey retracing his first trip west, and rode into Denver in a stage coach with a Bible and rifle as he had done fifty-four years before.

Bishop Tuttle is a Columbia university graduate, taking his bachelor's degree in 1857, the master's degree in 1860, and his doctorate in sacred theology in 1867. He has been honored with doctor's degrees by Cambridge and Durham universities in England and by Washington university, the University of the South, and Union college in the United States. He is the author of "Reminiscences of a Missionary Bishop," published in 1906, and many pastoral letters to the Episcopal church in the United States as "presiding bishop" since 1903.

"No event of recent years in the ecclesiastical field (of the Roman Catholic church) is of more importance to the archdiocese of Chicago," says The New World, official organ of the church, "than the opening of the new theological seminary, St. Mary's of the Lake, at Area, near Libertyville, Ill., on Wednesday, Oct. 5.

"Although this opening took place quietly and without any special ceremony, the event marks a step forward in the beginning of a new period in the history of the archdiocese. His grace Archbishop Mundelein for some time has bee nengaged in plans for the great university that is to grow from this first department recently inaugurated.

"Heretofore the candidates for the priesthood were sent to other dioceses to be trained, and the Quigley Memorial preparatory seminary made provision for the secondary education of boys who aspired to the priesthood. The archdiocese, however, was dependent on other dioceses for the highest and most important of all its educational functions, the training of its own candidates in the higher faculties of philosophy and theology.

"So the opening of St. Mary's of the Lake seminary is an event of great significance in the growth of the archdiocese. Only those who have visited the new institution—the Philosophy hall and dormitories are completed—that has been building at the little inland lake at Area can realize the magnitude of the undertaking, the largest enterprise ever undertaken at one time by a Roman Catholic diocese in the United States."

The federal council of the Churches of Christ in America, representing thirty-two denominations, met recently to plan an important executive meetting, which is scheduled to meet in Chicago Dec. 14 to 18. The Chicago Church federation will act as host for the coming meeting. Dr. Herbert L. Willett of Chicago presided.

* * *

Women from nineteen interior states will be in Chicago Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday to attend the annual meeting of the woman's board of missions of the interior (foreign mission board of the Congregational church), to be held in the New First Congregational church, Washington and Ashland boulevards.

Henry P. Crowell was reëlected president of the Moody Bible institute at the annual meeting of the board of trustees. Former Judge McKenzie Cleland was reëlected vice president and Bryan Y. Craig secretary.

The report by Dean James M. Gray on the institute's school year ended Aug. 31 showed a total enrollment for the year in the day and evening classes of 2,495 students, representing forty-four states, twenty-five foreign countries, and twenty-two different religious denominations. Forty-three students sailed for foreign fields during the year under various denominational and independent boards.

The year's work by the students throughout the city included about three-quarters of a million tracts and gospels distributed, 46,675 visits to hospitals, jails, etc.; Sunday school classes taught, 26,542; religious meetings conducted, 61,066, and 8,273 professed conversions.

Slams of Life

by J. P. McEvoy

MY LITTLE ANTIQUE CONNOISSEUR.

For one whose scanty years preclude
A ratiocination shrewd,
You have a keen, judicious sense
That mocks hypocracy's pretense—
Your judgment of the rare antique
Is comprehensive and unique,
And in a field where most would grope
Your grasp is firm and wide your scope.

Most connoisseurs merely look
For treasure trove of print or book
Or pottery, furniture, or lace
Of ancient air and artful grace;
But you preëmpt a special field
In which to none the palm you yield.
What do you care for Chinese jars?
You specialize in Kiddy Kars.

All over Highland Park you roam
For Kiddy Kars to pedal home,
And only Kars of ancient hue
And antique cast appeal to you—
O, countless trips each week I make
To redistribute what you take,
And sooth the neighborhood dismay
For Kiddy Kars you've swiped away.

I'd be the last to tut or pooh
Discriminatory taste in you,
But taking Kiddy Kars in hordes
Is but a step to taking Fords—
And if you start collecting those
Your finish only the jury knows—
So change your predatory view
Or I'll tell Highland Park on you.

Annually use these tablets of organic iron—Nuxated Iron—to build up red blood, strength and endurance.

There are thousands whose bodies are ageing and breaking down at a time when they should be enjoying that perfect health which carries defiance to disease simply because they are not awake to the condition of their blood. By allowing it to remain thin, pale and watery, they are not giving the natural life forces of the body a chance to do their work. Iron is red blood food and there is no better means for building the red blood corpuscles and helping to give increased power to the blood than organic iron—Nuxated Iron. Nuxated Iron comes in tablet form only and does not contain any ordinary metallic iron but only the finest quality of pre-digested organic iron which is easily assimilated by the blood.

FARM and GARDEN

Pure Bred Hogs Replacing Grades in Middle West

bred herd on a grain and live stock farm such as his should be handled just as the grade herd is handled. "I try to keep the size of my pure bred herd about like that of the grade herd I used to have," he remarked. "I do not believe the average farmer should specialize in the growing of pure breds and neglect any other phase of his work on the farm. If he has been in the habit of keeping a dozen grade sows, he should be able to keep a dozen pure breds without any extra trouble or expense. It takes a little more money to start with bure breds, but my foundation herd has already paid for itself several times, and a farmer can get pure breds now at prices many times lower than they were at the time I started four years ago."

Here's a Common Mistake.

One of the most common mistakes among farmers who raise pure breds is that they expect too much, according to Mr. Hall. "You cannot expect every pig in the pure bred litter to become a breeding animal," he said, "and this fact has caused a great deal of misunderstanding about the pure bred business. You cannot expect them all to be breeding animals.

"I cull my litters close every year, much closer than I cull grades, and I find that the percentage of breeding animals from a pure bred litter is much higher than I ever got from grades. It was a big surprise to me when I marketed my first bunch of cull pure breds and found that they carried more flesh than grades of the same age, besides the quality of the finish was much higher and they fattened much more rapidly.

Keep Best for Breeding.

"After marketing my cull pure breds I have my best gilts and boars left for breeding purposes. Some I keep for my own use and the rest I sell. I never have any trouble in selling my surplus. Even this fall, when money is hard to get, I find a growing demand for pure breds, and the prices they are selling for now are in reach of every farmer who is able to keep hogs. I like to make private sales rather than public auctions, because this eliminates the cost of a sale and I can make better prices to my neighbors.

"On Oct. 13," he writes, "I sold practically all of my surplus—thirty-six gilts and three boars—for $10 and $20 a head more than they were worth on the market. They were all sold privately. The boars brought me from $25 to $50 each and the gilts ran from $25 to $35 each. Public auctions during the last few days have been averaging about $30 for gilts and $20 for boars."

Likes Private Sales.

More than 600 pure bred pigs have been farrowed within the last four years on Maple Hill farm, and all of Mr. Hall's surplus breeding animals have been disposed of through private sales. Most of them are now on neighbors' farms within a radius of a few miles from the Hall farm. By close coöperation among neighbors a community can soon become recognized by other hog men, and this, he says, has much to do with atttracting buyers from other parts of the state.

Add Legumes to Silage to Increase Proteins

DEAN ALFRED VIVIAN of the College of Agriculture, Ohio State university, has found more good things about mixing legumes with silage, which emphasizes the need of an increased acreage of soy beans, clover, and alfalfa in the corn belt. He says that the addition of one load of soy bean roughage to each two loads of corn in making silage increases the protein content of the silage at least 50 per cent, and makes it possible to decrease the grain ration at least one-half. It becomes more important when the feeder realizes that such silage combined with legume hay makes it possible to winter live stock in the breeding herd on roughage alone, without the use of concentrates.

"Aside from their value as fertilizers, legumes are our cheapest source of protein," Dean Vivian said. "A good legume hay contains about three times the protein of a nonleguminous hay; in fact, it will contain the average amount of digestible protein required by the growing animal. The proteins of legumes more nearly take the place of animal proteins than those obtained from cereals."

Because of their lime content, legumes are important in the building of the bony structure of the animal's body and are therefore valuable feed for growing live stock. Clover, alfalfa, and soy bean hays contain from five to six times as much lime as timothy hay, according to Dean Vivian, and legume hays are rich in vitamines, while hays made from true grasses contain little.

H. B. Hall of Maple Hill farm, Clarence, Mo., has a system of replacing grades with purebreds which has attracted the attention of farmers and hog men throughout the corn belt.

Southern States Ready to Desert One Crop Policy

COTTON belt states of the south are seeking coöperation with live stock breeders of the middle west, according to Eugene Arnett of Oklahoma City. The southwesterner has a plan to prevent insolvency of live stock breeders and cotton growers.

Oklahoma, he declares, is setting a precedent in breaking away from the one crop plan that has prevailed in the south for so long and is going in for the raising of live stock. The banks are to advise and help the farmers in this enterprise.

Can Raise More than Cotton.

"The farm lands of the southern states are admirably adapted to the grazing of all classes of live stock," said Mr. Arnett. "Now, only cotton is raised there, but by planting such crops as will supply feed for cattle, the soil will be greatly enriched, and more cotton can be grown."

The Oklahoma farmer is a cotton grower primarily and is not ready to go into the new game until he has become more familiar with the raising of live stock and crops to feed them. Government experts and the agricultural colleges are helping to train the farmer in his future problems, but Mr. Arnett says that most of the training and teaching will be brought about by the banks.

Farms Without a Cow.

"When the farmer comes in at the end of the year to borrow for the next year's cotton crop, the banker will say, 'We're not going to grub stake any more cotton business,'" Mr. Arnett said. "Then he will advise the farmer to consult the men of the agricultural college and other experts. In a short time the farmer will come back with the proposal to get ready for more diversified farming."

Plantation owners and tenants will be persuaded to buy at least one cow—many of them have no milk cows, according to the Oklahoman—and a few pigs. The experts will advise him what to raise to feed the live stock. When he has reached this stage, the southern farmer will be in the market for some pure breds from the middle west and northern states, and it is believed that breeders within 250 miles of any of the cotton states will profit by looking forward and planning to meet the needs of the southern farmer in the future.

Banks Back Project.

"We want to forewarn the breeders," Mr. Arnett added, "not to sell his pure bred calves to the butcher this year for veal, but to hold them a year. We want to buy the surplus live stock of men with small herds. We are willing to pay three times the market price. And we want cattle two years old, because animals younger than this suffer when shipped to a different climate.

Eighty-nine per cent of the Oklahoma banks are back of this project, which was worked out by the aid of H. W. Mumford of the farmers' live-stock committee of fifteen, according to Mr. Arnett.

Eight More Roads Cut Limestone Freight Rates

The reduction in limestone freight rates made by the Illinois Central and Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroads a few weeks ago has been acepted by eight other railroads, and now is practically state-wide, according to an announcement from the phosphate-limestone department of the Illinois Agricultural association.

HYDRO-TORON

Guaranteed 10,000 Miles Against Stone-Bruise, Rim-Cut, Blow-Out

No Extra Charge for Extra Worth

HYDRO-UNITED TIRE CO

Planned and Executed by Albee Corporation
Chicago Detroit

Hydro-Toron tires are oversize, but not over-priced.

They are made by the wonderful Internal Hydraulic Expansion process, which prevents the hidden defects that later show in stone-bruise, rim-cut and blow-out, but no penalty is exacted of the buyer for this great extra value.

Big as cords—better than cords—guaranteed for 10,000 miles against stone-bruise, rim-cut and blow-out! And sold at standard fabric prices by the reliable dealers whose names appear below:

They include the Toron (no-rot) chemical process of treating fabric—which gives the fabric greater tensile strength, greater holding power, increased affinity for rubber, and resistance against the action of water and weather—yet this means no extra cost.

Proved service on thousands of cars in the Chicago territory is substantiating every word we can say for these reasonably-priced, fearlessly-guaranteed tires.

Ask for Hydro-Torons next time.

SUBDIVISION SALES MANAGER.

An opportunity that is seldom offered is waiting for a live wire Subdivision Sales Manager. We are one of the oldest, largest, and most progressive real estate concerns in Chicago. We believe so thoroughly in the future of the real estate business in Chicago that we have recently doubled our already large organization by adding a new department on the second floor. A Sales Manager's position with us is a real big job and an opening like this should be of vital interest to the best subdivision managers in Chicago.

Your future is assured with us. We have, without a doubt, the most successful and best paid sales organization in Chicago and we are proud of it. Our men can't help making money—we give them more advertising, more real co-operation than any other firm in Chicago.

We are looking for a successful Subdivision man who values his future. I want to emphasize one point: the man whom we accept is set for life and should be worth not less than $100,000 in ten years. No guess work about this. Two of our men started with us ten years ago and are still with us, one now worth double this amount, and neither one ever sold anything before. I'm not trying to "kid" you. Every word of this Ad is a fact. I want to convince you that this is not an everyday opportunity. We have more property for sale than any other three real estate firms combined and we do more advertising than our four nearest competitors combined. We now have on the market thirty subdivisions on every line of transportation in Chicago at less than half the price our nearby competitor is selling for. I don't care what firm you are now selling for, the chances are we have property near by at about half your prices.

To be successful in securing this position you should have been a resident of Chicago at least two years, drive your own car and should have above all a pleasing personality, be a convincing talker, and possess a reasonable amount of native aggressiveness.

If you are looking for a permanent position with a real future and can measure up to our qualifications, come in and see me personally.

FRANK A. VANERSTROM, Gen. Mgr.,
Suite 15, Second Floor,
106 N. La Salle-st., cor. Washington.

Louisiana.

NEW PLAN

Dairy farms, cattle, sheep, goat, and hog ranches of all sizes in the fine cutover lands of the rich states of Louisiana and Mississippi, contiguous to N. O. G. N. Ry., and carefully selected under expert advices with reference to flowing streams, ranch headquarters, feeding, herding and breeding grounds, farming lands, and shipping facilities. Land at extremely low prices and payments extending over long period of years, so that payments per acre per year amount to little more than interest on purchase price and on ordinary leasing charge for grazing purposes, and yet at end of payments you own the land. Write Walter S. Ayers, Industrial Commissioner, N. O. G. N. Ry., 649 McCormick Bldg., Chicago, Ill., for dependable information.

LAND ON CREDIT

AMERICA'S POPULATION in 1930 will be nearly double what it was in the year 1900. No more land can be created. Land values will increase accordingly.

A DOLLAR put away for safe keeping six years ago is worth fifty cents in buying power today. A dollar put in good agricultural land six years ago is worth from $2 to $3 today.

ACT NOW and get some of AMERICA'S LAST BEST LAND while it can be had. We are selling excellent hardwood clay loam land in tracts of 80, 40, and 20 acres at $15 to $35 per acre, depending upon location and other advantages. These lands are in a neighborhood of good hard roads, R. F. D. routes, telephone lines, good schools, churches, good local market towns, and excellent railway transportation to the big markets of the country.

BY A SMALL DOWN PAYMENT and easy terms you can start a purchase at once instead of waiting until spring when prices will advance another notch, because of the large amount of improving and developing.

OPENING WEEK of a real

VALUE GIVING SALE

on high grade guaranteed

FUR COATS

We intend to take Chicago by storm with unheard of values. We want not only to keep the factory employes busy but to hire additional men and women. We want to help keep silk mills busy with linings and fur trappers busy in the great north. We want to speed up retail selling, to force employment up and prices down!

There is no slump in business when you have the right goods at the right price.

We offer for the next two weeks only, at actual cost of material and labor:

Genuine Alaskan Seal Dolman, finest quality, full skin	$375.00
Hudson Seal Coat (below knee length), trimmed with marten collar and cuffs	205.00
Genuine American Mink Coat	350.00
Jap Mink Coat	125.00
Coney Coats (while they last)	15.00
French Seal Coats, trimmed with marten collar and cuffs, 40 in. length	98.00

We are not going to tell you how much more they are worth. That we will leave to your imagination, so
AT THIS POINT STOP YOUR EYE AND START YOUR MIND.

If you are in the market for a fur coat you will lose money if you do not investigate the values we are offering for this week.

Our shop is convenient, in the Consumers Building, at 220 So. State-st., just south of Adams-st. We are on the second floor, and we would like to have you drop in and look us over even if you do not feel like purchasing a fur coat immediately.

We are going to get ourselves introduced to Chicago fur coat buyers who appreciate real values. We figure that the best card of introduction to you Chicago people is a price list on high grade merchandise which is lower than you can find elsewhere.

You had better come in to see us before some friend of yours begins to tell YOU what wonderful values we have. Come in, compare our goods and prices with others, and let yourself be the judge.

This week we are offering a special lot of new goods. Because we had the ready cash we were able to buy an especially fine lot of merchandise at an unusually low figure. We plan to close out this particular lot by the end of the week and therefore are making the price particularly low. Look at these prices.

We claim to make a smaller profit per coat than any other store in Chicago, and we keep our selling expense and all overhead charges at a very low figure.

We carry a sufficiently large assortment to please any taste or any purse. Just now our stock is larger than usual because we were able to pick up this special lot of coats at a low figure.

NO ONE CAN SELL FURS of the same quality as cheap as we can—naturally you think it's easy to say so, but you'd like to know why.

Well, first of all, we're actual Makers—we don't offer you furs by the "roundabout" route—we buy skins direct from trappers or the U. S. Government. We make what we sell, saving you all the middleman's PROFITS.

The price you pay us is the actual cost of the raw skins, the manufacturing cost, and only one fixed percentage of profit.

We have but one selling price—and that the best it is possible to sell at.

Aren't we entitled to your consideration? You can readily see that you won't be doing yourself justice if you don't.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

HOUSEWIVES IN 'GARLOW' COLONY PRAISE SCHEME

New Housing Project Now Well Under Way.

Richard Cramer's project is the biggest idea in housing in Chicago today. —Comment by Frank W. Blankley, residence manager of William E. Harmon & Co., subdividers.

BY AL CHASE.

If you're ever down on the south side in the neighborhood of Calumet and South Park avenues and 81st and 83d streets, you'll notice forty-five attractive little bungalows, with face brick fronts, trellises, pergolas, and various kinds of ornamentation. And if you're observing you'll also notice and wonder why they're all set at the back of the lots.

It's that placing of these nifty little homes that makes this story worth repeating, for, according to several real estate men, Richard Cramer, the originator of the idea on a large scale, has done something which ought to help considerably to solve the housing problem.

All the Comforts of a Flat.

Of course, we've all heard about occasional instances of home builders living with few if any comforts and absolutely no luxuries in their garages until they could finance their permanent homes. Most of these have been in distant suburbs. But it remained for Mr. Cramer, a young real estate man, formerly with William E. Harmon & Co., to discover that principle can be worked out on a big scale—and made to pay.

A trip through several of the forty-five new buildings discloses all the comforts—and none of the discomforts—of the modern flat. Hardwood floors, kitchenettes, bathrooms, indirect lighting, and all the rest. The buildings look like square bungalows. But there's an eighteen foot steel I beam snugly hidden away on the side facing the alley and when the owner gets his garage home paid for and is ready for a permanent home on the front part of the lot, out comes the back wall and in go large doors. All the ork floors, bathroom fixtures, lighting fixtures, in fact the entire inside of the garage, will be used in making the two flat or larger apartment building on the front of the lot.

They all Like 'Em.

"Five families already have moved into their 'garlows'—we get that from the first part of the word garage and the last of bungalow—and Mrs. Cramer and myself make up one of the five," said Mr. Cramer. "And every one, including Mrs. Cramer, is tickled to death with the idea. It's going so big that I figure on having 100 more building by next spring.

"The lots are 30x150 and the garlows are in two sizes: 20x25 and 25x28. The tenants have the interior walls put in the way they want them. Some have five and some four rooms."

The garlows sell for $3,400 and $4,150, which includes the lot. Mr. Cramer says his terms vary with the person. He won't consider some people at all. If a man looks like a good prospective resident of the garlow community, but can't afford a big initial payment, the terms are made easy. They have been made as low as $400 down and $35 a month.

What the Housewives Say.

How the scheme may develop is hinted at by some comments of garlow housewives. "We like it so much that when we get our two flat building finished on the front of the lot, we'll probably stay right here and rent out the apartments," said one.

"We figure we can rent our garlow later on for a garage for at least $20 a month and that'll pay the interest on a $4,000 investment," explained another.

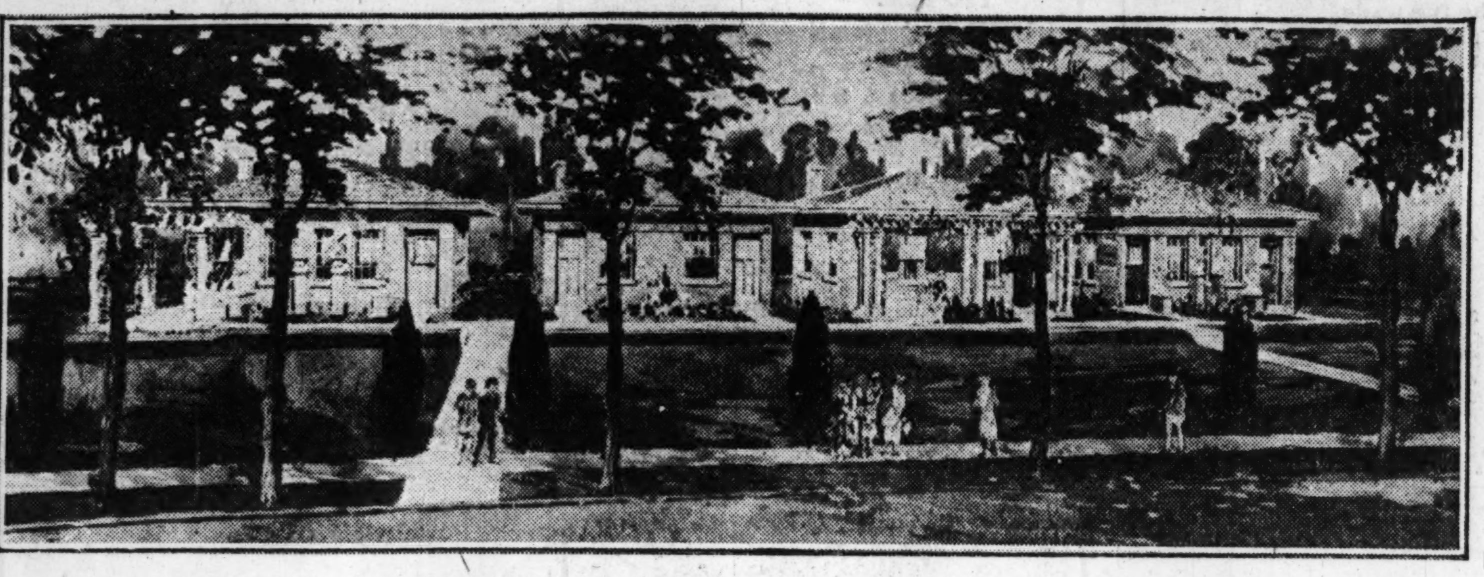
"We need a home more than a car and we've got the home first—even if eventually it'll be used to house the car," said a third.

All of which seems to, prove that Richard Cramer's "garlow" idea is a good one and worth copying.

VACANT CORNERS TRADED FOR FLATS.

Three Albany Park vacant corners were given in part payment for the twenty-four flats at 3925-33 North Keeler avenue purchased by W. O. Olsen from Dr. R. R. Ferguson for an indicated $90,000, subject to $38,000, through Beesley & Kirmaier.

CHICAGO'S NEWEST WRINKLE IN HOUSING—THE "GARLOW"



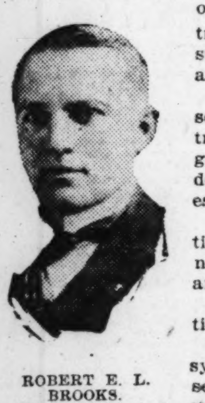
Above are some "garlows"—combination garages and bungalows; that is, they're bungalows now, and later on they'll be converted into honest to goodness garages capable of holding either a Rolls Royce or ford or anything in between. Architect Edward George McClellan designed them and Richard Cramer is father of the scheme. Mr. Cramer and his wife believe so much in their project that they recently moved into a garlow. According to Mrs. Cramer, 1,500 persons tramped through their unique home last Sunday to see what a garlow really was like.

SAYS TORRENS SYSTEM SAVES TIME AND MONEY

Expert Tells Students of New Method.

Below is the fourth lecture in the series being delivered by realty experts before the class in real estate of the Y. M. C. A. commerce school, under the auspices of the Cook County Real Estate board. It is on the Torrens system and was given by Robert E. L. Brooks, president of the Cook County Real Estate board in 1916 and 1918. William H. Loehde will discuss "The Real Estate Board—Its Relation to Broker and Owner," on Tuesday evening.

BY ROBERT BROOKS.



ROBERT E. L. BROOKS.
[Walinger Photo.]

Three of the most important advantages of the Torrens system over the old methods of transfer by abstract and guaranty policy are:

1. The greater security given to transfers, mortgages, and other dealings in real estate.
2. Saving of time and labor in negotiating sales and loans.
3. Economy in title expense.

The abstract system gives no security whatever, other than an attorney's opinion, to buyer or lender of money on real estate; the title may be contested at any time; it doesn't protect him against mechanics' liens, judgments, dower rights, or the rights of insane persons, of persons under disability, or of parties in possession; whereas the Torrens certificate gives you the protection of a decree of court which is incontestable after two years; also the protection of the indemnity fund from which all injured parties may recover.

Fund Protects Torrens Users.

This fund is built up by the users of the system under a provision of the land registration act which empowers the registrar to collect one-tenth of 1 per cent of the value of all property registered, and which fund is invested by the county treasurer in bonds. In passing I might say that although the system has been in operation almost a quarter of a century and property to the value of nearly $500,000,000 has been registered, claims for losses by users of the system allowed and paid out of this fund were less than $2,500 down to Jan. 1, 1921.

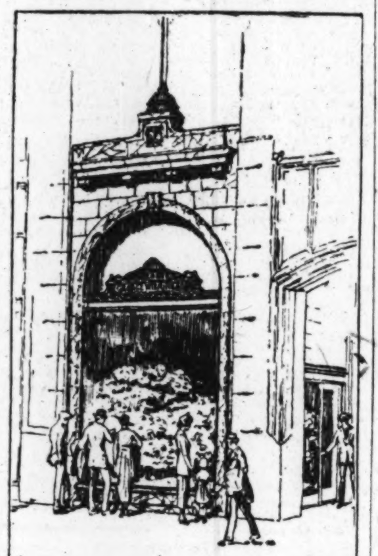
Time consumed in an initial registration proceeding is usually from forty to forty-five days, unless there are adverse claims, which result in a contest, and as over 90 per cent of all titles are free of any serious defects a great majority of initial registrations may be completed in from five to six weeks.

Saves Time and Money.

Once the property is registered under the system, transfers and loans may be consummated in from twenty-four to forty-eight hours at an expense of only $3 to the buyer or borrower. After title is once registered the owner is under no further expense to transfer title, even though he owns any number of pieces of property, provided he keeps them clear of incumbrances, judgments, tax sales, or other other liens. Under the old abstract and guaranty policy system it requires from two to six weeks, oftentimes much longer, to complete a transfer or loan, with innumerable objections to be removed.

In the matter of economy the Torrens system effects a saving of 90 per cent over the old abstract system. The cost of initial registration of a property valued at $5,000 is usually from $30 to $35. Once registration is completed, a transfer or loan costs only $3, regardless of the value of property transferred or amount of money loaned. The release of a mortgage, tax sale, judgment, or other lien is $2. The cost of an original abstract of title usually runs from $100 to $500, and continuations thereon covering a sale or loan will usually run from $25 to $50. An original guaranty policy for $5,000 will cost $70 and continuation thereon from $20 to $100.

Add Building Boom



BOUL MICH believes in superlatives. Last week details were given out about one of the avenue's greatest building projects. And now we have an announcement of one of the smallest structures in the loop, fronting ten feet on the boulevard, to be only eighteen feet high.

Work started yesterday on this diminutive structure from plans by Jarvis Hunt, associated with Holabird & Roche. It will be tucked in between the Michigan Boulevard building, now called the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank building, and the Ward building. It will be known as 28 North Michigan avenue and will be 103 feet deep. It is being built by George V. Weinhoeber, florist, who has leased the site for seven years at a term rental of $63,200. The entrance will be through the Peoples Bank building.

The ten feet between the two larger buildings was originally dedicated as a private alley, but, by agreement the dedication has been vacated. The lease was negotiated by Clark & Trainer and Frank Slosson of John P. Hooker & Co.

Weeghman Plans Cafes in Outlying Neighborhoods

Charles Weeghman's fifteenth Chicago restaurant and his first of a series to be installed in outlying districts is announced for 6319-21 South Halsted street, where he has leased the store and basement from the Quinn Cafeteria company, through Joseph O. Kaplan, for fifteen years, at a term rental of $130,000. Mr. Weeghman has just secured two leases in New York City. Other recent out of town leases have been made in Kansas City, Cleveland, St. Louis, Boston, and Detroit.

Sisters of Mercy Buy Farm from Plamondon Estate

And Now They'll Bring a Suburb to Your Flat and Show It to You

If you've been thinking of how fine it would be to have a house and garden in a suburb—Glen Ellyn, Wheaton, Lombard, Elmhurst, Brookfield, La Grange, or Hinsdale, for instance—but haven't the time to spend visiting all these places to see which you like best, why, just have these seven towns brought to your flat and look 'em over.

That's the newest thing in selling suburban real estate. Rollo Shanks & Co., who operate in these seven western suburbs, discovered that prospective home owners wanted to see more than just a picture of a house. They wanted to know what the towns were like.

So Mr. Shanks bought a moving picture machine and hired an expert and set him to work putting his home town, Glen Ellyn, on a strip of celluloid. Two reels have been completed, and they show Glen Ellyn's attractive lake, its picturesque library, its wooded lake park, its business district, all its schools and churches, and every house that Mr. Shanks is offering.

He expects to get lists of dissatisfied tenants who have been in the renters' court and send around salesmen and picture machine operators with a compact projection machine. If a flat tenant thinks he'd like to see what Glen Ellyn looks like the operator puts up his machine and flashes the town on a screen. The six other towns will be carried about in tin boxes and all shown as desired. As fast as houses are sold they'll be cut off the reel and pictures taken of new houses as soon as Mr. Shanks has them to offer.

WOODLAWN CAFE TO MAKE WAY FOR 8 STORY BANK

Another of Chicago's best known cabarets is to make way for a modern office building. It was announced yesterday that plans are under way for a $500,000 eight story structure to take the place of the Woodlawn café at the southwest corner of Cottage Grove avenue and 63rd street.

It will be built by the Washington Park National bank, now at the northeast corner of 63rd and Evans avenue, a block west of the new site. The bank will use the lower floors and the upper stories will be rented for offices. Wrecking the Woodlawn may not begin until late next year. The new building will front 100 feet on the Grove and 125 feet on 63rd. With the exception of the I. C. general offices, a mile east, this will be the tallest office building in that part of the city.

News of the Architects

Loewenberg & Loewenberg, architechts and engineers, have moved from the National Life building to the Harris Trust building. New phone Central 4040.

The proper relationship of the architectural profession to fire prevention will be discussed by Chief McDonald of the Chicago fire department at the October meeting of the Illinois Society of Architects Tuesday evening in the clubrooms in the Art institute. There also will be an illustrated lecture by C. J. Hogue on west coast logging and lumber manufacturing operations.

BUCK PRIVATES RENT CLUBROOMS.

The Buck Privates' society, A. E. F., now at 125 North Clark street, has leased space on the eighth floor of the Labrador building, 59 East Adams street, from Nov. 1 at $2,400 annually, through the Hool Realty company.

HARPER BROTHERS SUBLEASE SPACE.

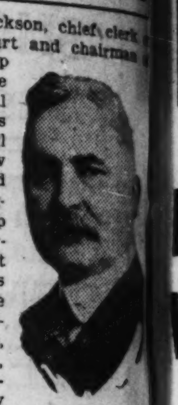
COOK COUNTY REALTY BOARD BEGINS BIG MEMBERSHIP DRIVE



SAMUEL E. ERICKSON.

Samuel E. Erickson, chief clerk of the Superior court and chairman of the membership committee of the Cook County Real Estate board, has planned and will launch tomorrow what it is claimed will be the biggest membership drive ever undertaken by that body. The plans are laid along the lines of the Liberty loan drives, "organization, education, and solicitation." Every member has been sent a "kit" by special delivery and has been asked to see five nonmembers. A goal of 500 new active members has been set. All unaffiliated brokers, that is, licensed brokers who are not members of any real estate organization, already have been circularized and extended an invitation to join the board.

Beg Your Pardon

In yesterday's building permits supplied THE TRIBUNE through the City News bureau, there were several errors in reporting the project at 11 South Morgan street. A. V. Capraro is architect, not mason, as given. The building is a two story garage, store, and office building, not a one story brick residence. Bottigliero & Spilla are contractors.
